"Summer" Finds For Antique Study

The November meeting of the Winchester Antique Study Group will be held at 7:30 p.m. on November 19, in the Rich Room of the Library.

Members are asked to bring a summer find or a favorite piece. Perhaps an article with an interesting story or history behind it.

As "Summer Finds and Favorite Pieces" always provide a full evening of discussion, viewing and information, members are asked to please have articles on the display table at 7:30 if possible.

the power of God | the triumph of man

They go together — the power of God and the triumph of man. One is the source. The other is the reflection. It's an idea worth pondering, for it holds the key to dominion over evil in all its forms. You're invited to hear a one-hour public lecture on this subject by Noel D. Bryan-Jones of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship. Title: "God Omnipotent Makes Man Triumphant." All are welcome.

Winn—O'Connell

Maureen Ann O'Connell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. O'Connell, formerly of Arlington, became the bride of Robert Thomas Winn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Winn of 11 Kirk Street, on October 19, at St. Agnes' Church, Arlington. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Phillip McGinty and the Papal Blessing was bestowed.

MRS. ROBERT T. WINN

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk faced peau de soie with appliques of Alencon lace fashioned with a circlet neckline and detachable chapel length train. Her silk illusion veil was caught to a pillbox of matching material worked with seed pearls and Alencon appliques. She carried a cascade of white roses and miniature ivy.

Patricia Pacino of Winchester was maid of honor and wore a semi-sheath floor length gown of antique gold satin. Her detachable train and cummerbund were outlined in brocade. She wore a pillbox of matching brocade and carried a cascade of gold talisman roses with miniature ivy.

The bridesmaids were Roberta Sorrento of Watertown and Frannie Green and Priscilla Kurtz of Arlington. They were gowned similarly in emerald green.

Richard Winn, brother of the bridegroom was best man. Thomas Allen of Burlington, James Allen, of Woburn, and Daniel Winn, served as ushers.

Miss Ellen McPartland, an aunt of the groom was in charge of the guest book.

The bride's mother wore an emerald green and sapphire blue brocade sheath ensemble with matching accessories and white orchid for the wedding and the bridegroom's mother was in a beige crepe sheath with gold metallic appliques and a matching hat. She also wore a white orchid.

The reception was held at the Cambridge House Motor Hotel after which the couple left on a wedding trip to the Poconos. They plan to reside in Arlington.

Violante—Dawkins

Shelby Jean Dawkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gervus L. Dawkins, of Birmingham, Alabama, became the bride of James E. Violante, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Violante of 11 Cottage Avenue, on Sunday, November 3, at the Immaculate Conception Church in Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Miss Donna Violante, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and Mr. Richard S. Violante, of Arlington, was best man for his brother.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Muehlig of Metuchen, New Jersey, formerly of Winchester.

Mrs. Violante is with Eastern Airlines in New York City and Mr. Violante is Maintenance Supervisor at United Airlines in Newark. Following a trip to Mexico, the couple will reside in Elizabeth.

Nancy Collins Is Soloist For Music Lovers' Club

Miss Nancy Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Collins, was guest soloist at the November meeting of the Music Lovers' Club of Boston at the Hotel Vendome.

Her program was varied, consisting of Old English, German and French, Italian, and Modern American and English songs and arias. She was accompanied by Mrs. Martha Daschback, well-known Winchester organist and pianist, and the members gave the concert a very warm reception.

Nancy, a graduate of Marycliff Academy, is now a freshman at Boston College, School of Education, and is studying voice with Mr. Edwin Wing of Boston. She is also a member of the Boston College Chorale under the direction of Mr. C. Alexander Peloquin.

Nancy also participated in the program presented for the mother-daughter reception at Boston College on November 7.

Engagement Of Miss Harrington Is Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Harrington of 2 Calumet Road, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Thompson Harrington, to Lieutenant Larry Brien Palm, U.S.-Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Palm of Keene, New Hampshire.

MISS MARY T. HARRINGTON

Miss Harrington was graduated from Winchester High School, and Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, Purchase, New York.

Lieutenant Palm was graduated from the University of New Hampshire. He is stationed in Germany with the U. S. Army.

A January 18th wedding is planned.

Miss Salmon Is Engaged

Mrs. Thomas P. Salmon, of 128 Church Street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Joan Salmon, to Mr. Theodore A. Nesbit of Boston, son of Mrs. Josephine S. Nesbit of Chicago.

Miss Salmon, also the daughter of the late Mr. Salmon, was graduated from Colby Junior College.

Mr. Nesbit prepared at Milton Academy and was graduated from Harvard University.

A winter wedding is planned.

W.V.N.A. Hears Of Geriatric Study

The monthly board meeting of Winchester Visiting Nursing Association was held Friday morning, November 8, at the Public Library. Mrs. Bradford M. Bentley, president, conducted the business meeting. Reports were given by Mrs. Roland H. Moody, secretary, Mrs. George Farrar, treasurer, Miss Rita Plummer, executive director, as well as committee chairmen.

Mrs. Bentley introduced and welcomed to the board three recently elected members-at-large. They are Mrs. Reese E. James, Mrs. Richard M. Alt, and Mrs. Robert M. Smith. Mrs. Bentley particularly stressed the important volunteer work being done by the crew of eighteen members-at-large.

Volunteers are on duty at the weekly Board of Health Well-Child and Immunization Clinics at the Town Hall. One volunteer is needed for autoclaving Wednesday mornings at the association's office on Fairmount Street. Volunteers are called to drive patients to hospitals and clinics in Boston and neighboring towns. At the recent town-wide polio immunization clinics volunteers assisted W. V. N. A. nurses with the heavy clerical work connected with this Board of Health project.

Of special interest to members were reports by Mrs. Eugene M. Pollard and Mrs. Harold Given who recently went with Miss Plummer to a meeting in Lowell of the Massachusetts League for Nursing Council of Member Agencies. The speaker, Mr. R. J. Diebol, R.N., has been surveying the geriatric problem in five New Jersey state mental hospitals and hopes to establish an experimental unit near a general hospital where only geriatric patients will be treated. Mrs. Pollard reported that an elderly person needs to live in an environment of self-respect, freedom, and dignity, and that Mr. Diebol's experimental unit would create this kind of atmosphere for the geriatric patient.

Next month's meeting will feature a talk by Dr. Robert M. Smith, Chief Anesthetist at the Children's Hospital. Dr. Smith will speak on resuscitation. Mrs. Bentley reminded committee chairmen that annual written reports are due at this meeting.

The annual meeting will be held January 24 at the home of Mrs. Edward W. Little of 5 Lakeview Road.

Immac Sodality Plans Gala Bazaar Friday, Saturday

The annual Christmas Bazaar sponsored by the Sodality of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception Church, will take place in the school hall Friday and Saturday, November 15 and 16, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The ladies have been hard at work this past month to make the last event of their 1963 Sodality functions a huge success. There will be 16 booths filled with articles that should please even the most particular shopper and a very energetic committee of well experienced women are in charge. This is an excellent opportunity for mother, dad and children alike to take advantage of the well priced items to do their Christmas shopping early.

"Jolly Santa" will drive to the school hall Saturday morning from Logan Airport in his red convertible. His arrival should be around 10 a.m. at the hall where he will stay greeting all the children and having his picture taken with them until 5 in the afternoon. Be sure to register the children with Santa, for the drawing of the stuffed toy animals.

Luncheon will be served Friday from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., consisting of lobster, crabmeat and tuna fish. In the afternoon the snack bar and refreshment booth will be open until closing time, plus all day Saturday. Saturday's serving will include hamburgs, pizza and hot dogs.

Space does not permit to give credit to all the women who are so industriously working on this bazaar. Among the committees and their chairladies who are serving under general chairlady, Dorothy Mawn, prefect, are: major awards, Eileen Garvey and Louise McHugh; Christmas cards, Florence McCall; grab bags, Gertrude Gonsalves; religious, Linda Allen; dolls, Dorothy Gonsalves; white elephants, Helen McGann; aprons, Christine Drapeau; gifts, Mary Coakley and Sarah Mullen; jewelry, Helen Devaney; refreshments, Violet Melaragni; novelties, Mary Serieka; knit and crochet, Ada Balestrier; pictures with Santa, Emma Murphy; film for kiddies, Julia Bonasera; baked goods, Jennie Desmond, and snack bar, Sarah Doherty.

Loyalty Sunday At Crawford Methodist Church

This Sunday, November 17, has been designated as Loyalty Sunday at the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church. At the Morning Worship Service at eleven o'clock the pastor, the Rev. H. Newton Clay, will preach on the subject, "Response to the Highest."

Following the church service some sixty men of the church will receive their assignments and will go out in the afternoon to make calls throughout the parish in an Every-Family Canvass in behalf of the appeal for financial support of the church program in 1964. The total budget for next year has been estimated at $36,500 and the canvassers have as their goal the subscription of the entire amount this Sunday afternoon and evening.

The Canvass is under the direction of Mr. Kenneth Lamprey, chairman of the Commission on Stewardship and Finance, assisted by Mr. William Leighton, vice chairman of the commission.

Girl Scout Cabin Is Center For Much Activity

All Girl Scout leaders and their assistants are urged to come to the Sachem neighborhood meeting on November 26 at the Girl Scout Cabin, 9:45 a.m. Mrs. Richard Dutting and Mrs. Josiah Bacon will chair the meeting.

Reservations for the skating party are due November 20 with Mrs. Harold Butters Jr., 10 New Meadows Road.

All of the Juliette Low representatives from the Sachem Neighborhood will meet on November 25 at the Cabin from 3:30 p.m. to 4:45 p.m. The girls will make Christmas gifts to send to a troop of Girl Guides in Malmo, Sweden, who will send out girls gifts for Easter typical of Sweden. This exchange of greetings has been going on for 5 years.

Reminder to parents: It is your responsibility to provide transportation to and from these meetings. Please note the time.

Recipes, Party Gowns Are Among Christmas Wares At Unitarian Fair Next Week

Only 34 more shopping days until Christmas and the best way to do your early shopping is at the annual Unitarian Christmas Fair commencing at the church at 7 p.m. November 20 and going through 5 p.m. November 21.

Mrs. Robert Ingraham and Mrs. Edward MacCormack, co-chairmen are looking forward to greeting you and know that you will enjoy all the many festive tables and also be able to refresh yourself with coffee from 10-11 a.m. on Thursday, luncheon from 11:45-1:30 p.m. or afternoon tea from 2:30-4:30 p.m.

A new innovation last year, the recipe table, was a quick sellout and Mrs. Frank Barnes, in charge this year, says to watch for the second installment of favorite recipes from the files of Unitarian gourmets.

There will be many prom and party dresses from a well-known specialty shop as well as regular, good used clothing—all in the popular Clothing Exchange.

The handwork of many gifted people will be at the Handicraft table with Mrs. Robert Williams and Mrs. John White as chairmen. Mrs. Robert Low and Mrs. Francis Thayer will again have all colors, designs and sizes at their well-stocked mitten and knitting table.

Always fascinating is the White Elephant table, this year under resourceful Mrs. John Coulson and Mrs. Harry Damon. The Mystery table is in the capable hands of Mrs. Erwin Hutchings, and if you knew about it, there would be no mystery.

Colorful remnants will be displayed by Mrs. Jacob Babakian and the always useful and ever attractive Household table will be arranged by Mrs. Everett Kidder.

The Children's Entertainment, a special puppet show featuring "Punch and Judy" will be at 4:15 p.m., so come early and enjoy the whole Children's Fair with special things to buy.

You don't need to worry about getting lost or not being able to find your favorite table as there will be a permanently staffed information desk just inside the door to help you. So come and enjoy your Christmas shopping at the Unitarian Christmas Fair. Remember the days and hours, Wednesday November 20 from 7-10 p.m. and Thursday, November 21 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. See you there!

Education

At one time, reports the Department of Labor, older workers with little education earned more money than younger ones with more education.

But now, it finds, the four years needed to get a high school diploma add as much income as do 20 years of experience without a high school education.

The Commerce Clearing House estimates that failure to complete high school costs the average man $46,360 during his working career.

The high school graduate in the United States, it reports, averages $5,567 a year against $4,618 for the drop-out.

Among residents of Winchester, the educational level was shown by the last census to be relatively high and to be moving higher.

The average person locally has been getting 12.8 years of schooling, which is considerably more than was acquired 20 years ago.

It compares with 10.6 years in the United States and 10.5 years in the New England States.

SOI Bridge And Whist Next Week

The Winchester Women's Lodge extends an invitation to all card players to a Bridge and Whist on Thursday, November 21, at 8 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall, 117 Swanton Street.

A door prize of a turkey and lots of prizes for "real sharp card playing" will be presented.

Tickets are available from the following girls on the committee: Venerable Lorraine Maggio, Chairlady Lillian Ciarcia, Cusi Fiore, Mary Antonuccio, Louise Vigorita, Jeanette Garbino, Gerry D'Onofrio, Angie Dattilo, Florence Ciarcia, Virginia Gorrasi, Antoinette Staffiere, Theresa Sardella, Bobbie Ungaretti, Pauline Cerulli and Loretta Frongillo.

Come on, all you men and women, get out and relax, enjoy an evening of card playing for top-notch prizes.

Army Enlistees May Pick City

Young men qualifying for enlistment into the Army's Air Defense Command (ARADCOM) are being given their choice of assignments—this news from the Army recruiter here in Winchester, Sergeant Fred T. Nixon.

According to the sergeant, qualified young men may choose the city in which they will spend at least the first 14 months of their enlistment. He says that the list of cities they may choose from is a long one, and includes such places as Abilene, Texas; Boston, Massachusetts; Cleveland, Ohio; Key West, Florida; Shreveport, Louisiana; and San Francisco, California.

Under this plan, qualified applicants are assigned directly from their Army basic training units to the city of their choice. They will remain there for at least one year and two months, and while they are there they will be trained in either the missile or the electronic field.

Sergeant Nixon points out, however, that assignments to any given city are always limited—for example, during October there were only 4 openings in Detroit, Michigan, while Norfolk, Virginia, was limited to a single applicant—so he suggests that men interested in the opportunities offered by ARADCOM contact him as soon as possible. He may be reached by calling EX 6-5777, or by visiting his office at 49 High Street, Medford.

Many Here Assist Emmanuel Festival In Preparations

Lively enthusiasm has been generated among local Emmanuel College graduates here in the upcoming Emmanuel Festival of Christmas scheduled for November 14th through the 16th at the college, 400 The Fenway. Although the event is the major fund-raising activity of the year, its primary purpose is to foster the development of fine arts in family living and to enrich the traditions of Christmas through the presentation of little-known customs of many lands.

To make the fine hand-crafted merchandise to be sold at the festival, a series of workshops have been held at alumnae's homes. Among local residents attending were Mrs. Joseph Collins Mrs. John Waite, Mrs. George Saulnier and Mrs. John Driscoll. Others using their skills and talents for the festival are Mrs. Charles V. Harrington, Claire DeLay, Mrs. Albin Strazdas, Mrs. Arthur Carr, and Mrs. John Griffin.

The three day extravaganza of fine arts starts Thursday at 7 p.m. with the opening of Candlelight Lounge in Marian Hall. Coffee and dessert to be served by the teen-age daughter of the alumnae will be followed by entertainment in the gym.

For the punctual Christmas shopper, an array of charming shops will offer items of intrinsic value including books, original etchings, bibelots, all types of unusual ornaments, decorations and candles also a doll house overflowing with doll wardrobes, puppets and even a co-operative where juvenile craftsmen will sell their own creations.

For those who come to look the displays will be varied and eye-catching. For the literary—personalities and features from the holiday classics, from Eugene Field's sugar plum tree to Dickens' better known characters—will be recreated. Foreign exhibits as diverse as the United Nations and staffed by alumnae in native costume will dramatize their country's culture and its particular celebration of the Christmas season. Mrs. Henry Kiley of Winslow Road has directed the research on these customs.

A Swedish kitchen will offer fragrant home-cooked goodies. A Sidewalk Cafe will feature continental pastries and hot beverages throughout the festival hours and typical of the holiday season are the fragrant evergreens, pine cones and varied natural arrangements to be found at the Gardner's Cottage.

Apartments

discussed and interpreted. The site is located in a Business District. Although the by-laws permit apartment buildings in a business district, there were some unresolved problems related to the number of apartments within the area of land space available, and the proper or legal set-back allowed from the street and lot lines.

Leo F. Garvey of 576 Main Street, representing Mr. Millyan, claimed there was no parking issue involved, no lot line issue, and that the area requirement as prescribed in the by-laws "has long since then been outmoded." He claimed that with the present high cost of land and taxes, especially in Winchester's business district, it was unrealistic to expect a builder to chop 80 feet (40 feet distance from front and rear lot lines to building, required) off of usable property and make any reasonable profit.

The area of the land in question is 20,143 square feet. The building proposed would have an area of abou 13,176 square feet, with 9,000 square feet of it in the back wing basement going to an indoor parking facility.

The Board of Appeal contended that the zoning regulation called for 1,000 square feet of land area for every family apartment in any building rising over three stories. The petititioner claimed that the parking area available indoors should be counted in his favor, for if the building were just apartments, with a side parking lot, both area figures would be added together for a total. But here, he said, the indoor parking is even better for the tenants and the Town, and should not be counted against him. The board noted that even if the parking area were "counted twice" the total area then would only allow for about 36 units, and not the 44 he was petitioning for.

Vincent Clarke, representing himself as an attorney and owner of the property left in the Thomas Quigley estate, said it would be to the Town's benefit for the board to grant a variance and issue a building permit for the low rise apartment building.

Mr. Clarke cited the many years which the property has remained useless and wasted as a parking lot while on the market. He said a number of buyers considered purchasing the property, but all wanted to put an apartment building there. When refused building permits, buyers declined to pick up the property. He noted that local organizations would also benefit by the sale of the land: including estate beneficiaries such as the Winchester Hospital, the Methodist Church, and others.

He said the apartment building proposed was of an attractive nature, and would in no way detriment the character of the adjoining buildings or properties. He also commented on the tax benefits to the Town by having the land put to use after so many years of not being developed.

There were no objectors to the apartment building in attendance at the public hearing. Lane McGovern of 47 Samoset Road, chairman of the Board of Appeals, said the board would render its decision on the matter as soon as possible—probably within thirty days.

38 Fells Road, an architect for Metcalf & Eddy Company of Boston, and Alfred Elliott of 45 Church Street, general contractor for the job.

There are three main aisles inside, with two long, shoulder-high display set-ups traversing the store. Overhead, there are just over a dozen diffused lights inset into the ceiling, with indirect lighting running the length of the front and back walls. Three long walnut formica counters are placed in an "L" shape near the back and side walls, matched with mahogany paneling on the walls. A wall-to-wall carpet, and pleasant scents from the cosmetic department, add warmth and a welcoming atmosphere to the store's modern appearance.

To increase the space available in the store, Mr. McCormack eliminated the soda fountain he had before he remodelled. He was also able to increase his storage space by over 50 per cent, mostly downstairs and on the walls in back of the store, and had a private fitting room for surgical garments built.

Mr. McCormack said many of his customers have commented on the attractive remodelling, which was begun on April 1, a little over a year after he purchased the White Building from Harry Chefalo of 1 Cedar Street in January of 1962.

Employed at McCormack's are three full-time registered pharmacists, two full-time clerks, and eight part-time clerks — including two who are students at the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy in Boston.

Even more eye-catching, yesterday, a brilliant red carpet was put over the front step-way. It wasn't just a grand opening display, the carpet is permanent. Made out of a nylon fabric that will hold up under the harsh New England weather year round, the carpet—similar to the one seen in front of Boodakian's for many months—the red carpet will soon become a familiar corner fixture.

Editorials:

Massive Military Mobility: A Tactical Necessity

The Pentagon's massive military airlifting of over 15,00 troops to Europe at the end of October was an expensive proposition, with interesting repercussions and sidelights.

First of all, the $20 million bill for the maneuver was unnecessary in terms of real military or political needs; there was no crisis at hand calling for the "big lift." However, tactically speaking, it was a brilliant display of strategic and logistical potential that has military and political significance—maybe even $20 million worth.

However, other ramifications of the maneuver may turn out to be of more immediate consequence. As former NATO commander Dwight Eisenhower said in favoring the withdrawal of some American troops in Europe: "One American division can 'show the flag' as definitely as can several." And with the now expensively proven fact of the mobility of whole divisions, might not it be a reasonable corollary that more of our troops over in Europe can be returned to this continent?

Certainly with each passing year the European nations grow economically and militarily stronger, and thus are more able to accept the responsibilities of assuming more of the burden of their own protection.

Regardless of some screaming in European quarters whenever the idea is mentioned, the continual keeping of overseas forces in Europe is an unnecessary drain on our resources (exceeding $20 million a year), and is no longer necessary outside of the Berlin area "to show the flag."

Winchester Spotlighted In National Magazine

Many Winchester residents, used to reading just about "all the news that's fit to print" about Winchester in their favorite weekly newspaper, were a little surprised to find their town and its now famous newspaper written up in a national magazine this month.

On pages 74 and 75 of the November issue of the Saturday Review, a nationally circulated magazine of high literary and scholastic standards, there appeared an article entitled "The Weekly Newspaper: Commitment in Suburbia," written by Wilson Sullivan, former editor of the Winchester Star.

The article dealt with weekly newspapers in general, but used the Winchester Star and the community it serves as the main example of the theme of the story.

In the article, Mr. Sullivan refers to the community as "the blue-chip, conservative Yankee town of Winchester, Massachusetts," and commented on three major examples of how the town's newspaper presented controversial issues squarely, "hoping to stimulate the debate and dialogue without which a free press and a free community are delusions." He noted the fallout shelter program, John Birch Society, and discriminatory housing practices, as three controversial issues which the Star confronted and committed itself to in suburbia—issues that the metropolitan dailies considered "too hot to handle" in the depth and scope the Star engaged.

Mr. Sullivan stated his belief well, saying that "First, presented in terms of local realities and local personalities, every issue is a 'local' issue.

"Second, given the prevailing editorial — and reportorial—evasion of most metropolitan dailies concerning controversial issues, and given the relative freedom of the suburban weekly press, the power of the community editor for good—sometimes far beyond his immediate sphere of responsibility—has never been greater."

But, Mr. Sullivan also said that "The suburban weekly is generally known to the trade as a 'dog'—a porridge of gossip, latter-day news, surplus store ads, recipes for dandelion wine, and tips—in November—for summer salads," and continued by criticizing the lack of editorial gumption in many weeklies whose "editorials, if not lifted unsullied from the Farm Bureau, the AMA, or the NAM, seldom venture beyond a lusty concern with litter, seasonal deference to the flag, or laments over poor attendance at Town Hall hearings."

How true Mr. Sullivan's comments are cannot be fully appreciated by most Winchester residents, who in general know very little about the newspaper business and profession. However, if they could see some of the so-called newspapers we receive in the mail each week, and critically read some of the dailies put out in a city reputed to be the cultural and educational center of the United States, they might more fully realize what a really strong and dynamic newspaper their own community newspaper is and what it does within the community.

He mentions in his article that it was not his intention to laud the Winchester Star, "although its publisher, Richard Hakanson, has earned an "A" for courage." A justly deserved compliment for the owner of the Star, who, unlike many ultra-conservative publishers of suburban weeklies, is not "imprisoned in the rubrics of 'Look the other way,' 'Why kick up a storm?' and 'We've never done it that way.'"

Mr. Sullivan concludes his article with the comment that local newspapers will never be The New York Times, but yet are becoming a continually better and progressive factor in American journalism.

In another national magazine last month, the present editor of the Star wrote an article about the Star's recent legal involvement over a set of letters sent to the newspaper for publication in the Letters to the Editor column.

Appearing on pages 14, 15, and 28 of the National Publisher, a nationally circulated management magazine for the hometown newspaper industry, the article described and explained the Massachusetts Supreme Court's failure to answer the inherent legal question in its recent Winchester Star ruling when it affirmed the local newspaper's right to reject a few objectionable letters to the editor, but did not elaborate on the court's opinion as to the precise right of editorial exclusion.

The story on which the article was based appeared on the front pages of newspapers across the country when the State Court handed down its decision.

Wedgemere Avenue, who was a Rotary Fellow in France about 1959-60.

As a Rotary Foundation Fellow, Mr. Callahan will meet many Rotarians during his year of study and will be invited to attend Rotary Club meetings in Caracas and elsewhere as his study schedule permits.

Begun in 1947, the Rotary Foundation Fellowship program is part of the world-wide effort by the service organization to further understanding and friendly relations between peoples of different nations. With the announcement of next year's fellowship winners, the total number of foundation grants is 1,860 since the exchange program was started.

There are two types of Rotary Foundation Fellowships: regular and additional. Mr. Callahan received a regular fellowship.

Regular Fellowships are available only to unmarried men aged 20-28, inclusive, while additional Fellowships are offered to men and women with no maximum age limit imposed.

Applicants for regular Fellowships must be proficient in the language of the country in which they are to study, and schools selected may be in any of the 129 countries where there are Rotary clubs. Additional Fellowships have less stringent language requirements and are for study only in certain countries. Applications for both must be made through a Rotary club.

Rotary clubs and individual Rotarians make the awards possible by their voluntary contributions to The Rotary Foundation.

Rotary is a world fellowship of more than 533,500 business and professional executives — members of 11,400 Rotary clubs in 128 countries on six continents—who are active in community-betterment undertakings, the promotion of high standards in businesses and professions, and the advancement of international understandings, good will and peace.

Fair Housing To Sponsor Forum On Negro Job Hunter

"The Negro Job Hunter—How Can Business Help Him?" will be the subject of a panel discussion to be held in the Public Library's Rich Room on Wednesday evening, November 20, at eight o'clock. The three-man panel will include: John E. Venson, Industrial Relations secretary of The Urban League of Greater Boston; Charles S. Johnson Jr., from the personnel department of Polaroid Corporation; and Miles Weaver from the personnel department of H. P. Hood and Sons, Inc., and a resident of Winchester who is well known to parents of high school students as the chairman of the Parent-Faculty Advisory Council. The Winchester Fair Housing Association is sponsoring the discussion.

Emmons Ellis, chairman of the association, said he believed the subject was of interest and concern to the business community.

"This discussion was planned for and arranged by members of the Fair Housing Association, but it is not a regular meeting of the association," said Mr. Ellis. "Rather, it is a forum sponsored by the association for the purpose of casting some light on the problems faced by Negroes who seek employment and the problems faced by employers who seek qualified employees. We hope very much that Winchester residents who are engaged in business and who are interested in this complex subject will attend the forum.

"The panelists are well qualified to speak, not only as individuals, but as representatives of an impartant community organization and two successful and prominent business organizations. They, no doubt, will raise questions among themselves and they have said that they will be happy to try to answer any questions that are raised by members of the audience."

College News

Peter J. Cirurso of 17 Florence Street, Robert G. Bramley of 12 Canterbury Road and Robert P. Watson of 5 Bellevue Avenue began classes at Bentley College, Boston, recently as members of the largest freshman class to enter this institution specializing in accounting and finance. Increasing enrollment, curriculum expansion, and additions to staff have led to development of plans for a suburban campus to supplement the Back Bay facilities of Bentley College which is to be on a 100 acre site in Waltham.

Friendship Guild To See Play

The Friendship Guild of the First Congregational Church will meet Tuesday, November 19, in the Palmer Room, at 7:45 p.m.

Members of the Guild, under the direction of Mrs. Cedric Robinson, will present a one-act play entitled, "Embark For Tomorrow" about a group of young people on their way to India to teach and to do missionary work. A special devotional message will be delivered by Mrs. James Ryder.

There will be refreshments served and Mrs. Jenness Eugley, president of the Guild, extends a cordial invitation to members and friends of the church to be present.

Bel-Aires Make Music at SOI Hop

Last Friday night at the Sons of Italy Hall, D. J.'s Linda and Dianne had one of the best record hops to date despite the bad weather.

The guest groups for the night were Winchester's own fabulous group, the popular Bel-Aires; others were Woburn's winning group, Larry Bisso and the Rendells, and the very popular Dell Vikings. The door prize was won by Dianne Patterson.

This week the Bel-Aires, Larry Bisso and the Rendells well return, along with the Impalas. Appearing soon will be the very popular D. J.'s George Denham and Steve Peterson plus other guests. See you at the hop at the Sons of Italy Hall.

Democratic Activities In Winchester

Mrs. Bette Hill was the hostess on Wednesday evening, November 6, when the first meeting of the Registration advance group met to plan its strategy. This group is working under the guidance of Mrs. Susan Winn, an excellent leader, and one of much experience.

Sue has appointed for each precinct a chairman. In four of the precincts there are co-chairmen. These precinct leaders will choose their own committees. The precinct leaders are: Precinct 1, Joseph and Margery Flaherty; Precinct 2, Sally Kincaid and Barbara Joslin; Precinct 3, Bette Hill; Precinct 4, Peggy Harsch; Precinct 5, Mary Kane and Helen Gaynor; Precinct 6, Mary Doherty and May Serieka.

This year's registration will be an important undertaking for Democrats. With our Democratic president due to be re-nominated for a second term, there will be a real incentive for Party workers to aim for a one hundred per cent score Later there will be a tabulation made of all prospective Democrats in the armed services so that their parents may register them. Kay Jennings will head up this committee as well as the committee on absentee voters. Kay is an attorney and also a Notary Public so her absentee ballot work is always effective. In this latter work she will again be assisted by Joseph Flaherty who supplies the transportation.

The chairman of Registration, Mrs. Susan Winn, is an attorney, also, and the Town Committee is grateful for the services of these fine young dedicated workers.

Following the delicious lunch served by Mrs. Hill at the registration meeting, the social hour was turned into a joyful bon voyage party for the hostess and her husband. Bette and Charles sailed two days later to enjoy a vacation of three weeks at Nassau in the Bahamas.

The next regular Town Committee meeting will take place early in December. At that meeting our social chairman will announce the winner of the afghan. All books will have to be turned in by November 30 to Mrs. Bee Wilson, the social chairman.

TEACHER

by Sylvia Ashton-Warner

What makes a good teacher?

Educationists are accused of saying it's the courses the individual has survived. Romanticists speak of the "inspired" soul who first made them feel life in the printed word or understand cosmic questions still unanswered. In dark moments the person in a teaching situation may feel it's the one who maintains discipline and never has to send a student to the office. Pupils often judge on the basis of the fairness of the teacher's judgments, assignments, and tests.

Sylvia Ashton-Warner, with a most appealing mixture of humility and pain at those who misunderstand, infers that a good teacher is one who starts where the child is and leads the child through self-teaching to be prepared for the world he must enter as an adult. That anyone in such an extraordinary teaching situation could have the perspective to generalize so universally is one of the most striking virtues of this exceptional book.

Few are called to face a room filled with a combination of Maori aboriginals one-half step removed from tribal living and English youngsters already molded to what we consider civilized living and thinking. Where does one begin to provide a common learning experience and yet stimulate individual growth? In Organic Teaching, as Miss Ashton-Warner has named her procedure, one asks the child what word he would like to learn and prints it on a flash card which becomes that child's property.

> " I reach a hand into the mind of the child, bring out a handful of stuff I find there, and use that as our first working material . . . And in this dynamic material . . . the Maori finds that words have intense meaning to him, from which cannot help but arise a love of reading. For it's here, right in this first word, that the love of reading is born . . . until by the time he arrives at the books of the new culture, he receives them as another joy rather than as a labour."

Reading is not one of several separate subjects, but an art which integrates all learning. The intense desire to express thought verbally makes learning to recognize words and to write them and to join them to communicate ideas a natural pattern. Actually the children composed their pre-primers by putting words together into sentences. "These books they write are the most dramatic and pathetic and colorful things I've ever seen on pages."

This fabulous mentor prepared her own Transitional Reading Books, lovingly hand-painting the illustrations. No Dick or Janet first reader was suitable for her purposes.

How American primer-writers will flinch at the Key Vocabulary: ghost, kiss, cry, love, dance, fight. The projection of emotions through words is part of the whole creative process, and teaching, so that children accomplish this for and by themselves, is as artistic as producing an oil painting. What is more, the whole process by which an individual channels his animosities and the whole changing of the world's pattern of peace followed by war followed by peace begins in the infant's room. "I see the mind of a five-year-old as a volcano with two vents; destructiveness and creativeness. And I see that to the extent that we widen the creative channel, we atrophy the destructive one."

Meeting the enthusiasm and challenge of her ideas is a stimulating experience for the reader not communicable second-hand. Parents can gain more insight into the quick switch in a small child's mind from apparent reality to a make-believe world if they can understand this writer's distinction between the "inner vision" and the "outer vision."

The second half of the book is an analysis of the whole teaching life of a Maori school: the outside influences which must be considered in making any plans, the use of student assistants, the formal curriculum and the means of covering it without curbing the creative interplay of child with child in unstructured situations.

What a fascinating idea to carry the plan of the Organic Teaching into our adult social world. It is a little frightening to speculate what insights might be gathered about the real minds of our friends if, instead of meaningless snatches of light conversation, everyone listened to the first word that came to each individual's mind as the most important word to understand. "Look, Dick, look," does seem colorless in comarison.

Pastor Disagrees With "Stigma On Fun?" Editorial

Editor of the Star:

I regret very much the editorial in your issue of October 31 entitled "Moral Stigma on Fun?" Coming out as it did the very day that the children were going out, either for "trick or treat" or to collect a few pennies for less fortunate children in other countries, it was most untimely, and, I feel, beneath the dignity of such a fine and civic-minded paper as The Star.

If a news release "attempted to shame those kids who were planning to go out and enjoy the joys of Halloween in the usual manner" and expressed the opinion that "the only good kids were those . . . going out for UNICEF," then I regret this as much as anyone, and for you to editorialize against this is most commendable.

But one result you did not see was that some people, after reading that editorial, took it upon themselves to treat little children, first and second graders, pretty harshly. You objected to any stigma being put on fun, but the effect was also to put a stigma on little kids who were willing to ask for a few pennies to buy milk for little children in northern Italy who were flood victims, or for food or medication for little ones in need in other countries.

I am glad, Mr. Editor, that your memories of Hallowe'en are all happy ones. Some can remember false fire alarms, slashed automobile tires, and other lesser depredations. We are happy there isn't so much of this type of thing now. We prefer the "trick or treat," but we also like to see little folks who are willing to do for others and regret that some were ill treated.

Incidentally, every youngster who came to our home received candy, whether they asked for "trick or treat" or pennies for "UNICEF"; even those we thought were much too old for this sort of fun.

Faithfully yours,
H. Newton Clay

would be centrally situated for the many citizens who go to the administrative offices, and close to all public transportation facilities so that, for instance, the many interviewees for teaching positions could reach the offices with ease.

The history of the School Department's administration office relocations is an erratic one, dependent entirely on available space during times of moving. First it was at the old Prince School, where Dr. Barone now lives. Then it was moved around 1924 to the old Senior High School (present McCall Junior High, and then to the Wyman Stable. In 1946 the administration offices were again moved, to the Legion House (present Red Cross building), and then in 1957 changed to 426 Main Street. Finally, in October of 1961, the administration was moved to its present location in the Lynch Junior High School.

The net effect of changing the system turns out to be the same for both the Town and the employees, said Mr. Costello, for under either system the Town pays out the same amount of money for work performed (disregarding pay raises over seven year periods, etc.). However, he added, "it would be to the Town's benefit to make the changeover so it won't be saddled with a terrific increase in payroll costs every seventh year."

The Selectmen are considering the merits of the plan proposed by the Comptroller to even out the costs of paying personnel for extra days at the end of each year, and probably will vote on the matter before the end of December.

Committee Of Safety Chapter, D. A. R.

The Committee of Safety Chapter, D. A. R. will have a meeting on Monday, November 18, at the home of Mrs. Harold Twombley 16 Lawson Road.

Dessert will be served at 1:30 p.m. and after the business meeting at 2 p.m., members will enjoy informal organ music by Mrs. Albert Richardson, Jr. of Medford.

Members are reminded to bring gifts and donations for Hillside School to this meeting in order that our chairman may take these gifts to Hillside School before Christmas.

William P. McAuley

William P. McAuley of 22 Rangeley Road, retired manager of the New England office of the Proctor and Gamble Company, died Thursday, November 7, at Arnold House in Stoneham after a brief illness. He had been in failing health since last August.

Mr. McAuley was the son of William, and Catherine (Stewart) McAuley. He was born November 16, 1881, in Northern Ireland, coming to this country as a boy of seven and settling in Cliffside Park, New Jersey.

After being educated in the Cliffside schools, Mr. McAuley joined the New York office of the Proctor and Gamble Company, and when the firm opened its Boston office he was put in charge of the new territory, remaining in this capacity until he retired in 1940.

Mr. McAuley came to Winchester in 1918 and lived for a short time in the Highlands. He then lived on Highland Avenue in the Symmes Corner section, and more recently in Stetson Hall. Until his health failed he spent his winters in Florida and his summers on the North Shore.

On November 9, 1910, Mr. McAuley married Mary Charlotte (Neumann), who died in May of 1924. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. William P. Baugher, a teacher in the kindergarten at the Noonan School; a son, William A. McAuley of Cazenovia, New York, who is associated with Crouse, Hinds, manufacturers of traffic lights in Syracuse New York; and a grandson, William F. McAuley, a sophomore at Clarkson University at Pottstown, New York.

The funeral was held Saturday morning from the Lane Funeral Home. Requiem High Mass was celebrated at St. Mary's Church at 10 o'clock by the Rev. John O'Donnell. Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery where the committal prayers were read by Father O'Donnell.

Mrs. Anna Haag Becker

Mrs. Anna Haag Becker of 10 Perkins Road, died Friday, November 8, at the Stone Nursing Home in Stoneham, where she had been confined for the past five years.

Mrs. Becker was the daughter of John and Anna C. Haag. She was born in Cadott, Wisconsin, in 1880, and lived for 45 years in Greeley, Colorado, before coming to Winchester in 1950.

She leaves her husband, Philipp W. Becker of Winchester; a son, Addison J. Becker of Winchester; two grandsons, John Philipp, a member of the State Department, and Robert Addison, a lieutenant, (j.g.) in the Navy, stationed at Roto in Spain; also a granddaughter, Eleanor Ann, a junior at Winchester High School.

Services were held at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment was in the Cadott Cemetery.

Frank H. Jury, Jr.

Frank H. Jury, Jr. of 6 Winter Road, North Woburn, formerly of Winchester, died at his home, Saturday November 9, suddenly. He made his home in Winchester for many years on Lloyd Street and was well known.

Mr. Jury was the son of Frank H., and Mildred (Ward) Jury. He was born in Malden in 1918, and had lived in Woburn for the past seven years. An Air Force veteran of World War II, he was a salesman for carved picture frames for the M. W. Carr Company in Somerville.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Alyce (Koslowski); his mother, Mrs. Mildred Ward Jury; and a brother, Ralph W. Jury of Stoneham.

Funeral services were held Tuesday forenoon at 11 o'clock at the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Joseph E. O'Donnell, Jr., pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Susan Pavliska

Mrs. Susan Pavliska of 285 Harvard Street, Cambridge, formerly of Roslindale, who died Thursday November 7, leaves a son in Winchester, Alphonse J. Pavliska of 36 Cambridge Street.

Mrs. Pavliska was 71 years old and a native of Czechoslovakia. She had lived in Cambridge for 27 years and had been employed as a furrier.

Funeral services were held Saturday forenoon at 11 o'clock at the Norris Chapel with the Rev. J. R. Matthews of the Salem, New Hampshire, Methodist Church, officiating. Burial was in the family lot in Forest Hills Cemetery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Adelaide Carlson

Mrs. Elizabeth Adelaide Carlson of 246 Mountain Avenue, Arlington, wife of Carl A. Carlson and a former resident of Winchester, died early in the morning of Monday, November 11, at the Winchester Hospital after several months illness. She was 33 years old.

Mrs. Carlson had been in Arlington for four years, going to that town from Winchester, where she lived for six years following her marriage, at 51 Brookside Avenue.

She was the daughter of George, and Margaret (McNeill) Paynter, and was born in Hyannis July 13, 1930. A graduate of Yarmouth High School, in the class of 1948, she was also graduated with high honors from Wilson College and was a licensed technician, serving as X-ray technician at the Winchester Hospital. She was also a secretary for the Maintain Corporation in Woburn.

Mrs. Carlson was married April 10, 1953, coming to Winchester at the time of her marriage. She leaves, besides her husband, two sons, Stephen Carl, aged 5, David George aged 3; and a sister, Miss Eleanor Paynter of West Yarmouth.

Funeral services were held at the Norris Chapel on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. James Scroggs, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, officiated. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

his B.D. degree from Hartford Seminary, and attended Marburg and Heidelberg Universities in Germany on Welles Study Fellowships in 1930 and 1932. He was awarded an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree by Defiance College in Ohio.

Dr. Penner has served as pastor in Congregational Churches in Stockbridge, Northampton (where one of his parish members was the late President Calvin Coolidge; and Dr. Penner officiated at President Coolidge's funeral), Holyoke, and in New York City. He was also an exchange minister to the British Isles in 1957.

Dr. Penner has resided in Winchester for the past five years with his wife, Bernice. They have four children: Richard, a senior at Winchester High School; David, a senior at Amherst College; Allan, a teacher in Madison, N.J.; and Lois Mrs. Ray Riley of Montclair, N. J.

Franklin Miller Is on Leave From State Department

The Department of State in Washington this week reports that Franklin Miller, who has been serving as chief education advisor in Honduras was scheduled to leave the AID mission in Tegucigalpa there recently to return home for leave and eventual transfer.

He is among several of the personnel of the Agency for International Development missions in the Dominican Republic and Honduras who are rapidly being withdrawn and re-assigned.

U. S. AID operations in both countries were suspended following coups. AID mission directors were called home for consultation. Orders for the withdrawal of other personnel have been proceeding as quickly as home leave or transfer elsewhere could be arranged.

Mr. Miller will return to Winchester, where he lived for many years, to visit before his transfer.

A CHANCE TO HELP

Many elderly and infirm persons, as well as those with small children and limited means, need help at Thanksgiving and Christmas if these holidays are to be happy occasions in accordance with the American tradition.

To help out our less fortunate Winchester friends during the holiday season, gifts of money, food and clothing are earnestly solicited.

Gifts may be sent to the Winchester Community Relief Committee.

Let There Be Light

• IN THE LAST few decades we have come a long way from the gloominess which the Western World seemed to believe to be the only way of honoring the departed. The emphasis on black, the marathon "wakes" which left survivors physically exhausted and psychologically drained, the entire atmosphere of bleak hopelessness, has been greatly softened or even eliminated. The funeral rites are just as reverent, but now as we remember the dead we also consider the living and in warm and gracious surroundings we endeavor to remove some of the sting from their tragedy rather than adding to the burden they must bear.

Rotary District Governor Speaks At Local Club

Addressing the local Rotary Club last Thursday, Fred A. Lawson, governor of this district, linked Winchester Rotarians with more than a half million other business and professional men who belong to Rotary Clubs in communities around the world.

FRED A. LAWSON

"Rotary Clubs are functioning in more than 11,500 communities in 129 countries," he said, "despite the diversity of their languages, customs, political and religious beliefs, they are working toward such mutually desired goals as community betterment, the promotion of high standards in business, and the advancement of world understanding."

Fred Lawson, of Stoneham, was in Winchester making his official visit to the local Rotary Club, one of 35 clubs in his district.

Referring to the program of Carl P. Miller, president of Rotary International for 1963-64, Mr. Lawson said, "This district has been matched with district 469, located in Bolivia, as a means of furthering better understanding and friendlier relations between Rotarians of the two countries. All Rotary districts have been similarly matched.

"Our contacts with our 'sister' district are taking shape, the greatest need at this time being for used English textbooks in the fields of Veterinary Medicine and Agriculture." It is also planned to have an interchange of visits between the two countries at the youth and adult levels.

In the avenue of youth service, Mr. Lawson spoke of the new club for boys that is now a part of the Rotary program. Called INTERACT, it is for boys in the three upper years of high school. "It is a club for international action, as the name implies," he said, "and is designed to turn the attention of young men to service and international understanding."

The first Interact Club to be organized in district 793 was in Wilmington, Mass. It is expected that other clubs will be organized in the near future, to join with the other 141 Interact Clubs now serving as partners of Rotary in 16 countries of the world.

Movies, Children's Book Week At Library

This week, from November 10th to 16th, has been Children's Book Week. Libraries across the United States have been celebrating by calling attention to the special books published within the last year. In Boston at the New England Life Hall the third annual Children's Book Fair offers displays of books from many publishers and talks by authors of childrne's books. In the Children's Room of the Winchester Public Library notable new books have been set aside for the week. "Three cheers for books!"

The movies this week will be Alice In Wonderland and The Little Rooster That Made The Sun Rise. Shown in the Rich Room, the program starts promptly at 7:30 Friday evening, November 15th, and at 10:15 on Saturday morning. Tickets for school children attending the Saturday program will be given out at 10:00 a.m. in the Boys' and Girls' Room.

Martin Erb, of grade 5, acted as chairman of the meeting, which introduced the nominee for office in this service group and heard their personal presentations of why they felt qualified to lead their schoolmates in Red Cross work.

In addition to these talks Kevin McKenzie gave a short discourse about the yard clean-up squad upon which he serves, some poetry was recited by grade 4, there was singing by grade 5, and the following boys then presented "America the Beautiful:" Thomas Betz, Christian McCarthy, Stephen Neergaard, Maurice Ponti, Victor Romano and Paul Swymer.

Nominees heard in speeches were: Paulette Hayford and James Mardulier, grade 6, for president; Ellen Fenoglio, Jane Thompson, grade 5, for vice-president; Karen Connolly, Virginia Lane, grade 4, for secretary; and Brenda Cantillon, Kevin Connolly, grade 4, for treasurer. In the subsequent election Mr. Mardulier and the Misses Fenoglio, Lane and Cantillon were victorious.

The program, which was attended by members of the top four grades, concluded with grade 6 singing "America."

Women Of Epiphany General Meeting

"The Shoes of the Fisherman" has been on the best seller list for some months and everyone who has read it has been fascinated by the story of a future Pope, the first Russian to be elected, of his great humility, and of the inside workings of the Vatican.

Now the women of the parish and the town have an opportunity to hear this book reviewed by the Rev. Harold Bend Sedgwick on Tuesday, November 19, following luncheon. Mr. Sedgwick, former rector of All Saint's, Brookline, St. Thomas., Wash., and Emmanuel Church, Boston, has given many reviews and is known for his penetrating and illuminating comments on current books.

This is an opportunity not to be missed, and the women of the town are cordially invited to this luncheon-meeting. Reservations should be made early with either Mrs. Hildred Prowse, PA 9-1637, or Mrs. Torr Harmer, PA 9-3561.

We are also deeply grateful for the donations to the Heart Association made in memory of our departed loved one.

St. Mary's Mr. & Mrs. Club

The November meeting of the St. Mary's Mr. and Mrs. Club was held on November 6 in St. Mary's Hall.

A large crowd enjoyed a very interesting lecture by Father John J. Mowatt, pastor of the Church of Our Lad yof Kazan, South Boston, about the Byzantine Rite of the Catholic Church. A spirited question and answer session followed Father Mowatt's talk.

Refreshments were served by Mmes. Frank Stevens, Robert Paintor, Frank LaVine, John Fallon, Edward Nadeau, Arthur Mallon, William Kennedy, John Doherty, Donald Bumiller, William Hart, and Philip Coady.

The December meeting will be the annual Christmas dance on December 27. Dr. Andy and Joanne Fichera and their committee are busy making plans for this gala event which has always been a great success. Get your sitter and plan to attend. Further plans will be announced soon.

House Plants From The Good Old Days

FIRST OF TWO PARTS

Chances are you reacted to the title of this article in one of three ways. One you breathed a deep sigh of remembrance; two, you smiled a sagacious grin of "yes, I've heard about those days"; and three, you said: "What were the 'good old days', anyway?"

The aspect of the Good Old Days which I'm concerned with is the house plants made popular during the period.

Those of you who have been around long enough to remember when the living room was called the parlor, and living took place in the sitting room, and when grandmother's house was very a la mode with Victorian furnishings, probably recall that stately plants occupied the place of honor in most rooms.

Graceful Boston ferns, Cast Iron and Bow String Hemp plants, to name a few, are all remnants of that by-gone period.

For quite some time these plants have been overlooked, but they have recently made a welcome comeback. One of the reasons why they have not been used was they "just don't seem to do well in these new houses."

This was for two main reasons. One, during the Good Old Days, houses were heated mostly by hot air systems. Rooms were not only cooler, but humidity was high—almost every hot air furnace had a humidifier attached. Two heavy drapes kept rooms dark, and if sun did shine in, it was through fairly heavy lace curtains.

In houses of the last 30 to 40 years rooms were kept at an even temperature day and night, the air was quite dry, and the more sunlight, the better. Within the past few years, air conditioning has become popular, humidity is now under control, and the trend to putting plants in a place other than on a window sill is back.

Enormous palms, ferns, Oriental evergreens, and other "big" plants are once again fashionable.

The Boston Fern, Nephrolepsis exalta bostoneinsis, most popular of all the ferns, has long bowing fronds with three-eights of an inch wide leaves of equal length on each frond. If given proper care—high humidity, filtered sun, and moist soil, the Boston fern will live long enough so that many fronds grow long enough to reach the floor, with the plant standing on an average height table.

Ferns produce spores on the back-side of each leaf. These spores are not, as is the common belief, plant producers. If a spore falls onto moist soil, a minute flower is formed, which in turn begins the process common to all other flowering plants.

The Cast Iron plant, or Aspidistra, is, believe it or not, a member of the Liliaceae family. (If you remember, tulips and hyacinths also belong to this family.) The plant is a native of ancient China.

It thrives in a dim corner, or at a window behind heavy drapes. If the graceful lanceolate leaves are kept clean, the plant will live almost forever.

Temple Shalom In Medford to Have Torah Weekend

Temple Shalom, Medford Jewish Community Center at 475 Winthrop Street in Medford, will hold a Torah weekend starting after Friday night services, 8:15 p.m., November 22, Saturday night at 8:30 p.m., November 23, and at breakfast Sunday morning, November 24.

Guest lecturer will be Rabbi Max Arzt. Dr. Arzt will speak on, "The Bible, The Book of Human Destiny", "The Inside Story of the New Jewish Publication Society Translation of the Torah", and "The Bible through Rabbinic Eyes".

Rabbi Arzt received his masters degree from Columbia University in 1921, and his Doctor of Hebrew Literature Degree from the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in 1934.

After nearly twenty years in the active Rabbinate, Dr. Arzt joined the staff of the Jewish Theological Seminary in 1939, becoming its Vice Chancellor in 1951, Rabbi Arzt, author of many Talmudic researches, is one among seven scholars at present engaged in translating the Hebrew Scriptures into English for the Jewish Publication Society of America.

WHS Students And Parents to Hear College Officers

Admission officers of three universities will meet in the high school auditorium this evening at 8:00 p.m. for a panel discussion on "Matching the Student and the College." Colleges represented will be Muhlenberg College, Ohio Wesleyan University and Dickinson College. Howard Niblock, principal, will be moderator.

The audience and the panel will receive sample copies of typical high school student records which are sent to colleges when a student applies for college entrance. The admissions officers will evaluate these fictitious records in light of their colleges' admission standards.

Parents, faculty and students are invited to attend. Miles Weaver is chairman of the Parent Faculty Advisory Council which is sponsoring the panel discussion.

Announcement Of Warren Purchase Of Florida Firm

Warren Brothers Company in Cambridge has announced the purchase of the Florida asphalt paving plant and highway construction facilities of Dunn Construction Company, Inc., of Birmingham, Alabama. The announcement was made by Gilman Wallace of 2 Dartmouth Street, president of Warren Brothers Company. Amount of the transaction was not disclosed, but Mr. Wallace said that Dunn operations in Florida had been running at a level of $3 to $4 million annually.

Warren Brothers Company is the nation's largest asphalt paving contractor and also does a substantial amount of portland cement concrete paving. Including its new Florida acquisitions, the company operates 92 paving material plants in 24 states and four Canadian provinces.

Mr. Wallace called the expansion into Florida an unusually promising one in view of the state's current rate of economic growth and favorable climatic factors.

"The Ladies In The White House"

The Fortnightly will be White House conscious on November 25, when they celebrate their American Home Day with a talk, "The Ladies in the White House" to be presented by Alonzo Fields, author of "My Twenty-Two Years in the White House", who was chief butler at that well known Pennsylvania Avenue home.

A special exhibit for this meeting, which is to take place at 1 p.m. at the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church, will be a replica of the White House table setting which will be on exhibition. The display of this perfect ensemble for a dining table will have appeal for the hostess who is to entertain during the coming holiday season. Which president liked scrambled eggs on Sunday night? Which president always dressed formally for dinner? Which White House guest demanded silk sheets? Which famous guest appeared in shirt sleeves for breakfast?

Come and meet the man who knows all these answers and many more.

Dessert and coffee will be served at one o'clock in Gifford Hall at the church. Members and guests are cordially invited.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

"This is Mrs. Henderson," a lady on the phone. "We'd like to add our son Tom to our auto insurance."

"Fine," I said. "But Tom must fill out a form first. Have him stop by." A day later, Tom and his parents dropped in.

I talked with Tom after he filled out the form. "This means," I said, "that you're insured by one of our companies for the injury you may do to others. A car is one of our biggest blessings - yet also, the most dangerous weapon ever entrusted to youngsters. It imposes quite a responsibility on you. Stop and think a minute, how through one small act of carelessness you might snuff out the lives of an entire family like your own. It's quite a sobering thought, don't you think?"

Tom nodded.

"Your folks have always had a good record," I continued. "The kind of record you have is up to you. Let's review a few rules." We did, and then I explained the importance of reporting accidents to the police immediately, not letting other teen-agers drive the car, not driving another teen-ager's car, etc.

"Tom", I said, finally, "Good luck. Let's prove you're a man. Then we'll both be glad that you can drive!"

Association Sunday At Unitarian Church

On Sunday morning, November 17, the Reverend Max Gaebler of the Department of World Church of the Unitarian Universalist Association, will share the service at the Unitarian Church with Dr. Storer.

A native of Watertown, Wisconsin, Mr. Gaebler attended Harvard College, graduating in 1941. He received his S.R.B. degree from the Harvard Divinity School in 1944. He served as Unitarian Minister to students before taking a church. Thereafter, he served as minister to parishes in Westford, Mass., Davenport, Iowa, and Madison, Wisconsin. He is currently on leave of absence from the Madison Unitarian Church to undertake his present special assignment as head of the Department of World Churches.

Mr. Gaebler recently returned from a visit overseas and will speak about the liberal church in other lands. It is a thrilling story to hear about the Unitarian group in the Khasi Hills of India, for instance. A special social hour following the service will be provided by the hospitality committee of the church, Mrs. Anthony Zovickian, chairman.

Cub Pack 506

Cub Scouts of the Mystic School who make up Cub Pack 506 held their monthly pack meeting in the school auditorium on Friday evening, November 1st.

The cubmaster, Robert P. Bigelow, made the following awards: attendance to Dens 5 and 6; inspection to Dens 3 and 6; achievements to Dens 2 and 5; and exhibits to Dens 2 and 4.

An unusual event was that all boys in Den 5 of Mrs. Charles E. Potts, Jr., won their Wolf Badges. They were: Richard Greuter, Charles Potts, David Simeone, John Farrell, George Goolkasian and Eric Strout.

In Den 6 Alan Greene and David Mucci also earned this badge.

Other badges were awarded as follows: Bear Badge to Tom Haffner, Den 2; Lion Badges to David Craven and Ronnie Wilkinson of Den 2; Gold Arrowhead on Bear Badge to David Mucci, Den 6; Silver Arrowhead on Bear Badge to Bill Blackham, Den 2; Gold Arrowhead on Wolf Badge to Mark Capobianco, Den 3; Silver Arrowhead on Wolf Badge to Bill Blackham, Den 2; and Gold and Silver Arrowhead on Lion Badge to David Craven, Den 2.

The log for the month of October was read by Stephen Sewall of Den 3.

The skit for the month was presented by Den 3, which demonstrated the various ways to keep fit in President Kennedy's "Physical Fitness Program."

The roster for the 1963-1964 season for the pack is as follows: Vincent A. Simeone, committee chairman; William P. Coady, institutional representative. Committeemen are Charles W. Craven (treasurer); Roy L. Vercollone (range director); Edward S. Reynolds, M.D. (advancement); Lloyd Butterfield, Michael T. Capobianco, D.M.D., Walter J. Farrell, Jr., and Russell B. Strout. Cubmaster Robert P. Bigelow is being assisted by assistant Cubmasters James W. Blackham, Jr., and Winfield G. Knopf.

Where Is The Greens Sale?

This year the "Yuletide Mart" of the Winchester Home and Garden Club moves to Hadley Hall, Church of the Epiphany. The opening hour is new too: 11 o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, December 4.

The famous sale will offer wares of the same high quality Winchester has come to expect at this event—plus some delightful surprises. Don't forget reservations must be made for the buffet luncheon to be served from 11:30 to 1:30. Mrs. Burton Gove, 89 Bacon Street, PA 9-3540 is in charge of tickets.

Edgell Design Is Chosen by N. E. Afghan Club

At their recent meeting held at the old Paxton Inn, in Paxton, the New England Afghan hound group, now officially known as the Colonial Afghan Hound Club chose for their official seal a design submitted by Mrs. Stephen Edgell, of 8 Sheffield West.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgell and son, Stephen, Jr., attended the meeting and Mr. Edgell was prize winner in a drawing held at that time.

Mrs. Edgell's design shows an Afghan Hound in profile, with lettering above and below in a circular border, giving the club name, with a laurel branch, signifying victory, on either side.

Fortnightly Group Meets

The Literature Committee of the Fortnightly held its first meeting of the club year in the Edgar Rich Room of the Public Library on Wednesday, November 6, at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Ralph Meigs, chairman, warmly welcomed members and friends.

Mrs. Blanche S. Barnard outlined the groups theme for the year, "A Survey of the Field of Fiction in the First Quarter of the 20th Century." Knowledge of his subject so excellently presented was appreciated. A brief discussion followed.

The next meeting will be on Wednesday, December 4 at 2 p.m. A study of Eugene O'Neil and his works will be presented by Mrs. Henry K. Fitts, Sr.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

You've started shopping - we can bet - for you have found the best plan yet. Before last Christmas, you began a club-type Christmas saving's plan. Each week you put a modest sum aside, and now the time has come for you to get the check that will eliminate a later bill.

When the time comes that you need service on your burner, be sure you know a reliable man to call. You will get prompt, courteous, efficient service when you call B. T. Conlon Fuel Service, 27 Lake Avenue, Woburn. Phone WE 3-1720.

Do you think the truth makes good reading? So do we.

It's awfully easy, in editing a newspaper in 1963, to forget the main purpose of a newspaper: presenting the news. The temptation is great to substitute whoop-la for facts, and opinions for reporting. The Globe, we believe, manages to avoid that temptation. We make it a point to present both sides of all the important issues of the day—segregation, state constitutional reform, politics, international affairs—and to present them—in depth—without bias. That's why so many people are switching to The Globe. It'll give you a new outlook—a more balanced outlook—on what's happening in the world today. Try The Globe, at any newsstand, or home-delivered (just phone AVenue 8-8000). Get both sides: get The Globe.

NO NEED FOR A HEAVY FOOT!

For this latest "car of cars" has attained a level of performance you have never before experienced. To be sure, there's greater smoothness and quiet. There is also increased agility and handling ease. And, above all, there's added power, acceleration and responsiveness. There is no need for a heavy foot in this dynamic car!

Cadillac's new performance is the result of many advancements throughout the power train. The engine is new—and it is the most powerful in the car's history. The famous Hydra-Matic transmission has been redesigned to provide the most responsive operation of all time. And a new Turbo Hydra-Matic on some models assures true brilliance of performance.

All in all, Cadillac is more than a hundred ways new. Its new styling is elegant as never before . . . with a divided grille that makes it unmistakable on any highway. Its interiors are unusually luxurious. And its new options include an exclusive Comfort Control* that lets you pre-set interior temperature exactly to your liking—and hold it season to season—while at the same time controlling humidity.

Visit your dealer soon and get ready for a surprise!

"In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death." This passage from Proverbs (12:28) will be read in all Christian Science churches next Sunday. The subject of the Bible Lesson is "Mortals and Immortals."

These lines from the Christian Science textbook will also be included: "It is only by acknowledging the supremacy of Spirit, which annuls the claims of matter, that mortals can lay off mortality and find the indissoluble spiritual link which establishes man forver in the divine likeness, inseparable from his creator" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 491).

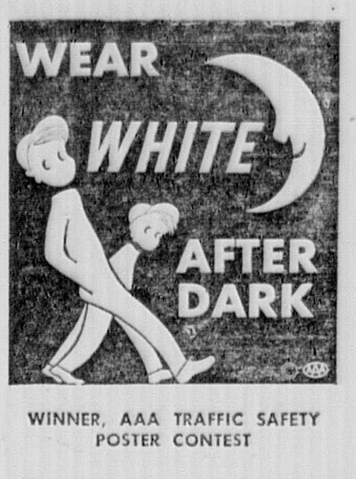
AAA Says Wear White When Walking at Night

Night accidents claimed the lives of 4,300 pedestrians last year, the American Automobile Association reported today in urging school-age youngsters to wear white after dark.



WINNER, AAA TRAFFIC SAFETY POSTER CONTEST

"Wearing white is the greatest safety precaution one can take when out walking at night," said Richard W. Hoover, Safety Director for AAA's Massachusetts Division. "Survival after dark is mostly a matter of seeing and being seen. And a splash of white—whether it's a scarf, cap, gloves, socks, or even a folded newspaper, make the pedestrian more easily visible to the motorist."

Because traffic dangers to children out after dark increase during winter months, the AAA is distributing a new safety poster, Wear White After Dark, to Massachusetts schools as part of its monthly traffic safety education program.

This month's poster, a first-place winner in the AAA National Traffic Safety Poster Contest, was designed by Tracy Connley, 17, of Eastern High School, Washington, D. C.

EMARC Meeting

The East Middlesex Association for Retarded Children (EMARC) will hold their monthly meeting at the Reading Community Center, 52 Sanborn Street, Reading, Wednesday, November 20 at 8 p.m.

Members and friends will divide into groups to discuss the various types of retardation and refreshments will be served by residents of Melrose.

Former Resident, Music Supervisor, Joins Music Group

Eleftherios Eleftherakis, better known here as Ted Janner, former supervisor of music in the Winchester School Department and former resident of Highland Avenue, has just been announced to be an associate of Music Unlimited Associates, of Boston.

Mr. Eleftherakis, a leading musician in the area and at present coordinator of Strings and Orchestra in the Lexington School Department, joins five other Greater Boston musicians as part owner of this music management concern.

A frequent soloist and chamber musician in the eastern part of the United States, he was born in Cambridge and educated in Boston and New York City. After graduating from Cambridge Latin High School, he attended the New England Conservatory before joining the army for war action. Later, he obtained a Bachelor of Music degree at Boston University after playing with the Kansas City Philharmonic and Minneapolis Symphony.

In 1952, Mr. Eleftherakis was named supervisor of music here, a position he held until he went to Lexington last year. Meanwhile, he has appeared as a member of the Cambridge Festival Orchestra and small groups which perform in the Boston Arts Festival, the Fine Arts Museum, Jordan Hall and similar places. Mr. Eleftherakis has extensive pedagogic training in violin, having studied with D. C. Dounis and Rafael Bronstein.

One Act Play Night at WHS Is Next Week

Winchester High School announces its annual One Act Play Night which is to be held Friday November 22, at 8 p.m.

The seniors, who won last year as juniors, are anticipating another successful production with "The Wedding". This play reveals the confusion that takes place before a wedding. Marcia Kimball and Peggy Hoffman direct this fast moving comedy. The senior cast includes: Doug Cann, Chuck Quinn, Sue Tully, Peter Fisher, Betsy McCreery, Juliet Foskett, and Bob Williams.

The Junior play is an abrupt change from the Senior play. "Two Crooks and an Old Lady" is an exciting story about two thieves who attempt to rob an invalid. Polly Farnam and Margee Hickey claim the title of directors for the drama. Ron MacDonald, Sherry Jellison, Kathy Urmson, Irene Lynch, Bob Letty, and Scott Wallace make up the cast for the junior play.

The Sophomores add their share with the delightfully gay adventures of the six young people in "Antic Spring." Patty Overacker and Ellen Becker can take the credit for the direction of Jane Lynch, Lyn Billman, Leslie Wild, David Choate, Bill Chase, and Bill Jonah.

A good deal of credit should be given to the committees who are busy working off stage. Kathy Coakly is the overall chairman for One Act Play Night. The publicity committee headed by Frances Schloman and Claudia Rotundi has planned such activities as making posters, giving announcements from W.H.S.R. as well as Lynch and McCall Junior High Schools.

Gail Murphy and Judy Dunn head up the ticket committee. They will sell tickets at the High School and at the door for a small fee. Head ushers are Ted Longworth and Tom Lapointe. The makeup for the plays will be done by Chris Towner and his committee. Liz Jackson and Julie Knight are the co-chairmen of the talent show, which will be presented after the completion of the three one act plays while the judges make their final decisions about the plays.

All in all the evening will be an enjoyable one. Remember, it's November 22, at 8 p.m. at W. H. S. auditorium.

Open House At Mystic School

In observance of National Education Week, Tuesday evening, November 5, was open house at Mystic School, and parents took the place of their children for one evening as they walked corridors, entered classrooms, and squeezed into students' chairs. Dads and moms browsed through folders prepared by their children, viewed the many displays of artwork, social studies and other subjects that gaily decorated the rooms, and listened to the teachers outline and discuss the curriculum for the year.

This was an evening eagerly anticipated by parents, and Mystic did itself proud with an attendance of 99 per cent.

The harvest theme of the refreshment table in the auditorium, under the supervision of Mrs. Robert Black and her committee, provided a pleasant social climax to the evening.

Marycliff Acad. Winter Bazaar Is On November 23

Marycliff Academy will hold a Winter Wonderland Bazaar, sponsored by the academy's Guild, on Saturday, November 23, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Santa will greet all the boys and girls and a puppet show will be the special feature of the afternoon.

There will be a gala array of tables displaying many beautiful articles for Christmas shoppers. The Apron Table will feature many attractive aprons and pinafores for all ages. A Hat Bar displaying many unusual and gay whimsies will be an added attraction. The Christmas Card table will present "Marycliff Original" cards designed by Mother Borella R.C.E. of the academy's Art Department. Each and every table will have something to please visitors.

Luncheon will be served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and a Spaghetti Supper is planned for the evening, from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The chairmen of the Bazaar are: Mrs. Paul Keleher and Mrs. Angus McAdam of Winchester and Mrs. Leo Russell of Medford. Other Winchester residents on various committees are: Mrs. Frank Inserra, Mrs. Antonio Albiani, Mrs. John Clair, Mrs. Joseph Nunziato, Mrs. Andrew Bubser, Mrs. Albert Maiocco, Mrs. John Martin, Mrs. William McBain and Mrs. Frank Manganaro.

Carol Langstaff Ray Pong Here For Concert Sat.

Ray Pong, an American Ballad singer, who is a medical student at Boston University, will appear at the Folk Concert at the Winchester High School stage this Saturday, November 16, at 8 p.m. Mr. Pong will join Carol Langstaff and the Rainbow Valley Boys in Winchester.

MISS CAROL LANGSTAFF

Miss Langstaff was heard on Channel 2 Television last Wednesday evening in a special Folk Song program heard by many here.

Ray was born in Hong Kong but has received his education in the United States. He started performing folk songs about a year ago when he took up the guitar.

Due to his lyrical voice, a talent which helped him support himself through Dartmouth by performing popular songs in nightclubs, Ray has developed a good following in this area through his performances at Club 47, Cafe Yana, and various college concerts. He has recorded several songs for Veritas Records, which will be released in the near future on Volume II of Folk Singers Round Harvard Square.

This concert is sponsored by the Metcalf Union, high school group of the Unitarian Church. Bob Jones is general chairman and tickets are available at the Winchester Appliance Company, Winchester Drug, and will be on sale at the Unitarian Church on Main Street on Saturday and at the door.

Report To Massachusetts

By Sen. Leverett Saltonstall

How many of us realize that today there are something over 175 objects ranging from satellites to bits of metal pieces orbiting above us? I didn't until I worked on this newsletter. I think it is extremely difficult for the average nonscientific person to keep track of what we are doing in space, but the total effort is extraordinary.

Massachusetts can be proud to claim Dr. Robert Goddard of Clark University, who invented and built the first liquid fuel rocket. His first rocket, launched outside of Worcester, pioneered the development of our future rocket and space satellite programs. Although the Russians launched the first artificial satellite, Sputnik I, in 1957, United States has far surpassed the Soviet Union in number of space probes, orbiting satellites, and yield of scientific information.

Actually the United States has sent over 154 spacecraft into orbit since 1958. This does not include the scores of space probes not launched for orbit. Many of our spacecraft, most notably the manned Mercury capsules, were orbitted and then recovered. At the present time we have approximately 75 military and nonmilitary spacecraft in orbit. We have launched one satellite for the Canadians. To the best of our knowledge, the Russians have orbitted some 40-odd spacecraft, about 10 of which are still going.

The U.S. launched its first satellite, Explorer I, on January 31, 1958. This satellite transmitted for 3 months and discovered the Van Allen radiation belt surrounding the earth. In March of 1958, we launched Vanguard I which, amazingly, is still transmitting at times. Data from Vanguard I revealed that the earth is somewhat pear-shaped rather than a perfect sphere.

Twelve of our civilian satellites, plus the Canadian Alouette, are still transmitting. One of these, the Ariel, was developed by the British and launched by NASA. They are providing vast amounts of scientific and technical information in the fields of communications, meteorology, geophysics and astronomy, and lunar and planetary research, to name a few. The data from these satellites are obtained through a world-wide tracking network. All of this information relates directly to what we know and what we are trying to find out about the earth, its atmosphere, and outer space. We presently have cooperative space projects with more than 50 countries.

It would be impossible here to discuss all of our space probes and satellites, but I would like to mention a few of our most important ones.

In April, 1960, the U.S. launched Tyros I, the first of 7 weather satellites. Three are still transmitting information on vast cloud formations and other meteorological data valuable in weather forecasting. The Tyros satellites have been particularly helpful to us in New England in forecasting hurricane patterns.

In the field of communications, we launched Echo I in August of 1960. This ten-story high reflecting balloon was the first passive communications satellite to relay voice and crude television signals between our two Coasts and the U.S. and Britain.

Telstar I, the first privately developed communications satellite, was launched by NASA for A.T. & T. in July, 1962. This active communication satellite transmitted voice, teletype photos, and television between two continents. Telstar II, launched May 7, 1963, is successfully transmitting black and white and color TV as well as voice messages across the Atlantic.

The Relay communication satellite, sent up some 4,000 miles on December 13, 1962, linked the 3 continents of North and South America and Europe. Its first public demonstration sent pictures to Europe of the opening of the Mona Lisa exhibition at the Washington National Art Gallery. It transmitted the first color television via satellite to home viewers in America.

Syncom II, launched August 26, 1963, is our first experimental communication satellite to get in a 24-hour broadcasting orbit. It is located about 22,300 miles above the South Atlantic and Brazil in a nearly synchronized orbit with the earth's rotation. The first live telephone call via this satellite was between President Kennedy in the White House and Nigerian Prime Minister Balewa through a Navy ship stationed in Lagos harbor. In September Syncom transmitted important oceanographic data between our Bureau of Commerical Fisheries vessel stationed off Africa and the National Oceanographic Data Center in Washington.

The U.S. lunar and planetary probes have proved of major scientific significance. Both the Russians and the U.S. have impacted space vehicles on the moon's surface. Our Ranger IV took three days to travel more than 380,000 miles to the moon's surface in 1962. Our Ranger III and Ranger V lunar probes missed the moon and are presently in solar orbit.

MARINER II, including components developed by the Raytheon Corporation, flew by the planet Venus on December 14, 1962 and extended the space communication record to 54.7 million miles! This satellite has transmitted vast amounts of data about Venus and interplanetary space. Our future space program will attempt to scan Mars. We know that the Russians have failed to date in their Mars shots.

A great many of our space probes and satellites have been sent up to glean scientific knowledge of the earth and its atmosphere. We have launched 17 EXPLORER satellites, one of which is still transmitting. An Orbiting Solar Observatory was launched in March of 1962 and Orbiting Geophysical and Astronomical Observatories are programmed within the next few years.

The U.S. has also launched a number of military space probes and satellites in the last several years. The research and development of many of these programs has been done in Massachusetts. On May 9 the Air Force launched a 50 lb. package of West Ford copper dipole needles to make an orbital band around the earth for transmission of electronic signals over a long distance. Project West Ford was developed by MIT's Lincoln Laboratory and was named after Westford, Massachusetts. Most of the ground communication terminal equipment and the "needles" dispenser were researched, developed, and manufactured by Lincoln Labs with the aid of Massachusetts' subcontractors.

On October 20, shortly after the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty was ratified, two identical experimental nuclear satellites were launched which we hope will pave the way for an operational satellite system to guard against clandestine nuclear testing in space.

Although unmanned space shots are less spectacular and seemingly less newsworthy than the Mercury-Astronaut shots, they are essential to our knowledge of the earth's atmosphere and deep outer space. The Gemini and Apollo programs call for additional manned flights. The newest group of astronauts includes Russell Schweikart, an MIT research scientist, and other MIT graduates. Our Massachusetts industrial-university complex has contributed significantly to our space program in terms of basic research, development, and production. The Raytheon Corp. produces electrometer tubes which are used for radiation measurement on most of the U.S. satellites. Massachusetts companies and institutions have received numerous contracts for research on parts of the Apollo manned lunar landing program.

We are pleased by Massachusetts' contributions to our space science programs and are proud of the U.S. record in space achievements. From these programs we will gain greater knowledge of the universe, the earth's atmosphere, and the earth itself. This is scientific and human progress in which the U.S. has excelled in the past and will continue to excel in the future.

Geographic Briefs

The Congo River and its tributaries drain the huge equatorial basin of central Africa and much of the surrounding plateaus. Total drainage area is 1,450,000 square miles, the National Geographic Society says.

Alexander Graham Bell, Scottish-born inventor of the telephone, filed for American citizenship in 1874 and later counted becoming a citizen the most glorious honor of his life. But in his excited effort to end the first telephone conversation in 1876 with a properly dramatic flourish, he thundered, "God Save the Queen!" The personal story of Dr. Bell and his wife, Mabel Hubbard, is told for the first time in the new book, "Make a Joyful Sound," by Helen M. Waite.

Indian calumets, or ceremonial pipes, were respected symbols used only on special occasions. One end was usually decorated with the head of a bird. Colored feathers were added for special meanings—red for war, green for peace or safe conduct.

The only rainfall in the Namib coastal desert of South-West Africa is a drizzle called moltreen, or moth rain. Though it is too slight to be measured in a conventional rain gauge, filter-paper tests indicate the fall may amount to about 1.8 inches a year.

Living With Your Heart

By Paul D. White, M.D.

Past President of Massachusetts Heart Association and American Heart Association

("Living With Your Heart" is a community service of the Massachusetts Heart Association Greater Boston Chapter)

Despite all the trouble, and the turmoil, and the tumult in the world today, or indeed perhaps for those very reasons, mankind has developed a greater concern for the welfare of all peoples everywhere than ever before in history. This is the spiritual side of the world's heart and is the essential factor that will lead us eventually to universal peace. Not only is this true concern for one's fellowman beginning to replace or at least to supplement the "almightly dollar" as a symbol of the betterment of the international relationships of the U.S.A., but there is happily growing up, and not alone for political reasons, a friendly rivalry of both good will and good deeds among the fortunate nations of the world for those who are still struggling to escape from their difficult life of past ages. I am sure that many of us in the U.S.A. are very anxious to express more than in these simple words our good will towards all peoples, bar none.

It was in such a spirit that medical scientists from every continent, interested especially in diseases of the heart and blood vessels, gathered together in Paris in 1950 to found the International Society of Cardiology. The secretariat of the Society was located from 1950 to 1958 in Geneva where the Society itself was incorporated, and since 1958, in Rome. Although still only adolescent, this association has become one of the most important medical groups in the world's history, including as it does thousands of the leading physicians of all the world, involved not only in medical research and teaching, and public health, but in the actual care of leading citizens throughout the world in all walks of life,— business, the arts, the sciences, education, and government — individuals who are especially susceptible to coronary heart disease, the great modern epidemic.

Following the First Congress in Paris in 1950, there have been three more, the Second in Washington in 1954, the Third in Brussels in 1958, and the Fourth in Mexico City in 1962. The Fifth is planned for New Delhi in 1966. Meanwhile, continental congresses have been held also every four years: in the Americas, in Mexico City, Chicago, Buenos Aires, Havana, and Rio de Janeiro, with Montreal planned for 1964; in Europe, in London, Stockholm, and Rome, with Prague planned for 1964; and in Asia and the Pacific Area, in Manila and Melbourne, with Kyoto planned for 1964. Africa is not yet represented by a Continental Society of Cardiology although there are two National Societies there in Egypt and South Africa; we expect that other such local societies will be established in the next few years.

There are various committees of the International Society of Cardiology whose chief function it is to maintain in a private capacity world-wide activity in cooperative researches and conferences and teaching. In order to afford material and moral aid to such a function during the years between congresses, a foundation was incorporated in Chicago in 1957, in major part to raise money to support these international functions for which the national dues to the international tresaury were not sufficient. Last year (1962) a very important additional committee of laymen was established under the wing of the International Cardiology Foundation to enter into partnership with the doctors, that is, the cardiologists, all over the world. The initial combined meeting of international cardiologists and laymen, representing all continents, was held in Houston, Texas in October, 1962, and the next is planned for Makarska, Jugoslavia, where an interesting and important epidemiological population research is in progress. The new central office of the Foundation is in Boston.

It is our hope and expectation that the doctors and laymen of the world, particularly interested in diseases of the heart and blood vessels, will be able to advance in a major degree our knowledge of the body's circulation and its practical application in all countries, but that in the process of living and working together they will spread friendship and, in joining hands in the struggle against a great common enemy, further world peace. Already during the last few years we are beginning to reap the first fruits of this program which promises high hopes for the future.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Major progress was made this week in efforts to develop improved aircraft for local service. Early in September, I introduced legislation calling upon the Federal Aviation Agency to begin a program of development of a low-cost, short haul plane. Such a plane would make possible a tremendous improvement in the efficiency and economy of air service in New England where we vitally need adequate air service between our cities and access to our rapidly developing industrial community.

The Federal Aviation Agency has now requested proposals from leading United States manufacturers for the design, development and testing of a new aircraft. In a letter addressed to the manufacturers, the FAA requested comments on design and potential market. Their comments will be received later this month by the Agency and will form the foundation of a firm FAA program.

The report which accompanied the request for proposals covers the whole range of possibilities for improved aircraft. Noting that there is no American plane available at the present time to meet our needs, the Agency points out that unless we move into the market we could lose a potential sale of 500 short-haul transport planes to foreign countries. Such a sale would help our balance of payments position; while the need to purchase similar aircraft abroad would have a detrimental effect.

It is estimated that there are now several thousand small aircraft owned by public and private users in the United States which are "old and obsolete, for which replacement is inevitable."

Although the Agency recognizes that the potential market for a short-haul transport is uncertain, it points out that "what is lacking is an initiative to devise the design and illuminate the market for private enterprise to satisfy." A plane which could fit the needs of a variety of potential users should, in the view of the FAA, "be sufficient to induce an enterprising manufacturer to enter this field and to realize a substantial profit over and above development, tooling, and production costs."

Attached to the Request for Proposals is a detailed analysis of specifications for a new design which is intended to form the basis for a program that will develop a "small transport aircraft embodying the highest possible degree of safety, reliability and economy of operation." It includes such specific requirements as low initial cost, simplicity of systems, maximum economy of overall operation, pressurized cabins, good low-speed flying qualities, minimum crew and supporting personnel, and minimum engine noise.

The response of the manufacturers has been encouraging thus far, and will, I feel sure, justify the confidence of the FAA. As the report points out,"the very real requirement for a new short-haul airplane, in the United States and overseas, demands action by the U. S. aviation manufacturing industry. The government can stimulate and encourage this effort, but it is well within the scope of an immensely skilled and talented industry to develop and market a small, economical, short-haul transport."

Local Male Athletes To Battle Girls Varsity In Owen Scholarship Benefit

Tennis stars, an ice hockey coach and a top gymnast will be among the male participants in the WHS faculty-varsity benefit field hockey game at Ginn Field tomorrow, 3:15 sharp to benefit the Laurence Owen Memorial Scholarship.

That the game will be an exhibition is sure. Of what, is somewhat in doubt. From the first bully to the last whistle there should be keen competition in finesse among both female and male faculty teammates, for a special commendation is to be awarded the "outstanding" faculty player at game's close. This "standing out" could be in many ways; but it is hoped that after this afternoon's secret faculty practice it will be in some way related to the none too easy skill of dribbling a ball down the field with a small, round hockey stick and placing it in the opponent's goal.

Faculty coach Jan Collins reports that she has about four or five potential teammates who have played field hockey before. But among her other avid forwards and backs will also be such top local athletic names as Henry Fitts, Frank Finigan, Izzy Battino and Tom Morse, and if Tom doesn't take off across country, Izzy doesn't find a rope to climb, Frank leaves his skates at home and Henry doesn't raise his stick to serve, who knows, the faculty may have a chance.

The game is sponsored by the student body under the leadership of the Student Council to keep up the annual contribution to the the annual contribution to the scho scholarship awarded in Miss Owen's name since June, 1961. This is the year she would have graduated but for the tragedy that took her life and that of her mother and sister as they were flying into Belgium to represent the United States in the international skating competition.

Last Saturday the students canvassed the town in advance of the game for ticket sales and contributions and were highly gratified at the results of the canvass, roughly twelve hundred dollars.

Rain date just in case: November 22, same time.

Co-Captains Elected at Lynch

Coach Frank Provinzano held a meeting with his Lynch Junior High School football squad a week ago for the purpose of electing a captain for the current football squad and results showed excellent choices in back Robert Russon and guard John Martin.

It is Coach Provinzano's custom that acting captains be used throughout the season until the final game against rival McCall Junior High.

This method is adhered to in that Coach Provinzano feels that the boys will get to know and understand their teammates before casting their ballots. It gives the boys, too, the opportunity to elect the type of boy who shows the qualities of good leadership off the field as well as on the field, a good citizen, one who displays the fine acts of a true sportsman and one who is a fine representative of the team and school in which he is a part.

Putting in many hours of practice to yell their team on to victory and to show their loyal support and school spirit are the cheerleaders comprised of Co-Captains Janice Leighton and Jane Sexton, Karen McCormack, Martha Broadhurst, Mary Fenoglio, Mary Ann Hill, Candy Nelson, Becky Irwin, Corlane Crandall, Kim Reeves, Maureen O'Toole, Shelly Swanson, Kathy Quigley and Sharon Keith.

Sachems Meet Wakefield At Wakefield Saturday

Winchester High plays Wakefield Saturday at Wakefield and once again the Sachems will be cast in an under-dog role, though Wakefield has not been the steamroller this year it has been in previous seasons.

Wakefield had its game with Watertown postponed by the weather. The big Scarlet squeaked by Stoneham, 8-6, on Monday, has beaten Lexington, 22-6; and Saugus, 14-8. It has lost to Concord, 14-6, and Belmont, 16-6.

There is nothing in this showing to make Winchester too apprehensive about Wakefield this year, though Winchester's record is not as impressive. The Sachems moved the ball well the first half of their game with Reading, and it took an illegal play to beat them.

Coach Knowlton is still hoping that for once this season his team will pull itself together and play some real football for a change. The Sachems can win if they will do just that.

They have won four times and lost twice. Navy defeated them in 1955, 21-0.

Sachem Sophs Down Reading 12 - 6

Complete Undefeated Season

John Duffy ran back the game's opening kickoff for a 75-yard TD, and later intercepted a pass to set up the second Sachem score as Winchester's sophomore squad defeated Reading last Tuesday at Manchester Field. It was their seventh consecutive victory and marked the conclusion of an undefeated season, Quarterback Whit Gay scored the Sachem's second TD, and John Dolan contributed outstanding defensive play.

Belmont Game Postponed

Winchester and Belmont High Schools will play their annual Middlesex League football game on the Saturday before Thanksgiving, both having an open date on that day.

The game, originally scheduled for last Saturday, was put over to Monday because of heavy rain and wet field. Monday's conditions were no better and Coach Knowlton wisely decided to play the game on the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Playing in the rain, something that used to occur regularly, is no longer done in high school football, the cost of cleaning the uniforms ruling out the play-at-any-cost.

Rain Stops Game But Not Dance

A highly successful inter-school dance opened the Lynch and McCall Schools' social season Friday night at the Lynch cafetorium despite the fact that rain cancelled the annual football game it was to have followed.

Under the direction of Frank Provinzano, of the Lynch School staff and Alfred Meurling, assistant principal at McCall, a large attendance from both schools took full advantage of good records, specialty dances, fellowship and refreshments. Chaperoning for the evening were: Mrs. Frank Equi, Mrs. Mortimer O'Toole, Mr. and Mrs. David Gray and Mr. and Mrs. David Shean.

Scouting Report

WAKEFIELD
Coach: Bill Tighe
'62 Record: 8-0-1

The Warriors have had their problems this year, and as one Wakefield writer put it, "everyone is out to get us." Originally thought to be weak defensively, the opposite has proved true in five games. After licking Reading 28-0 in their opener, the Warriors then proceeded to lose to Concord (6-14) and Belmont (6-16). They, however, rebounded two weeks ago, downing Lexington 22-6. Traditionally, the Sachems have always had their problems with Wakefield, even the best of years. This year should be no different. Speedy halfback Dick Encarnacao and end Tom Stuetzer will be pressing and dangerous. Others to watch are Ron Melonson, a linebacker, and Bill Verrior, a tackle.

Indian Tracks

BY FRANK PROCOPIO

There is nothing very unique about a reunion; at one time or another almost everybody attends one. But last Sunday night at St. Anthony's Hall in North Woburn there did occur a very unique sort of reunion; unique because it brought together not an old high school or college group, but a collection of men who, back in the early 1930's, devoted their spare time to playing football.

Actually there were two groups, one each from Woburn and Winchester. The Woburn contingent has held several previous reunions, the last two coming in 1952 and 1957. This year they decided to invite their southeasterly neighbors and arch rivals, Winchester. So for some, now glaring across long white banquet tables and searching for some recognizable trait in some familiar face, it had been thirty-three years since they last met on some mud-splattered gridiron.

Town teams of the 30's were in themselves unique. You don't see many of them today because people generally seem more cautious and insurance-minded, and less self-confident and individualistic. Today, a young man risking injury requires either a great deal of monetary compensation, or the shrill cries of admiration from several hundred females. Apparently gone is the era where you played football purely for the love of playing. About this, the members of both teams are exceedingly selfish and proud. Because of this, I felt a singular pride of my own. Age-wise I had nothing in common with these men, but where the philosophy of football was concerned we had much in common.

Sitting at the head table, Ned Murray introduced the Woburn group and was followed by Angelo Tofuri who called off the names of the Winchester players. One by one they stood and were applauded; and it was a good thing to do because all too often we wait until it is too late to applaud those we appreciate: Arka Amico, Frank Amico, Arthur Capone, Tony Chefalo, Charlie Doherty, Ralph Del Grasso, Carmine DeMinico, Frank Ferrina, Jim "Five Yards" Flaherty, Frank Frongillo, Arthur Haley, Oscar Lombard, Roy Horn, Wilfred "Jocko" Prue, Daniel "Christy" Pearson, Gordon Cummings, Henry O'Melia, Harry Boyle, and Mike Penta. Not in attendance were, Neil Kerrigan, Joe Quigley, Sam Corbi, C. R. "Court" Campbell, Bill Walden, Bill Elliott, Tony Lentine, Ralph Horn, Harry Chefalo, Don McCarthy, and Emilio "Babe" Tofuri.

A moment of silence was observed for six deceased members, four of whom were, John McNeil, Edward Fleming, Maynard McDonnell, and William Carroll, all of Winchester.

And a touch of impromptu humor when Jim "Five Yards" Flaherty was presented with an inscribed football and tattered No. 5 jersey, a token of the esteem in which he is held by his coworkers on the Winchester Police Department.

What kind of a team did these "old-timers" have? If you want precise and analytical answers you may ask Jim Penaligan and Wendell Mansfield, two of the Town Team's most ardent supporters. But if you're just plain curious, here is a sampling from the schedule of 1930:

Winchester	0	Hull 0
Winchester	6	Somerville 0
Winchester	10	Forest Hills 0
Winchester	6	Bedford 0
Winchester	6	Concord 0
Winchester	13	St. John's (Camb.) 0

Winchester	0	Dedham 13
*Winchester	0	Woburn 0

x Won by default.
* Called at end of three periods because of blizzard.

S.O.I. Women

Strike Lanes provided the bowlers something new last week. That's right "golfing." The gals that tried it out seemed to be enjoying it. I understand a few golf widows in our league have decided to take up golf along with their bowling. Time will tell if it helps their bowling or not.

Back to bowling now! Alleys 9 and 10 saw some real excitement. L. Dattilo's 111 and 112 strings. There's a gal whose ball is just meandering down the alley and then in its gentle way spreads those pins to a nice count. What technique! Not bad Laura. Let's make the 3 strings over 100 each next week, as I would love to write about you again. Good luck!

And what happened to Peggy Fiore when she went down on all fours? Were you trying to pray the pins down Peg? Well, I guess that's one way of doing it. If it helps keep it up.

Boy, Kools sure had it tough last week. I guess the team forgot their Wheaties. They are still top team, but only one point from the Newports. It just wasn't the night for either of the two top teams, as they both lost 8 points each. Kools will sure have to work like mad to stay up there.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

Capt. Moose Bellino not only kept his Notre Dame team on top of the list but came through by breaking Frank Provinzano's high single of 154 when he rolled an excellent first string of 164 followed by strings of 109-106. His teammates Angie Amico and Dan Gattineri had a big part in N.D.'s 8-0 victory over last place Penn when they bowled respective scores of 114-107-115 and 93-122-98. Losing Penn's sole 300 hitter was John Frongillo with 83-116-103.

Yale moved up one notch to second spot despite its 4-4 split with eleventh place Maryland. Top performer in this match was Maryland's Woozy Giacalone with 115-120-107 while teammate Gaspar Lentine finished up with 111-118-89. Strong men for Yale were Mario Saragosa with 113-98-116 and Capt. Richie Bucci 107-97-100.

Bates lost 8-0 to sixth place California to be dropped one place to third in the standings. Going great guns for the victors were Capt. Dick Trabucco with 122-115-105 and Charlie Gangi 91-136-78. Capt. Bob Fiore was the only 300 hitter for losing Bates with 112-130-84.

Army took tenth place Georgetown 6-2 to climb from fifth to fourth in the win and loss column. Cadet Choppers Gangi hit for 97-136-112 to be the only roller in the match to go over the 300 mark while Cadet Correction Fiore missed by one pin with 86-113-100 and Georgetown's Tony Chefalo was seven short with strings of 109-92-92.

Navy lost 2-6 to twelfth place St. Mary's and as a result was lowered from fourth to fifth place. Having a good night for the victors was Capt. John Mangano who had strings of 89-113-113. Navy's Capt. Richie Riga hit for 101-109-112 and next to him was Mario Mascioli 119-91-88.

Seventh place B. C. defeated 8th place Holy Cross 8-0, but the win could be costly the next time out because believe it or not Tony Saraco, B.C.'s captain, ended up as low man for the night even though his strings were 91-99-93. Going strong for his team were Max La Carubba 102-108-112, Andy Buzzotta, 99-102-115, Giro Cerulli 98-92-115 and Mario Lentine 90-109-89. Muskie Tofuri knocked them over for 105-114-96 to lead his H. C. unit.

Alabama and Harvard split 4-4 which moved Harvard from eighth to ninth as Alabama climbed one notch out of the cellar position. Harvard's sharpshooters were old reliable Hokie Procopio 104-105-133 and Tony Lentine 113-122-102 while doing well for Alabama were Capt. Dick Tofuri 109-88-131 and Jay Cammarata 98-104-101.

Homefronters Ask For Service Names

Once again the Winchester Homefronters have started their pleasant task of packing boxes for Christmas for those who are serving their country in the armed forces.

It is important to have the correct addresses of the men and women who are on active duty throughout the world so that they may receive one of these unique boxes. It is hoped, therefore, that the application form in this paper will be filled out and sent to the Winchester Public Library.

Fenton Norris has again generously offered his annex for the project of packaging and anyone who is interested in helping is most urgently invited to drop in. For information, please phone Mrs. Leslie Nadeau, chairman, PA 9-1893.

Winchester Youth Hockey Opens

The Winchester Youth hockey season opens Sunday morning, November 17, at the M.D.C. Rink, Stoneham-Medford line at 7 a.m.

There is still time to get your application in if you plan to attend these sessions.

For information call PA 9-1327.

Crux of Teacher Education to Be Lecture Subject

Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Columbia University's famed Teachers College, will discuss "The Current Controversy in Teacher Education" at a meeting to be held at 7 p.m. at the Harvard Club, 374 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, on November 22.

Dr. Fischer's remarks are being anticipated with more than passing interest because he heads the leading teacher-training institution in the country, and because of the recent critical report, now widely distributed and publicized under the authorship of Dr. James B. Conant, former President of Harvard University.

Reservations are five dollars each, and they must be made in advance by telephone or mail to Dr. Raymond Ostrander's office in the School of Education of B. U. 322 Bay State Road.

Since the subject under discussion is of widespread interest, educators and interested laymen may attend the lecture up to the limit of the space available.

"Never before in history have so many people in all walks of life been so much interested in education," Dr. Ostrander points out. "The kind of teachers we can employ to man our schools will largely determine the quality of education our youngsters receive," he said. "We are looking forward to President Fischer's visit as a contribution to our understanding of modern trends in teacher education."

The dual attractions of a fine talk, "Significant Choices During the Teen Years", by a noted psychologist, and the opening of the annual Country Store, should bring all members of the St. Mary's Mothers' Club and much of the general public to St. Mary's Hall on Wednesday evening, November 20 at 8 p.m.

Dr. Alexander Schneiders, a professor of psychology at Boston College and a specialist in writing, public speaking, marriage counseling and psychotheraphy will speak on "Significant Choices During the Teen Years". Refreshments will be served, and the famous Country Store will take place immediately after Dr. Schneiders' talk.

Mrs. John W. O'Grady, chairman of the Country Store says, "D Day is here, Friday, November 15th is the deadline for your returns. Please contact your area captain or Mrs. O'Grady, they will be happy to hear from you. How about it?"

The committee has worked very hard to make this a most enjoyable and enlightening evening, and it is expected that everyone will accept the invitation to this interesting meeting. Don't forget, bring your friends and join us.

Although medical science has long devoted much time and effort to dredging up a cure for the common cold, the magical cure may still be a rather distant dream.

Recent research now lays the cause of most colds at the doorstep of a virus called COXSACKIE A-21, a slum-dweller of the intestinal tract, which is one of over 214 strains of viruses in its group.

If nothing else, the suspected link between viruses and common colds has been verified and this should narrow the gap between the cold and its eventual cure.

While we're all waiting around for this magical cure, McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY will continue to fill any and all prescriptions with exacting care. Prescriptions are something of a specialty at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700. 24-hour prescription service. Free local delivery.

Winchester Highway Department Finishes The Year's Projects

With real winter weather a mere matter of weeks away now, the Winchester Highway Department has been finishing up on its regular yearly programs and the special Town Meeting articles of 1963 in anticipation of taking on its winter ice and snow chores.

For the past few weeks the department's workers have been putting snow plow units on some of the trucks, and tuning up the salting machines. This year the salters will continue to spread the same amount of salt on the icy streets as it has in the past few years. However, because of the large number of complaints about the quantity of salt on the sidewalks, and the controversy stirred earlier this year by some who believe the salt to be the killer of the maple trees which have been dying recently, James Wakefield, superintendent of the Highway Department, said he would have the sidewalks sanded instead of salted this year.

Also during the winter months, when weather permits, the Highway Department will do a certain amount of surface drainage construction around town.

From now until the end of the month, Mr. Wakefield said the Highway Department would be finishing up the grading and loaming of the Shore Road Field, which is scheduled to be seeded and fertilized by the Park Department next spring.

The seven and one-half acre Shore Road Field project was begun in 1962 with the loading of sections bordering the northern side opposite Nelson Street and going towards Spruce Street. Last April the field was loaded with four feet of sand fill from the northern side all the way back to Skillings By-Pass, and then after settling, the top three feet were removed, section by section, and covered with a foot of loam. The field is to be an athletic area for McCall Junior High School.

The widening and resurfacing of Lake Street from Main Street to the hill near Wedge Pond, which was begun a year ago, was completed in the last week of October. The Highway Department widened the street by about eight feet and covered it with bituminus concrete, installed curbing, and put in five foot sidewalks.

The state-county-town Chapter 90 Highway Improvements work approved by the 1962 Town Meeting for Ridge Street up to Johnson Road was completed in July.

And in the regular programs performed annually by the Highway Department, this year the department installed about 5600 feet of curbing...mostly in the Winchester Estates, Kenwin Road, Dix and Irving Street areas, put in about 1200 square yards of sidewalk concrete...mostly on Lake Street, and repaired 2300 square yards of existing concrete sidewalks...mostly in the Main, Church, Washington, Mt. Vernon, and Bacon Street areas, made road repairs on High Street and Hutchinson Road, and laid 1500 feet of drain...mostly in the Cemetery, Shore Road, and Holland, Lochwan and High Street areas.

This year the Highway Department acquired three new pieces of equipment. In July the Town purchased three trucks: two Ford 950 (4-5 ton) and one Ford 600 (2 ton) dump trucks to replace vehicles that were up to 10 years old at a cost of $15,599.

Local Merchants Give 20 Turkeys Away To Patrons

The Winchester Merchants Association, meeting at the Elks Hall on 12 Elmwood Avenue at 7:30 Monday night, held the drawing for 20 free 15-pound turkeys which will be given away by the 48-member association.

Ed Williams, president of the association, and Ed Cullen, a director, drew the names of the 20 persons who won turkeys. The winners will receive certificates by the stores in which they registered last Friday and Saturday, and which will entitle them to receive free turkeys.

Thanksgiving Eve Union Service At Unitarian Church

On Wednesday evening, November 27, in the chancel of the Winchester Unitarian Church, the combined choirs of Winchester will present a choral program at 7:30 p.m. which will be preceded by the playing of the Downes Memorial Carillon by Mary Ranton Witham, director of Music at the Unitarian Church.

Nine clergymen from the Winchester Protestant Churches will participate in the service, which has been a tradition in town for many years, taking place in a different church each year.

The Reverend Stephen C. Walke, the new assistant rector of the Church of the Epiphany will preach.

The pre-service program will be sung from the Christmas Oratorio by St. Seans, including Trio, Quartette and Finale. The first anthem will be "The Twenty-Third Psalm" set to a Scotch melody and the second anthem will be "And the Glory of the Lord—Messiah" by Handel.

WINCHESTER HEALTH PROBLEMS. Two declared health nuisances, the pigeons nesting at the overpass bridge at the Center and the messy Wedgemere Depot, are finally reaching the action stage. The Board of Health has issued abatement orders on Wedgemere owners, and plans to issue similar orders within a week to have the nuisance birds de-nested.

UF Advance Gifts In Winchester Go 'Over Top' by 6%

Winchester residents who are listed by the United Fund as Advance Gifts prospects have responded well to this year's campaign, Fund Headquarters reports. Contributions so far amount to $30,833, better than 6% above the $28,968, received by the Advance Gifts solicitors from the same people last year.

Over 36% of those Winchesterites whose advance gifts have been reported have increased their contributions to this year's campaign. "The Town should indeed be proud of such a record," a Fund spokesman said.

"Undoubtedly these people realize that the whole philosophy of the United Fund is at the crossroads," the Fund spokesman declared. "Unless a substantial step is taken to close the gap that has existed between the needs of the 200 agencies served by the United Fund and the amount that has been raised heretofore, there is a very real danger of a return to the chaos of a multiplicity of individual fund-raising campaigns.

"If the rest of the Greater Boston community is as convinced of the value of the assistance rendered by the 200 service, health and welfare agencies which comprise the United Fund, the residential campaign now underway will also be successful, and the 1964 United Fund drive will reach its goal of $10,100,000."

Gattineri's Name New Building In Honor Of Father

Nearly 1000 persons appeared at the open house, dedication and blessing of the new Fashion Cleaners building at 18 Swanton Street on Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5. The new building was dedicated to John Gattineri of 17 Maple Road by his two sons, Joseph of the same address and Danny of 21 Baldwin Street.

Among those who appeared at the 3 p.m. ceremony was Selectman John Lyman, who brought the congratulations of the Town to the owner of the Fashion Cleaners; Ed Williams, president of the Winchester Merchants' Association, who brought the compliments of the Town's business establishments; former Governor John A. Volpe, and many others.

Robert Maietta, master of ceremonies for the occasion, told how Mr. Gattineri came to Winchester in 1923 at the age of 33 from Abrucci, Italy, to practice his tailoring trade. He opened a small shop on Main Street, then moved opposite Symmes Grain and became the first shop in Winchester with a steam press.

Mr. Maietta noted that Mr. Gattineri obtained his citizenship papers in 1929, and then moved to larger quarters in the building known as the Browning Labs when making garments for a large distributor.

Appeal Board Grants Controversial Permit

The Winchester Board of Appeal reluctantly handed down a decision recently that will permit Oneida Corporation to construct a single family residence at 3 Emerson Road. The case instigated considerable discussion in the Emerson Road area, and a number of persons appeared to speak in opposition to the appeal at a public hearing in the Town Hall on Tuesday, July 9. The case also carried important By-law ramifications.

Although the hearing was in July, the formal rendering of a decision was held up pending receipt and examination of certain documentary evidence relating to the ownership of the property in question.

The board said in its decision: "Although we are reluctant to do so, and deplore the means which have been used here to obtain a lot in excess of (the Single Residence District requirement of) 10,000 square feet, we hold that the panhandle portion of 1912 square feet (adjoining the main area) must be included in computing the total area of the lot, and hence that the appeal must be allowed."

The plot plan filed by the appellant with the building commissioner's office showed the house site as complying with the By-laws' requirements as to width, set-back, distance from lot lines and street frontage. The question before the board was whether the lot satisfied the area requirement.

The lot is shaped much like the state of Oklahoma. To a roughly rectangular base of approximately 8,582 square feet was appended a "panhandle" or sliver of land extending in a northerly direction for approximately 119 feet. This panhandle has an area of 1912 square feet; it is 29.6 feet wide at its northernmost extremity and 4 feet wide at the spot where it joins the principal rectangular portion of the lot. The westerly side of the rectangular portion fronts on Emerson Road and the southerly side is bounded by High Street.

An earlier hearing involving this same land occurred before the Board on March 12, 1963. At that time Oneida Corporation was the owner of the adjoining lots at both numbers 3 and 5 Emerson Road.

Oneida then requested a special exception under Section 8A allowing it to build on a lot consisting of the rectangular portion only—minus the panhandle—of lot number 3. This portion had an area of only 8,582 in a zone requiring 10,000 square feet.

The request was denied because the conditions for a special exception under Section 8A did not ex-

Health Board Orders Abatement Of Pigeon, Wedgemere Nuisances

Quick action is anticipated by the Winchester Board of Health in the resolving of two declared local health nuisances. The board, after waiting a "reasonable time" for communications relative to intentions to satisfy complaints registered by it on conditions at the Wedgemere Station and with the pigeon problem at the overpass, finally on Tuesday morning issued abatement orders to the parties responsible or involved in allowing the Wedgemere nuisances to persist, and plans to send more on the pigeon nuisance.

With the issuance of the abatement orders, the nuisances must be abated within seven days, or else a satisfactory answer must be received by the board in that time. If the parties fail to respond, they may face court action for violating the General Laws of the Commonwealth in not complying with an abatement order.

The action this week came about as a result of several conferences between the Board of Selectmen and the Board of Health. On Monday night the two boards met and decided that the leverage of the Board of Health's broad statutory powers should be used to effect a clean-up of the health nuisance and potential health hazard at the Wedgemere Railroad Station, and at the same time resolved that the pigeon problem should receive quicker attention than has been accorded the Wedgemere problem.

Therefore, on Tuesday morning, Michael D. Saraco, agent for the Board of Health, sent out by certified return-receipt mail two separate abatement orders to have the nuisance abated. Abatement orders went to the Boston and Maine Railroad and the Construction Machinery Corporation (care of Edward F. Connors of 2A Fernway) for improving health conditions at Wedgemere Depot, and similar abatement orders will go to the Boston and Maine Railroad and the State Department of Public Works for abating the pigeon health nuisance at the overpass in the Center within a week if that complaint hasn't been answered.

Mr. Saraco noted that in the Wedgemere Depot case, the Town's agreement with the railroad holds the railroad responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of the station and grounds. However, since the railroad sold the property to the Construction Machinery Corporation, the railroad claims that Mr. Connors assumed that responsibility. But, Mr. Saraco said, as far as the Town is concerned the railroad is still the prime responsible party. Both are liable for compliance to the abatement order, he added.

In the recently publicized pigeon health nuisance case, Mr. Saraco said, the railroad claims it does not own the overpass over the Center because the State Department of Public Works never released it to the railroad after it was built. The D.P.W. has not answered this claim, according to Mr. Saraco. "Therefore," he said, "they can battle the ownership of the overpass out in the courts."

In both the present and anticipated abatement cases, those receiving the orders must comply within seven days, or the courts can set up to $20 a day fine for every day it is not satisfied, and if compliance is not then forthcoming within a given period of time set by the court, involved parties can be jailed for court contempt.

TownGovernment Gears Machinery To Town Meeting

With earlier deadlines set this year for the submitting of town department budgets and special articles for the next annual Town Meeting in March, every board, committee, and department concerned with the operation of the local government has for many weeks—and in many cases for months—been gearing its schedule to accommodate preparations of budgets and planning reports and advisory opinions.

Earlier this year, prompted by a request from the Finance Committee, which has to review all budgets and articles requiring appropriations, the Board of Selectmen moved the deadlines for town budgets ahead to Sunday, December 15, and for special articles for the warrant ahead to Monday, December 30.

State Continuing Investigation Of Local Arson Case

Local police and fire officers are continuing their investigation from Winchester into the arsonist-set fire at 51 Vine Street three weeks ago on October 28, and giving information to the State Fire Marshal's Office, Department of Public Safety, which is actively pursuing the case.

Sgt. Andrew Crawford said the Police Department believes the arsonist was not a Winchester person and was in no way of local origin. He said all indications connect the incident with an out-of-town business source, and that the arsonist, unfamiliar with the area, set fire to the wrong house. In any event, he said, the area has been kept under close surveillance to prevent any recurrence of the arsonist's activity here.

Capt. Peter Galuffo said fingerprints were obtained from one of the containers that carried a combustible mixture used for setting the fire.

Century Long Overpass Controversy Ended 10 Years Ago

What would be your reaction if someone suggested eliminating the railroad overpass bridge at the Center and return the site to its old grade crossing as it was ten years ago?

Most people would react in the same manner that Police Chief Joseph Derro and Fire Chief Frank Amico did when asked that question last week: they agreed that such a return to "the old crossing" would endanger the public safety in many ways. Both mentioned that the grade crossing was a potential hazard to children and adult pedestrians as well as to autos that crossed the tracks every day. Also they noted that occasionally police and fire apparatus were delayed crucial seconds and minutes in getting to emergencies when trains were passing through the Town and the gates were down.

But ten years ago yesterday, November 20, 1953, the townspeople were split and sharply divided into camps of opposing views on the highly controversial issue of that time as to whether or not the State Department of Public Works should be allowed to construct the railroad overpass that is now located in the Center. On that day, the townspeople supported the members of the limited Town Meeting, held October 22, when it was voted 143 to 23 to approve the overhead tracks plan for the elimination of the grade crossing. By a count of 2982 voting Yes, against 2109 voting No, the overpass was finally accepted by the Town.

A November 27, 1953 issue of the Star had this to say on the referendum and controversy: "In view of the advance interest, and the heat of the campaign over the weeks since the special meeting in October...This year's campaign was fully as hot as its predecessor (April of 1952, where 3120 voters supported the plan and 1742 opposed, which was consistent with the March Town Meeting of that year which voted 151 to 1 for the overpass), with every possible effort being made to reach the voters, including advertising in the newspapers, telephone solicitation and the distribution of pamphlets and flyers to householders...The going got pretty heavy toward the end of the campaign with each side accusing the other of misrepresentation and each side battling hard right up to the very last minute."

Two large political advertisements which appeared on the front page of the November 13 Star carried the basic arguments for and against the overpass that prevailed at that time.

One ad, placed by the Committee For Grade Crossing Elimination and Traffic By-Pass, read:

"One century of indecision is enough! VOTE YES to eliminate the grade crossing and divert through traffic from the center.

"Do you know? 1. 27,000 vehicles a day cross the tracks. 2. 96 trains each day pass through the center. 3. Gates down nearly 3 hours every day. 4. Fire apparatus delayed 7 times already in 1953. 5. At least 43 deaths as result of accidents on railroad tracks including 2 fatalities and several near accidents the past ten years. 6. This plan allows safe passage across the square at all times at the present grade. 7. All other plans to eliminate the grade crossing require closing all streets at the center. 8. You have already paid in taxes Winchester's entire contribution of $190,000 and the transfer of this sum will not require any future taxation. 9. The State's share has already been set aside from the 1952 Highway Bond Issue which is financed by gasoline taxes. 10. If we do not accept this project the money will be spent elsewhere for some similar project. 11. After public hearing and 3 and one-half hours of discussion at Town Meeting your representatives voted 143-23 in favor of this project. 12. It is now or never.

The other ad in that pre-referendum Star issue, opposing the overpass, read:

"Time for decision was last November. We voted overwhelmingly for lower taxes and sensible expenditure of our tax money. Our state taxes are now...Wages 2 and one-half percent, Annuities 1 and one-half percent, Taxable gains 6 percent, Interest and Dividends 6 percent...Above totals PLUS 20 percent General Fund, PLUS 3 percent old age, PLUS gasoline tax, tobacco tax, etc., PLUS. Can we dare hope for a reduction?

"Can we afford to let our state officials spend 6-10 million dollars to keep open 60 FEET OF STREET when they could build 30-50 MILES of Highways for the same money? Highways can be put OVER or UNDER the railroad tracks for less than two million dollars. With positive savings of millions of dollars should we not insist that the Department of Public Works work out plans to make this saving?

"Regardless of the plan, with recession years ahead, IS THIS THE TIME for this type of project? The overhead railroad plan is nowhere near complete, even today, but as proposed so far will cost Winchester nearer $350,000 than $190,000. CAN WE AFFORD IT?

"WE MUST PROVIDE SCHOOLS. Our immediate school building program will cost approximately: converting junior high to senior high, $1,900,000; converting senior high to junior high, $400,000; addition to Parkhurst School, $225,000; making a total of $2,525,000.

"The program will necessitate spending above Winchester's present ability to borrow; Winchester tax rate 1953, $42; fair estimate 1954-55, $47.

Children's Clinic Invites Public To Open House

The Mystic Valley Children's Clinic will hold open house at its new quarters, 22 Muzzey Street, Lexington, on Sunday, afternoon, November 24, from 3 until 5 p.m., it was announced this week by Mrs. James Wingate, president of the Winchester branch of the Mental Health Association.

Invitations have been sent to MHA members, town officials, physicians, the clergy, social agencies and guidance personnel, heads of civic organizations, and state legislators. All other interested persons are urged to attend, according to Mrs. Wingate.

Opened in November, 1958, the Mystic Valley Children's Clinic is jointly operated by the Massachusetts Division of Mental Health, which provides salaries and supervision of the professional staff, and the Mystic Valley Mental Health Ass'n, of which the Winchester association is a branch. It serves the five communities of Arlington, Bedford, Lexington, Winchester and Woburn, providing diagnosis and treatment of emotional disorders of children and consultation with those responsible for their care.

Operating expenses, subsidized for nearly five years with money mostly from United Fund and allocated for demonstration purposes by the Massachusetts Association for Mental Health, are now mainly derived from local tax funds. As the result of a campaign of public information by the local branch associations last spring, tax support was voted by the town meetings of Bedford, Lexignton and Winchester, the School Committee of Arlington, and the City Council of Woburn.

The clinic moved from 19 Muzzey Street, Lexington to larger quarters at 22 Muzzey Street on August 1. The offices of the Mystic Valley Mental Health Association, Inc., formerly at 7 Depot Square, Lexington, also moved to 22 Muzzey Street.

Dr. Morton B. Newman assumed the position of director of the Mystic Valley Children's Clinic on July 1. Formerly with the Douglas A. Thom Clinic for Children in Boston, Dr. Newman is also instructor in psychiatry at the Tufts University Medical School.

Other members of the MVCC professional team are: Norman Goldstein, Ph.D., chief psychologist; Mary San Martino, M.S.S.W. chief psychiatric social worker; Elinor Warshaw, staff psychiatric social worker; Mrs. Richard Weckstein, M.A.; and Mrs. Iris Fodor, M.A., mental health coordinators.

Transportation for any person interested in attending may be arranged by calling Mrs. Paul Fitzpatrick, PA 9-5996.

Among those serving from Winchester as officers, directors and professional advisors are: Mrs. Joseph M. Keville, school adjustment counselor; Mrs. David Beal; Mrs. Joseph P. Lynch, Jr.; Mrs. James Willing; Dr. Warren J. Taylor, Winchester Board of Health; Mrs. Rita Plummer, public health nursing; Dr. Andrew J. Fichera; and Miss Constance Trickett, dean of girls, WHS.

Family Service For Unitarians

At 10:40 on Sunday morning the Senior Choir of the Unitarian Church will present a special program of choral music preceding the Family service at 11:00. Young people in grades 1 through 12 will attend the service with their parents. Pre-school classes will meet as usual.

Mr. Herbert Rondeau, parent and physicist will assist in the service and Dr. Storer will preach "An Old Sermon." Members of the Junior Choir under the direction of George Blair Jr., will sing and the Motion Choir will present an original interpretation of the Thanksgiving theme.

The girls in the Motion Choir are: Martha Kimball, Suzanne Fontneau, Susan Peckham, Patricia Westwater, Sandra Matthews, Faith Barker, Patience Barker Laurel Thayer and Marilyn Zimmer. Mrs. Virginia Huffine is the director. Offerings of food will be brought by the young people to be distributed to our less fortunate neighbors by the Town Welfare Department.

Dental Research Is Subject For Mothers of Twins

The Founding Chapter of the Massachusetts Mothers of Twins Association, Inc., will meet on Monday, November 25, at 8 p.m. in the Junior Hall of the Robbins Library in Arlington Center.

Mrs. Penelope S. Peckos, an instructor in Nutrition at the Harvard School of Public Health, will speak on "Nutrition Today" and will also bring the club up to date on the Forsyth Twin Study, a research program being conducted by Forsyth Dental Infirmary in which the members of the Mothers of Twins Association are participating.

All mothers and grandmothers of twins in the Winchester area are invited to attend. Kindly call Mrs. Albert Mooradian at PA 9-1873 for further details.

Dial-a-matic adding machine. For small offices, home use, income tax, etc. Six dials, answers appear automatically. Also subtracts. Priced at $4.00 at the Winchester Star.

Charles P. LeRoyer

Charles P. LeRoyer of 2 Elmwood Avenue, a long time resident of Winchester and a veteran of World War I, died Thursday morning, November 14, at the Winchester Hospital after a long illness. Flags on the Common and Town buildings were displayed at half-staff in his honor.

Mr. LeRoyer was the son of Louis H., and Marie (Douvrey) LeRoyer. He was born October 31, 1888, in Montreal, and was until his retirement a salesman for Hedges and Mathies, manufacturers of construction machinery.

During World War I he served in the Army Air Corps with the rank of 2nd lieutenant. He lived for many years on Sheffield Road, later on Yale Street, and then on Glen Road. He was a devotee of curling and was one of the earliest members of the Boston Curling Club. He was also active in curling for many years at the Winchester Country Club. In recent years he had been an active sailor at Conomo Point in Essex where he spent his summers.

Mr. LeRoyer's wife, the former Rhoda A. (Young) died January 1. He leaves three sons, Dr. Charles P. LeRoyer, Jr., of West Hartford, Connecticut; Henry L. LeRoyer of Raynham Center and Maxime F. LeRoyer of Ipswich; also 10 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were held Saturday at 2 o'clock at the Unitatian Church. The minister, Dr. Robert A. Storer, officiated. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

John B. Nichols

John B. Nichols of Sims Road, Manomet, a former resident of Winchester and step-father of Royce Randlett of this town, died suddenly Thursday, November 14, after being stricken at his home.

Mr. Nichols was 84 years old and a native of Province of Quebec, Canada. He lived in Winchester from 1938 to 1943, first on Lagrange Street, and later at 90 Church Street. He left Winchester to take up residence in Watertown in 1943, and in recent years had made his home in Manomet.

For many years Mr. Nichols was a supervisor for the H. P. Hood and Sons Company of Boston, retiring in 1949. He was a member of Pequassett Lodge of Masons in Watertown.

He leaves his wife, the former Mary Randlett Nichols; a son, Carson H. Nichols of Keene, New Hampshire; a daughter, Mrs. Libbie Mitchell of Topeka, Kansas; and six grandchildren.

Funeral services were held on last Saturday at 1 o'clock in the Second Church of Plymouth, Congregational, of Manomet. A committal service was held at the graveside in Evergreen Cemetery, Brighton.

Forum to Hear Of Negro Youth And Our Country

At 6:00 o'clock Sunday evening the Congregational Forum will meet for its November Supper.

Melvin H. King, guest speaker will ask the question, "What Does Negro Youth Think About Growing Up in the U.S.A. Today?" Mr. King is the director of the Youth Program for the United South End Settlements, and in this capacity he originated a plan for youth employment, which became the pilot project for a grant from the Ford Foundation. This has resulted in the establishment of a Youth Employment and Training section of the Action for Boston Community Development.

Mr. King was a candidate for the School Committee in the recent election, and missed being voted in by a very small margin.

Michele Bellino

Michele Bellino of 43 Swanton Street, father of "Joe" Bellino, Heisman All America football star at Annapolis two years ago; died suddenly Thursday evening at the Winchester Hospital, following a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 65 years old.

Mr. Bellino, whose son, "Joe", won every major intercollegiate football honor possible, was born in Italy, but had lived for half a century in Winchester and was widely known in this town.

He was a gelatin worker in the employ of the J. O. Whitten Company on Cross Street for many years, and previously had been employed by the Winchester Brick Company. He was a familiar figure at the many football games in which his sons participated while in high school and also attended many college games in which his famous son, "Joe", played during his college days. He was a member of the Christopher Columbus Society.

Mr. Bellino leaves his wife, Mrs. Sarah F. (Corabi) Bellino; his mother, Mrs. Vitina Bellino, living in Italy; five sons, Lt. (j.g.) Joseph M. Bellino, United States Navy, presently home on leave who left Wednesday for Japan; Vito M. Bellino of Lexington; Samuel M. Bellino of Salem, New Hampshire; Anthony M. Bellino of Winchester and Michael F. Bellino of Woburn; also a daughter, Mrs. John Morgan of Winchester, 15 grandchildren, a brother and two sisters, living in Italy.

The funeral was held Monday morning from the Lane Funeral Home at 9:15, followed by Requiem High Mass celebrated at St. Mary's Church at 10 o'clock. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Ruth A. (Erskine) Hill

Mrs. Ruth A. (Erskine) Hill of 52 Lake Avenue, Woburn, wife of Leslie P. Hill and a native of Winchester, died Thursday morning, November 14, at the Choate Memorial Hospital in Woburn. She had been ill for some time, but her sudden passing was wholly unexpected.

Mrs. Hill was the daughter of Hugh J., and Mary E. (MacKinnon) Erskine. She was born in Winchester November 18, 1904, and spent her entire early life in this town. She was a member of the First Baptist Church and widely known to many in Winchester.

She leaves a son, David A. Hill of Chelmsford; a daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Gorman of Woburn; three sisters, Mrs. Willard C. Brown of Woburn; Mrs. F. Vernon Howard of Milford, New Hampshire; and Mrs. William H. Hendrick of Norco, California; and a brother, Hugh J. Erskine of Winchester; also seven grandchildren.

Family funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Kimball Chapel. The Rev. Joseph E. O'Donnell, Jr., pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiated. Interment was in Woodbrooke Cemetery, Woburn.

Boston Attorney State Chairman Of Heart Fund

The appointment of Charles W. Bartlett, distinguished Boston attorney, as state chairman of the Massachusetts Heart Association's 1964 Heart Fund, was announced today by Dr. A. Stone Freedberg, MHA president.

As Heart Fund chairman, Bartlett will direct the efforts of nearly 100,000 volunteers throughout Massachusetts during February, when the association annually raises funds for its vital programs of research, education and community service.

The campaign will be climaxed during the last week of February by a statewide, door-to-door household solicitation designed to be the most complete ever undertaken by the MHA.

"We are delighted," Dr. Freedberg said, "that Mr. Bartlett has accepted this important appointment to an extremely busy job. "The officers and directors of the MHA know he will furnish the dynamic and inspiring leadership necessary to a successful campaign. He has long been associated with our cause and has served it unselfishly and most ably."

Bartlett declared that he welcomed "this opportunity to join with my fellow residents of Massachusetts in a project of such great importance to us all."

Heart and circulatory diseases account for more deaths than all other causes combined in Massachusetts and the nation.

"We have much to do," he said, "and it cannot be done without adequate financing. The generous support traditionally accorded the Heart Fund in Massachusetts indicated clearly that our people understand, indorse and wish to speed these lifesaving programs. I am proud to be a part of this campaign."

Record Hop At S. O. I. Hall Continues Well

Last Friday night the record hop at the Sons of Italy Hall was a big success.

The very popular girl D.J.'s Linda and Dianne had a full evening of entertainment planned. Winchter's own fine group, the Bel-Airs, did a fine job. Other guest groups were Woburn's prize winning group Larry Bisso and the Rendells, also the very popular Impalas, and last but not least, the vocal group that's been winning a number of times on TV, The Candle-Lites.

Next week Linda and Dianne will have two guests, D.J.'s George Denham and Steve Peterson, plus other guests. The winner of the door prize was Nancy Cucurello. Other prizes were given out during the evening. A reminder to the boys—ties and jackets must be worn. See you at the Sons of Italy Hall on Friday for the best hop around.

John J. Cummings, Jr., husband of the former Alice F. Nash of this town, was recently named to be executive vice president and a director of the Industrial National Bank of Rhode Island. Mr. Cummings lives in Providence and in Narragansett with his wife and three sons. Mrs. Cummings is known as a leading bowler in the area.

First Baptist Church News

On Sunday, November 24 at 11 a.m. Rev. O'Donnell will continue his series on the Lord's Prayer, dealing with a point of view clearly evident among the pilgrims as they ventured to a new land. His sermon topic is entitled "The Pilgrim's Prayer: Lead Us, Lord." The Children's Story will be a story written by Dr. Howard J. Chidley, Minister Emeritus of the First Congregational Church, Winchester, entitled "Pilgrim Children."

There will be a Union Thanksgiving Eve Service held at 7:30 p.m. at the Winchester Unitarian Church. Our Senior Choir will unite with other choirs of Winchester for a program of choral music. Rev. O'Donnell will bring greetings as president of the Association of Ministers and Church School directors. The sermon will be given by the Rev. Stephen C. Walke, director of Christian Education, Church of the Epiphany.

O'Donnell Wins Packaging Man Of The Year Award

At the 13th Annual Produce Packaging Association Convention held last week in Chicago, J. William O'Donnell, of 35 Washington Street, and president of Suffolk Farms Packing Company in Chelsea, was recipient of the first annual "Packaging Man of the Year" award made by The Packer, a trade publication sponsoring the event.

Mr. O'Donnell served as president of the Produce Packaging Association this year and was presented with an inscribed silver service as recognition of his many years of leadership in the activities of the produce packaging industries.

Toys for Tots

Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles, James R. Lawton will officiate at opening ceremonies of the 1963 "Toys for Tots" campaign sponsored by the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve to be held at South Station on Monday afternoon at 5 p.m., November 25. Registrar Lawton will cut a ribbon officially opening the "Toys for Tots" collection booth at South Station and will accept the first toys of the 1963 campaign. Taking part in the opening will be the Valiente CYO Drum and Bugle Corps of Hyde Park and other public officials. Assisting Registrar Lawton will be Major George C. Fox, U. S. Marine Corps, Inspector-Instructor for the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines, this year's "Toys for Tots" chairman. The purpose of the annual "Toys for Tots" campaign is to collect new and usable childrens' toys for distribution at Christmas time to churches, hospitals and other charitable organizations throughout the Greater Boston Area. Over the past 15 years, the Marine Corps Reserve has collected hundreds of thousands of new and usable toys through the "Toys for Tots" campaign. The collection booth at South Station will be open daily from 7 to 9 a.m., and from 3-6 p.m.

State Public Works: Now For A Change?

For many years the citizens of Massachusetts have had to wince under continual revelations of exposed graft and corruption coming from the State Department of Public Works. For a long time it has been sinking the State's image and reputation into the muck and mire by its officials' frequent wrong-doings.

Now there is to be a structural change in the management of the D.P.W. Will the new board of commissioners be merely a change of faces at the top, replacing a single individual who either did not know how or wish to control the illegal activities going on, or will there really be a cleaning-out operation? No one can predict what the outcome of a managerial change in the D.P.W. now will be, but one thing is certain, and that is that the people of the Commonwealth are fed up with the amount of crime that has been emanating from that agency, and irked that nothing has been done or could be done to stop it for so long.

It goes without saying that the Legislature "endured" the intolerable condition there too long. When Rep. Perry finally uncovered the "sweetheart deals" it was a big surprise to everybody, but it shouldn't have been, and those and other deals should have been uncovered, exposed and prosecuted much quicker than they were.

Let's hope the new managers of the D.P.W. won't be political hacks, but responsible men capable of bringing a long-needed change to the condition and status of that state department.

Overpass Controversy Reviewed 10 Years Later

It's somewhat amusing to look back now—ten years later—at one of the hottest controversial issues which the town has had to face in many years, and review with the dispassionate backward viewing eye some of the interesting highlights of that political battle.

Thoughts to eliminating the grade crossing at the Center began with town officials more than a century before it came to a vote, and maybe some Marxist theorist could make a lot of the slowness of American democratic institutions (especially at the local level, where it logically should by its smaller magnitude be more efficient and quicker in determining its mind and course of action than a state or federal government might be).

At any rate, it is interesting to note that in 1952 there was a Town Meeting vote which approved the finally proposed plan to elevate the tracks on an overhead bridge, followed by a town-wide referendum, which likewise accepted the idea. And then, again in 1953, there was another Town Meeting vote which again decided to have the tracks raised, and again this was followed by yet another ballot referendum on the issue—which finally was acted upon and implemented.

It speaks well, of course, for the fairness of democratic procedures that aggrieved factions are able to have recourse within the system of democratic government to try and recoup their earlier political losses . . . but, on the other hand, there is also the view that "too much democracy hinders adequate progress." This sometimes is true, although it is dependent upon how one arranges the set of values as to whether it is more important to have quicker decisions and action in every case.

The political campaigning for and against the overpass solution was heated, and as in all such controversial issues, very often argued more with emotion than with reason. For instance, both those against and those for the overhead persuasively claimed pocketbook taxes as an important ingredient in voters' decisions. Obviously taxes would pay for the project, but both sides emphasized taxes fallaciously and far beyond its importance in the issue—which was basically whether or not to improve the public's safety at the Center, and what was the best method for achieving that end if it was desired.

Those against the overpass said taxes were too high already, and the town needed the money for more schools. Taxes have always seemed "high," and if the schoolchildren were endangered or killed on their way to school, there might not have been any need for more schools. Those for the overpass said the town already had the amount of money needed for its share of the cost in general surplus through previous taxation, and therefore there would be no increase in taxation for the work. Obviously if the town spends today what it has today, it will have to tax again tomorrow for what it would have had saved to use tomorrow.

It seems that in almost every controversial issue requiring town money, far too many citizens give disproportionate eye to the amount of tax dollars it will cost, rather than to the wisdom of accepting or declining a solution proposed on the value of peculiar merits. The overpass is a prime example of this.

There was also a lot of sound and fury over the prospect of real estate property valuations dropping if an overhead was accepted. This also seems to be a pet argument for those who want to stop action on any plan that involves physical changes in the character of land make-up.

If this possibility was an assured one, there would have been less likelihood that the overpass would have been found acceptable to the community at large. But this argument is raised so often whenever any change is recommended (and few changes in the town were more recommendable!), that thinking individuals automatically discounted it when it could not be verified.

Anyone returning to Winchester after a ten-year absence would immediately notice all the changes that have occurred since 1953—and all for the better. Many stores have improved and modernized their establishments, and the town and civic organizations have paid more attention to making the Common look more attractive than it ever had. And all these improvements may be directly attributed to the influence of the presence of the modern and attractive overpass

And some people argued then that an overpass would be a scar or blemish on the town's face, which would be like a blight that once here could never be removed. Really what was implied here was that the overpass would make the tracks more of a divisive line through the town, separating sections. Of course, that kind of argument is only psychological, but there was some strong feeling on that aspect of the situation. But, people being people, regardless of whether an overpass raised the tracks or the tracks were left on the ground, that kind of thinking would be determined by the make-up of the individuals living in the community more than by any change in the physical face of the town.

Almost all of the arguments against having the overpass have been proven wrong during the past ten years, and most of the arguments for it proven adequately correct, and the public safety has been increased with the protective measure provided in the Center.

Returning to the Marxist theorist, and other critics of a slow moving and acting democratic process: the procedure may have been frustratingly slow, but the townspeople made the best possible decision, which time has proven.

WINCHESTER HOSPITAL'S DAILY LINEN REQUIREMENT. The two tiers of linen shown represent the daily amount used by the Winchester Hospital. The Winton Club, which supplies the hospital's linen needs, budgeted $12,000 for purchasing new items this year, and spent $3,500 for bolts of material for sewing many of the articles. The annual Cabaret — on January 29, 30, 31 and February 1 — raises the money for this purpose.

McCormack's Completely Remodelled

APOTHECARY

NEW McCORMACK'S FRONT, with large, black signature and a brilliant red carpet on the step-way, shows off to eye-catching advantage the drug store's recently completed remodelling and enlargement. Now twice its former size, the apothecary is done over in modern fashion.

Two weeks ago when Fred W. McCormack threw open the big glass doors of his enlarged and completely remodeled Apothecary at 568-572 Main Street, Winchester got its first look at what many have described as one of the finest apothecaries north of Boston. Work on the building is still going on, with the new store front yet to be installed, but inside the job is practically completed and is proving a distinct credit to its popular proprietor.

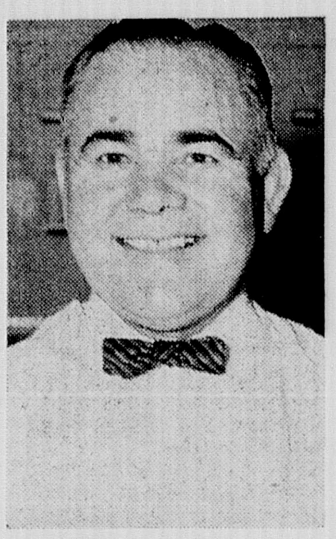
The engineering firm of Metcalf and Eddy designed the new store, and the general contracting was done by the well known Winchester contractor, Alfred D. Elliott. Cabinets are by the Bay State Cabinet Company of Milford.

The impression the store gives is one of spaciousness. Walnut and other wood panelling is featured and the entire apothecary has daylight lighting. Work on the building commenced April 1, with the removal from the premises of two former tenants, the Camera Shop and the Winchester Barber Shop.

McCormack's Apothecary has been named Winchester agent for Fanny Farmer candies and will sell them, both packaged and in bulk. Refrigeration guarantees the candies reaching the consumer in the best of condition.

A complete cosmetic department has been installed with pastel decor. The best of nationally advertised brands will always be available. A fine display of greeting cards has been installed, in a handy location, and Mr. McCormack has also added a complete line of surgical appliances with fitting rooms to ensure privacy. Nothing has been permitted to interfere with the store's prescription department, located at the center rear of the store and practically quadrupled in size.

The White Building, in which McCormack's is located is one of the older buildings in the square, most old timers dating its construction in the eighties. Originally it included three floors, the third floor being given over to a small hall and dressing room. Grace Carter, later Mrs. Walter Dotten, held her dancing school classes there in the old days.



FRED McCORMACK

The building has always included a drug store. For many years it was the business home of Young and Brown. Frank H. Knight followed Young and Brown, and was in turn succeeded by Drouin and Blaisdell, who ran the business only a very short time. Blaisdell acquired the business from Mr. Knight, a druggist of the old school who often complained of the stocks drug stores are now required to carry.

Henry McCormack, older brother of Fred, bought the business from Drouin in 1937 and later was joined in the store by Fred, a former football star at Winchester High School who nearly went to Bates College on a football scholarship. Instead he graduated in Pharmacy from Franklin Union in Boston.

On April 18, 1951, fire destroyed the upper floor of the building, and at that time considerable remodeling was done, removing the third story, and installing apartments on the second floor.

The new owner found himself constantly in need of more space to house his growing business and in January of 1962, he bought the White Block, and decided to remodel and enlarge his establishment, occupying the entire ground floor of the building.

In all there are three apothecaries in the McCormack family. One is in Billerica where Henry and George are located. The other, managed by Richard is located in Yarmouth. Michelle McCormack Fred's oldest daughter is a freshman at the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

The Dog Soldiers

(Conclusion)

"You cannot stop the locomotive any more than you can stop the sun or the moon, and you must submit and do the best you can. If you keep on fighting, you will all be killed. This commission is not only a Peace Commission, but it is a War Commission also!" So spoke General William Tecumseh Sherman, his temper as red as his beard, in affirmation of the statements already made by General Hancock. The Cheyennes, however, were unimpressed—they went out and derailed a locomotive, tore it methodically apart, and burned it.

Still, in the winter of 1868-69, it was evident that the heyday of the Cheyenne was nearing an end. Roman Nose had been killed at Beecher's Island in September, and Black Kettle had fallen in Custer's controversial attack on the Washita. Many of the Sioux and Arapaho, as well as the Cheyenne, submitted to government demands and settled on reservations. But the Cheyenne society known as the Hota-min-tanio, the Dog Soldiers, steadfastly remained adamant in their hostile ways. Tall Bull was their sole leader now, and the young men looked to him for courage in the face of what, in their hearts, they knew to be a futile cause.

In the spring of 1869 the Dog Soldiers made camp near the headwaters of the Republican River. From March through June they made daily attacks on the surrounding settlements; they killed more than a hundred civilians, captured two women, and ran off some five hundred head of horses and mules. They struck with a fierceness hitherto unknown on the Plains, and soon became a major problem. On July 1st, General Eugene A. Carr, with five companies of the 5th Cavalry and one hundred and fifty Pawnee scouts under the brothers, Major Frank North and Captain Luther North, set out to find and destroy them.

The Pawnees, exceptional trackers, had little difficulty finding a big Indian trail on the Republican. They told Carr that the Dog Soldiers weren't far away. That very night a daring band of Cheyennes tried to stampede Carr's horses, but succeeded only in wounding one trooper.

In the morning the game of pursuit began. For many hours Carr could not gain. Then the trail gradually grew dimmer, finally dividing entirely. The Pawnees gathered for a conference. The trail to the right was heavy and plain; the one to the left, scattered and dim. The Pawnees advised Carr to follow the trail that was less distinguishable. Within a few miles the dim trail grew heavier and wider every hour. A detachment that had been sent to scout the previous heavy trail returned and reported that it eventually faded away to nothing. Carr felt certain he now had the Dog Soldiers within his grasp.

The following day Carr made a sixty-five mile march in spite of terrific heat. Toward midafternoon the Pawnees, riding some distance ahead, made initial contact with Tall Bull and his men. As Carr and his troopers caught up, the Pawnees were unsaddling their horses, stripping off their uniforms, and preparing to fight in the ancient way.

Carr ordered the "Charge" sounded, and as the first bleak notes emitted from the trumpeter's instrument every horse leaped forward, and every man's heart raced with excitement as they neared the outskirts of the Cheyenne camp. The crackle of weapons began to sound; puffs of white smoke; then lead smacking hard into flesh. Carr's men and the Pawnees pressed on.

The Cheyennes fell back, then recoiled and spat like some giant, venomous serpent. Here and there, some of the Dog Soldiers put on the significant "dog rope" and made up their minds to die where they stood. Tall Bull was among them. Stoically, he killed his horse, and, using it for cover, actually held the Pawnees at bay for a while. Then, suddenly, a bullet smashed through his forehead, and he crumpled to the ground, the last of the Dog Soldiers.

Not until the climactic years of 1876-77, and the defeat of Crook on the Rosebud and Custer on the Little Big Horn, would the Cheyennes rise to fight again. But by then their efforts resembled the brightness before sunset, or the glow in the face of a man before death, and the somber words of the old chiefs in council were heard with a new awareness and meaning.

"We are always hungry these days," the Cheyenne, Two Moons, declared, "for the buffalo are nearly all gone. Warriors are missing from every lodge, and our women cover their heads with their robes and mourn the dead. We are hunted like wolves just for defending our own lands. The white men come from the East in never-ending streams; we are being slowly driven into the sunset. Brothers, soon our Cheyenne Nation will be no more!"

Just before the turn of the century Two Moons posed for some photographs. He did not smile, but neither did he scowl. He merely turned his head slightly to the right, and tried to look as noble and unconquerable as he could. A representative of the Department of the Interior had informed him that his profile would be used to ornament a new silver five-cent piece the government was planning to mint.

WASP FARM

By Howard Ensign Evans

The next time you are buzzed by a stray wasp or two and begin to wish they had never been created, consider Dr. Howard Evans. Intentionally, he bought a farm in upstate New York because of its potentialities for these insects and did all he could to encourage them to remain.

According to Dr. Evans, wasps are not nearly as formidable as most people believe. It is true that social wasps will deliver a painful sting to defend their colonies, which often occur around the haunts of men, but these make up only a very small portion of the total. Solitary wasps, on the other hand, are unobtrusive and inoffensive for the most part, and the possibility of being attacked by one of these is fairly remote.

Dr. Evans, who is associate curator of insects at the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard University, has spent many years in the study of hymenoptera, an order of insects which includes bees, wasps and ants, and of the three he considers wasps by far the most highly advanced and intelligent. From his years of observation has come Wasp Farm, a fascinating, well-illustrated investigation of the lives and habits of these insects.

The history of wasps on earth is a very long one. Millions of years before man had appeared on this planet, primitive wasps were building their nests and preying on other insects to feed their offspring. Today they are doing substantially the same thing, although the nests have become much more elaborate and a stinging mechanism has been developed which paralyzes the victim for several days so that the larva may have fresh provender. And many hundreds of different wasps have evolved, each with its own behavior pattern.

Dr. Evans describes many kinds of wasps—the kind which use a small pebble as a tool to tamp smooth the dirt around the nest, those which find their way home by a study of the landmarks, the wasp which impales its victim on its stinger in order to carry it and leave the legs free, those which build elaborate paper apartment houses, and many more. He relates how they are able to fly a straight course by responding to light polarization and how in a large measure they are able to control the sex of their progeny.

Since Henri Fabre's book on wasps almost fifty years ago nothing of enduring value has been added to man's knowledge of this insect. Dr. Evans' years of close observation, careful documentation and truly scientific reporting has added much to fill this gap. Where he does not understand the wasp's behavior he says so and suggests that here is a field for the inquiring college student. Wasps are plentiful, easy to observe, and it does not require an expensive outlay of material to make a study of their habits. If anyone is interested he includes a chapter called How to attract wasps and why. Perhaps most of us would prefer a chapter How not to attract wasps.

letters to the editor

Wallwork on UF Local Drive And Weekly Newspaper

Editor of the Star:

First, a word of appreciative thanks from this year's committee for Winchester's United Fund for your cooperation in giving so much of your valuable space and time to this drive. For many weeks before the local campaign, and also during the drive, you generously brought before the people of Winchester the local viewpoint of this nationwide effort and made everyone conscious of Winchester's role, not only in giving but also receiving, in the United Fund.

The committee feels that the efforts of the Star, more than any other single factor, have been the main reason for the success of the local campaign.

In saying this, I would like to refute some of Mr. Sullivan's statements, (your editorial of Nov. 14) as they pertained to the weekly newspaper. If I recall correctly, he referred to those in the "trade" looking upon most weekly newspapers as "dogs" of the publishing world.

I am one of the "trade" who looks on all weekly newspapers as performing a communication function which, within its scope, is as important as big metropolitan dailies or network radio and television systems.

Such nationwide media cannot cover the local news of local events and local people. And yet, to the folks living in the smaller towns and cities, the local events and local news are as important as the recent chicken war in Europe or the Olympics in Japan. And, contrary to Mr. Sullivan's remarks, I believe that all weekly newspapers perform this important function although, I will admit, some (including the Star) do a far better job than others.

The weekly press also performs an important, and difficult, task of interpreting national and state news stories as they pertain to the local level and what relation these news items will have on the day-to-day life of a small town or city.

However, the most important factor of the weekly newspaper to the "trade" (if public relations people can be called members of the "trade") is that almost every word in the "weekly" is read by the responsible people of the town, whereas these same people skip through the big dailies or listen, with mind wandering, to a radio or TV newscast . . . the latter reaction due to the lack of local interest items.

Thus, a lengthy "thanks" from Winchester's United Fund committee to the Winchester Star and also to all weekly newspapers throughout the country for keeping this important work going from year to year.

Sincerely,
Philip C. Wallwork

"WE CAN AFFORD A LITTLE MORE TIME during which we can work with the state to . . . SAVE MILLIONS . . . Save the Skillings property . . . SAVE the homes of our citizens on the 'plains' and at Rangeley . . . SAVE the businesses of our center merchants PREVENT drastic erosion of real estate values . . . ENCOURAGE LESS SPENDING of public funds at least attempt to lower our taxes somewhere, somehow, sometime.

Feelings were so strong on the issue during that time of decision that the Star ran an entire page of Letters to the Editor the week before the referendum. These old letters make interesting reading now: those who said the Town would be defaced with a high wall and that real estate values would drop greatly, have been proven wrong in the interim ten years... for as anyone going through the Center now can observe, the modern styled overpass is not a "scar" on the Town's face, and if anything it has been a stimulus for businesses in the Center to modernize and upgrade their buildings. Similarly, the Town and civic organizations have been more conscious about keeping the Common looking up to snuff, and even embarking on a beautification program which has added to its aesthetic appeal.

Mere months after the sound and fury of political battle was over, the long construction period, with its accompanying inconveniences and annoyances, began. By early 1955 the temporary tracks were in place and trains were rerouted over them, and work in the Center was in progress.

In the fall of 1956 the overpass was near completion, and on Sunday afternoon, October 21, 1956, the Town, Boston and Maine Railroad, and State Department of Public Works held opening exercises for the overpass.

On that afternoon, Selectmen and past Selectmen, Planning Board members, State and railroad officials, and representatives of the contracting firms involved in the construction boarded a passenger train at West Medford to ride over the new overhead to Winchester, arriving at 1:12 o'clock.

As the big diesel, number 4224, moved into the station, it broke a blue ribbon stretched across the tracks as a symbol of opening the overpass to passenger traffic.

As the officials got off the train and walked down the Common Street ramp to go to a bunting-draped speaker's platform on the Common, they were surprised at the large gathering which had turned out to witness the opening exercises.

Rep. Harrison Chadwick, acting as master of ceremonies, stated that the grade crossing had been a problem in Winchester since the Boston and Lowell first started to run trains through town in 1831, and that Selectmen since the incorporation of the town in 1850 had been concerned with the necessity for its elimination.

George Redding, chairman of the Board of Selectmen at that time, said the grade crossing had been considered dangerous as early as 1835, when certain local officials ordered its abolition. He noted that as early as 1900 the Star printed the statement that the crossing gates were down so much and so long that it was time to agitate for the crossing's elimination. "Since that time," Mr. Redding said, "most people have felt that the crossing should be abolished, the difference of opinion being what plan of abolition to accept."

Representing then Governor Christian Herter at the exercises was former Public Works Commissioner John A. Volpe of Everett Avenue, who was in office during the actual construction of the overhead.

Mr. Volpe placed the cost of the overhead at about $7 million, and praised the fine construction job done by the Maney Construction Company and other contractors. But when the job was finally done, it came to about $10 million.

Winchester's tab for the railroad overpass came to $190,000. This money came from the Town's general surplus revenue, and did not directly cause any increase in taxes at that time. The price for Winchester's share included the extra expense of constructing a bridge over Waterfield Road and the Skillings By-Pass, since those were Town-desired inclusions in the final plans.

Today, the overpass is regarded by most Winchester residents as a welcome safety factor at the Center. The five roads with hundreds of vehicles and pedestrians crossing the square daily, no longer have the train traffic to contend with. Trains pass overhead with a minimum of noise, no smoke to bother nearby residents or businesses, and without delay in either their scheduling or to other vehicles or persons waiting to cross the Center.

And, as in many other towns and cities, when the controversy was over and progress was made in improving an area, the resulting stimulus for improvements or modernization in adjacent areas belied critics' claims that the original project would effect a depreciation of valuations.

In the past ten years, the Center of Winchester has physically changed from what might have been described as a "quiet, old-fashioned, sleepy-type town appearance," to one of "a busy, modern, wide-awake and alert town appearance."

And it all started with a referendum vote . . . Ten years ago yesterday.

John C. Stumcke Elected to Life Underwriters

John C. Stumcke of 17 Brantwood Road, has been elected a director of the Boston Life Underwriters Association, an organization of men and women in the life insurance industry cooperating to extend the knowledge and benefits of life insurance to the general public and to bring those engaged in the business into friendly business relationships.

Mr. Stumcke attended Boston University and has been associated with the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company since 1926. He has served as an agent in the company's Malden District Agency for the past 28 years.

He is a five-time qualifier of the National Quality Award given by the National Association of Life Underwriters for quality production, and he was a member of the first graduating class of the Life Underwriter Training Council.

Mr. Stumcke enlisted in the U. S. Army in 1943 and served with the 80th Division in Europe until January 1946.

Among Mr. Stumcke's community activities are the Winchester Little League, of which he is a former president, and the Winchester Council, 210, of the Knights of Columbus. He is also very interested in, and a regular spectator, at many Winchester athletic events.

He is married to the former Claire Browne Mahony of Dorchester.

Appeal Board

ist. In the intervening period the house and most of the lot at number 5 Emerson Road were sold by Oneida Corporation to a third party. The remaining portion of the lot consists of the panhandle or sliver of 1912 square feet, in the rear of number 5 Emerson Road, which is now appended to and a part of the lot at number 3 Emerson Road.

In yielding a decision, the board made the following significant comments:

"There is no requirement that the lot be of any particular shape. If we were to read into the meaning of the word 'lot' an implied limitation that the lot must be regular or symmetrical in its shape, we would not only be taking unjustified liberties with the English language but would be creating, by improper means, an amendment to the By-laws the future consequences of which could be detrimental to the town.

"If after 39 years of the Zoning By-laws' operation an important change of this order is to be made, the Town Meeting and not this Board is the agency to make it.

"Furthermore, even if we were to make such an interpolation, we are at a loss to think of any way in which the requirement of a regular or symmetrical shape could be adequately worded without raising a host of difficulties with respect to many lots in the town that are slightly irregular in shape."

Mail Early For Christmas

Faced with the certainty that Christmas 1963 will set an all-time record for mailings of Christmas cards and gifts, Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun today requested your cooperation in his annual "Mail Early For Christmas" Campaign.

The Postmaster said - "Here are the things to watch to be sure that every Christmas card and gift package will be delivered before Christmas Eve. -

"First, check over your Christmas card and gift list very carefully-be certain each address is complete with full name, street and number, city, state and zone or ZIP Code number.

"Second, stock up soon on sturdy packing materials for your gift packages, including heavy wrapping paper, corrugated cartons, strong cord and paper adhesive tape.

"Third, buy your postage stamps now. Be sure to use the colorful new five cent Christmas Tree stamps on your cards.

"Fourth, procure free labels from your post office which read "ALL FOR LOCAL DELIVERY" and "ALL FOR OUT-OF-TOWN DELIVERY", so that you can sort your Christmas cards into two groups, with addresses all facing one way, thus insuring fast delivery.

"Fifth, be sure that your full name and address is on all of your Christmas card envelopes and shipping lables and be doubly sure to include your ZIP Code number in your return address. (Winchester, Mass. 01890)"

The Postmaster especially requests that you schedule your Christmas mailing so that all of your cards and gift packages going to most distant points are mailed by December 10th. Those for local destinations should be mailed at least a week before Christmas.

Cub Pack 524

Cub Pack 524 opened its November meeting with Captain Richard Rochford, U. S. M. C. inspecting the Dens. He noted unbuttoned pockets, dirty hands, etc. but found them all in good shape. An Honor Den was not awarded as it was impossible to make a choice. Capt. Rochford talked of life in the Marines and explained the "Buddy System" as used in the Corps and how it applies to Cubs as well as to later life, then he put the boys through a short drill.

Steven McDavitt and Serichiro Nishida were awarded the Bobcat badge; Wolf was earned by Thomas Sullivan, David Leland and Steven Deshler. Frank Dittilo, Douglas Phipps and Simon Majahad were promoted to Bear. Gold Arrow points for extra achievement were awarded to Steven Deshler and Nicholas Longo and a Silver Arrow point to James Hollinshead.

A moving picture of the Boston Patriots tean in action and training was shown and plans were announced for the trip to the Fore River shipyard. Cubmaster Gerould had arranged a tour for the boys aboard the nuclear missile cruiser, USS Bainbridge. Forty-six boys and eight fathers gathered on Saturday and headed for Quincy. They were met aboard the cruiser and lined up on the fantail by the O.D. Doors opened in the superstructure and out roared two missiles. These were rolled in and out several times, a very impressive sight. The boys and their fathers were than taken below, split up into small groups, each with a sailor escort, who took them on a conducted tour of the ship. They saw the bridge, library, ladders and decks with the sailors explaining the whys and whats of everything. Then all went back to the lounge for an accounting of all hands and then back home after a big day.

Examinations For Fire Captains Held Saturday

Postponed from its original date of last summer to allow for applications from all qualified firefighters as well as lieutenants, the civil service exam for Fire Captain was held last Saturday at the McCall Jr. High School.

Seven members of the Department participated in the State conducted test, two lieutenants and five firefighters. In about two months they will hear the results which, if favorable, will put them on a list from which future Winchester Fire Captains will be chosen.

The examination for fire lieutenants, held last August, qualified six men for this position.

Read Works For Adult Ed. Fair

Edward S. Read, Jr., of Fletcher Street, is working with the Cambridge Center for Adult Education on plans for the Center's annual Holly Fair. Mr. Read is a member of the advisory committee of the Center.

The fair will be open from 1 to 9 on Friday, December 6, and 10 to 4 on Saturday, December 7, with white elephants, treasures, country store and many gift shops offering the Christmas shopper truly unusual items for Christmas giving.

Democratic Town Committee Activities

This week will see house meetings called by the chairmen of the various precincts to go over registration prospects in each one's immediate field of work. There will be no meeting in Precinct three this week as its chairman, Mrs. Bette Hill, is enjoying a sojourn in the Caribbean with her husband, Charles. Consequently her meeting will take place later.

Our important project for the late summer and early fall months is fast drawing to a close. This is, of course, the work that has been done in filling the chance books on the beautiful beige and rose afghan under the leadership of our social chairman, Mrs. Bee Wilson.

Mrs. Wilson reports that she is delighted with the response she has received in making this undertakig such a pronounced success and she is especially pleased with those members who have called her up to ask for additional books. Any other good worker who feels she can fill even one more book may call Mrs. Wilson at PA 9-1858 or her assistant chairman of the Social Committee, Mrs. Helen Nadeau, PA 9-1893. The last day for returning chance books is November 30. The drawing will take place at the first meeting in December, the date to be announced in next week's Star.

We are delighted to announce that our first meeting in January will be a food sale, to be sponsored by two of our out-of-town friends from an adjoining Democratic Town Committee. These ladies are doing this in gratitude for the enjoyable times they have had at several of our affairs. One of the ladies is a top-notch cook, her Italian bread, cakes, cookies, and sauces eagerly sought after in her home town.

After the New Year we are planning to enjoy our second West Side Democratic Party, this one in the Myopia Road area.

Have You Marked Your Calendar?

The date is December 4; the time is 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.; the place is the Episcopal Church Hall on Church Street; the event is the "Yuletide Mart" of the Winchester Home and Garden Club.

You will find fragrant fresh wreaths with original festive trimming. Or you may prefer to take an untrimmed wreath and choose from a variety of prepared ingredients to "do-it-yourself." A pleasant surprize will await you in a new "Boutique" of unusual, inexpensive gifts. You'll be delighted with the table of Christmas specialities baked at home by talented cooks and a table of interesting containers filled with greens. There will be the first showing of decorations created for your mantel and table.

Be sure to reserve your place at the buffet luncheon. Call Mrs. Burton Gove at PA 9-3540. We'll be looking forward to seeing you and serving you. Do come!

On Monday November 25, at 1 p.m., Miss Mary Louise Hickey, noted solo dramatist, will appear at Marycliff Academy. Her presentation is one of the cultural programs offered to the students by the Academy. Miss Hickey has chosen "The Joyous Season"—a modern miracle play, by Philip Barry.

Of the 64 departmental budgets which appear on the warrant, 33 have already been submitted; and of these 29 have been processed so far by the Town Comptroller and forwarded to the Finance Committee, leaving 4 to be processed and 13 yet to be submitted.

The budgets, including the School Department, Police and Fire Departments, Highway Department, Park Department, Public Library, and welfare agencies, are usually the last to be submitted, processed, and reviewed by the Finance Committee because of the great amount of time that must be spent on them.

OPEN HOUSE SUNDAY

During World War II there was a lack of materials for tailoring purposes, Mr. Maietta continued in his speech, and therefore no clothing was made here. But after the war, Mr. Gattineri was joined by his two sons and he moved his business to Washington Street and called it the Fashion Cleaners.

As the post-war years passed, the Fashion Cleaners expanded its business and reputation in the community as custom tailors, and finally the father and two sons decided to construct a new building on Swanton Street.

After complimenting Mr. Gattineri on being an example of the success story of America in epitomizing the concept of those of other lands who come to America and through talent and hard work establish themselves as fine and successful citizens, Mr. Maietta unwrapped a plaque and gave it to the two sons—who were standing on each side of their father—and who in turn presented it to their father . . . who accepted the plaque which was to be placed on the new building with tears of unexpressible happiness. Hundreds of persons observing the dedication were similarly touched by the presentation. Rev. Francis X. Turke of St. Mary's Church then blessed the building.

The invited guests then went back inside and enjoyed refreshments. A tailor-made suit was given away as a door prize, which was drawn by Diane Mericantante, the recently crowned "Miss Winchester," and won by Henry L. Clark of 16 Hillcrest Parkway.

Meanwhile, the Board of Selectmen is searching for the best method to eliminate the pigeon nuisance at Waterfield Road, which the town will be responsible for attending to according to the provisions of the overpass contract between the town, railroad and State. Mr. Saraco said the problem there is nowhere near as great as it is at the bridge above the rotary in the Center—but nevertheless it will have to be solved.

The Board of Selectmen requested James Wakefield, town engineer and superintendent of the Highways and Bridges town budget, to prepare an estimate for the cost of wiring the substructure of the Waterfield Road bridge to keep the pigeons from nesting there, and the board will consider how it will handle the situation when it has cost figures available.

Film Program At Library

On November 22 the Family Film Program will open with ARCTIC WILD LIFE RANGE—extraordinary animal shots which show up with unusual clarity in the high, thin air.

MUSEUM MAN, taken in a museum, follows two scientists in the making of habitat groups—taxidermy, models and diaramas where every bit of foliage and grain of sand is authentic.

HIPPOS is not a cartoon, but it is funny. Hippos can't help being funny, even when they are most serious.

The program starts at 7:30 p.m. Friday, and will be repeated on Saturday morning at 10:15 for school age children. Tickets in the Boys' and Girls' Room at 10 a.m.

There will be a Thanksgiving story hour on Tuesday afternoon, November 26, at 4 p.m. for school children, especially those in the 3rd, 4th and 5th grades. There will be no Family Film Program on Friday night, November 29, and no Children's Film Program on Saturday, November 30.

Alumnae Award Of Mt. Holyoke To Mrs. Kugler

At a recent meeting of the Winchester Mount Holyoke Club at the home of Mrs. Russell Thompson, president, official local announcement was made of the awarding by the College of the Alumnae Medal of Honor to Mrs. William A. Kugler of 26 Winslow Road.

"You have brought honor to the college as you have exemplified the Mt. Holyoke tradition of educated, devoted service to college, alumnae affairs and your community" read part of the citation of this award, which is an annual national award.

Mrs. Lloyd Butterfield, retiring tour chairman, described the successful annual Mount Holyoke Tour of Winchester Homes held last May and Mrs. Richard F. Brackett, current tour chairman, outlined tentative plans for the 1964 tour. Proceeds from the tour, annually enjoyed by hundreds of Winchester residents, will again benefit the scholarship fund of the club.

Plans for a trip to Mount Holyoke College for Winchester High School girls interested in applying for admission were reported formulated. This trip took place on November 11th and was attended by the following seven girls: Florence Reardon, Peggy Hoffman, Lynn Anderson, Mary Ford, Marjorie Hickey, Carla Hutsenlaub, Paula Haley, Mary Elizabeth Farnham and Joyce Clark.

Mrs. Philip Marvel organized the trip and despite poor weather, the student guests enjoyed a tour of the campus, visited classes, had lunch in a dormitory dining room and met informally with the assistant Dean of Admissions.

An Ounce of Prevention

• "TO ERR is human, to forgive divine." This, apparently, is why a funeral director who makes a slip in the course of a service has to wait for heaven to forgive him. Humans won't. Some occupations are like that—mistakes cannot be tolerated. They cost too much in human values. Years of experience have taught us where they are most likely to occur and we have worked out a check system designed on the principle that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Extra time and painstaking care are necessary, of course, but the results have justified all the work involved.

Nurse About Town

A super salesman for the Winchester Visiting Nursing Association is Miss Peggy Schmidt, newcomer to the local staff. "Winchester is one of the few agencies that has a generalized nursing program," say Miss Schmidt, "and I feel very lucky that a vacancy opened here at just the right moment for me."

MISS MARGARET SCHMIDT

This generalized nursing program offered by the Winchester agency, as Miss Schmidt says, is a three-fold service to the community. W. V. N. A. combines School Department and Board of Health nursing with district nursing. "Under our system," Miss Schmidt says, "we get to know the whole family picture."

For example, Miss Schmidt, who is the school nurse for the Vinson-Owen and Parkhurst School district, holds conferences early in the school year with the teachers. Special problems are discussed at this time, and often a home visit is made. Miss Schmidt says, "I try to acquaint the mothers with all the services we offer. I love people and feel the visiting nurse can be of real service to the community."

Another contact that Miss Schmidt enjoys is the home visit to every family in her district with a newborn infant recently discharged from the Winchester Hospital. This Board of Health function gives Miss Schmidt another link with the families in her district. Chances are she may already know school children in the family through the school physicals or eye and ear testing. Here again the visiting nurse may be able to give family health guidance if needed.

Although Miss Schmidt especially enjoys working with mothers and young children, she was quick to point out that nursing the sick and aged is a challenging part of her work, too. The fact that she loves people of all ages and has a kindly sympathetic nature makes her an ideal public health nurse.

Margaret Schmidt comes to the W. V. N. A. with an excellent background of training. She was graduated from St. Joseph's Hospital in Syracuse in 1959, and worked there for two years. Having won a scholarship for graduating second in her class at St. Joseph's, Miss Schmidt was determined to continue her nursing education. In 1961 she enrolled at Boston College and last June she received her B.S. degree.

In the summer Miss Schmidt plays golf, swims, and fishes (mostly fresh water, although she hopes to try deep-sea fishing some time). Winters she bowls in a mixed evening league. She belongs to the Catholic College Graduate Club and regularly attends the theater in Boston.

Another interest Miss Schmidt has is music. While in high school she played the clarinet in the band and orchestra. She has left her clarinet back home in Utica, but likes organ music.

W. V. N. A. is very fortunate to to have a nurse of Miss Peggy Schmidt's ability and enthusiasm on its staff. She is sure to become a well-known and popular Nurse About Town.

Crittenton Will Hold Area Bazaar On December 4

The Florence Crittenton League will hold its annual area bazaar, "A Holiday in Paris," on Wednesday, December 4 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. at the Arlington Town Hall.

This event is sponsored by the Senior and Junior Circles of Winchester, Lexington, Belmont and Arlington. A large assortment of Christmas items will be displayed: mittens, handmade toys and gifts for children, home-cooked foods, Christmas decorations and unusual bric-a-brac for those "hard-to-please" on your Christmas list.

For your extra enjoyment there will be an astrological counsellor, Isabel Hickey. Plan to spend the day. Luncheon will be served from 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. and afternoon tea from 3 to 4:30 p.m.

American Education Week

"A comprehensive system of education is essential to our democratic system if we are to provide equality of opportunity, preserve our cultural heritage, and meet the challenges of international competition," said Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) in a statement on the Senate floor saluting American Education Week.

"Through education," the senior Bay State Republican continued, "we must provide opportunity for individual development, we must assure the preservation of the foundations of our government, and we must make maximum use of the abilities of our citizens. As the future of education is dependent upon us, so our future is dependent upon education."

Saltonstall pointed out that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has played a leading role in the development of public education in this country. The first compulsory school attendance law was enacted by the Commonwealth in 1852. The principle of publicly supported elementary and secondary schools, state laws encouraging the spread of the public high school and laws which made the support of public schools by taxation mandatory, all had their beginnings in the Bay State. The first state school board with Horace Mann, the Father of the American Public School as its secretary, was established in Massachusetts in 1837. "All citizens of the Bay State are proud that it has done so much to promote the establishment of free and universal education in the United States because we recognize the connection between educational opportunity and the social, political, and economic advancement of a free society," Saltonstall said.

Saltonstall noted the importance of the dedicated work of the school teachers of America. "Because of their activities our children will become more independent and self-reliant and better citizens in the days to come," he said.

"To meet its responsibility to society today," Saltonstall concluded, "education must trigger the curiosity of students and awaken in them a desire to understand their government and the world about them. It must help them to gain that understanding and it must stimulate and prepare them to assume an active role in community and government activities. If it is doing its job, it will alert them to the drama, the excitement, and the satisfactions of that experience. This is an important responsibility, and one which I am confident that the nation's teachers are attempting to meet."

Mystic Teachers' Luncheon

On Thursday, November 14, Mrs. John McGuigan of 9 Grove Place was hostess for the fall teachers' luncheon, the first of four luncheons, given during the year.

Besides the teachers, the guest list included Raymond Dickman, principal, Mrs. Anne Dreano, secretary, Mrs. David Mears, president of Mystic Mothers' Association, and Mrs. Andrew Fichera, chairman of teachers' luncheons.

Harrison Lyman Will Direct New Monsanto Division

Harrison F. Lyman Jr., of St. Louis, has been appointed director of administration for Monsanto Chemical Company's newly formed Packaging Division.

HARRISON F. LYMAN, JR.

Mr. Lyman was a prominent resident here for many years and is the son of Mrs. Harrison Lyman, Sr., of Lawson Road.

In his new position, he will have responsibility for the personnel, purchasing, planning and control, legal, patent and accounting activities of Monsanto's Division formed last month to consolidate the company's extensive research, manufacturing, development and marketing efforts in plastic film, sheet and fabricated products for packaging applications. It operates plants at Anaheim, California, Deep River, Connecticut, Ligonier, Indiana, Sharonville, Ohio, Stonington Connecticut, Yardville, New Jersey, and Melrose Park, Illinois.

A native of Winchester, Mr. Lyman joined Monsanto's Law Department in 1958 as attorney for the company's Plastic Division, the position he held prior to his recent appointment.

Mr. Lyman received an AB degree in American history from Harvard University in 1942. Following World War II service with the U. S. Army as a First Lieutenant, he received an LLB from Harvard Law School in 1949. Lyman was an attorney with the firm of Nutter, McClennen and Fish of Boston from 1949 to 1954. Prior to joining Monsanto, he had a private law practice in Boston.

Petition To Curb Council Powers Nears Deadline

Latest field count shows 53,100 signatures toward the goal of 63,000 have been obtained in the drive to curb powers of the Executive Council.

Ronald C. MacKenzie, general chairman, said petition circulators have been urged to step up their efforts in the last two weeks of the drive.

All names have to be certified by local registrars of voters and turned in by the petition committee before they go to the Secretary of State on or before December 4.

Sponsors of the campaign include the Massachusetts Junior Chamber of Commerce, Massachusetts League of Women Voters, the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations, Committee of Democrats, Americans for Democratic Action, American Veterans Committee, Massachusetts Citizens Committee, Massachusetts Congregational Christian Conference Social Action Committee, and Massachusetts Council of Young Republican Clubs.

The White House Table Setting At The Fortnightly

The program for American Home Day at The Fortnightly presents two fascinating features which members and their guests will not want to miss. A replica of the White House table setting will be on exhibition at The Fortnightly meeting on November 25 in Gifford Hall Crawford Memorial Methodist Church.

The display of this ensemble for a dining table with appointments by Boston's Shreve Crump and Low will be done with beautiful Lenox china, gleaming crystal, and the place settings will be Colonial Eagle in Vermeil by Gorham.

Added glamour will be the brilliance of sterling silver Melrose candelabra, Chantilly center-piece and goblets, all of which will project decorative qualities with impressive simplicity that any hostess who is to entertain during the coming holiday season will want to apply to her own table setting.

The outstanding attraction for this meeting date will be the personal appearnace of Alonzo Fields, who for many years was the famous Chief Butler at the White House. He is the author of "My Twenty-two Years in the White House," and women's magazines have captured his interesting life's story among the "First Ladies" over the years. His subject will be "Ladies in the White House."

The coffee hour will be at one o'clock and served by the Social Hostess, Mrs. William Sorenson and her committee.

Frederick J. Reil of 791 Main Street, was honored recently for his 20 years of service with H. P. Hood and Sons.

He was one of a group of Hood employees who were presented service pins by Gilbert H. Hood, Jr., company president, also of Winchester. The presentations were made at a service award luncheon held at the firm's Boston Ice Cream Plant, one of several such luncheons held during the year to honor longtime Hood employees.

House Plants From The Good Old Days

(Conclusion)

Last week I outlined the needs of the Boston Fern and Aspidistra. This week, Palms, Chinese Evergreens, Rubber Plants and others will be discussed.

Palms are known the world around for their beauty and grandeur. Linnaeus called them the Princes of the vegetable Kingdom.

Some Palms grow 70 to 100 feet tall; some others, however, never reach a height of more than six or seven feet. One of these so called "table Palms" is the Neanthia bella, which is very popular today. It does well in a small pot in filtered sunlight, and should be watered when the soil is dry.

The Chinese Evergreen, or Aglaonema, is a very easy plant to grow. The botanical name comes from aglos, meaning bright, and nema, a thread. It, like most foliage plants, likes to have its leaves washed occasionally. The most common variety, A. simplex, has pointed oblong leaves.

The Rubber Plant, or Ficus elastica, likes a small pot and little sun. Sometimes called the Indian Rubber Tree, it has glossy leaves about five inches wide and 12 inches long. The F. elastica is a good subject for the airlayering method of plant propagation.

The Sanservieria, commonly called the Snake, or Bow String Hemp plant, was named after the Swedish botanist M. Sansevier, and is a member of the Liliaceae Family. Indigenous to West Africa, the plant is grown for commercial purposes in that area; it yields a superior quality of fibers which are used in the manufacture of cordage and fine string. The plant was introduced to America in 1731.

Sansevierias will thrive in near darkness. This makes them ideal for "that corner" where nothing seems to grow. The leaves are stiff, growing two and one-half to three feet high, and are green spotted with yellow. Over-watering should be avoided, and the leaves must be kept clean.

The Ribbon plant, or Pandanus vietchi, is sometimes called the less appropriate Screw Pine. The sword-like leaves of the plant grow in spirals from the base and have sharp spines along the edges.

The botannical name was derived from the Malayian pandang, meaning conspicuous. In Malaya, fiber in the leaves is used in the manufacture of heavy bags and sacks.

A strange habit of the plant is that of projecting aerial roots which anchor themselves in the soil, thereby propping the plant up. This is a necessary means of keeping the plant from toppling over - the great mass of leaves makes the plant top heavy. The plant will thrive in a warm humid atmosphere where partial sun is available.

Senior Girl Scouts Learn Of Australia

More than fifty Senior Girl Scouts in the Mistick Side Council met recently under the auspices of the Senior Planning Board to hear Miss Mary Lambe of Victoria, Australia. Miss Lambe is a guide captain and national adviser to the Handicapped Section of the Girl Guides Association of Australia. She described her work with a troop of girls in wheel chairs and wearing braces and showed pictures of their camping activities. Our girls were amazed at the skill and proficiency of their Australian sisters in performing the complicated tasks inherent in maintaining a primitive encampment. A social period gave the girls an opportunity to ask further questions of their guest.

Officers of the Senior Planning Board for the coming year were elected at the meeting. They include president, Mary Ellen McGarry of Malden; vice president, Martha Kimball of Winchester; treasurer, Mary Ellen Gurren of Melrose; corresponding secretary, Kristin Anderson of Medford; and recording secretary, Betty Cameron of North Reading.

Mrs. Dan Love, a Mistick Side Field director, is staff adviser to the Planning Board, which includes representatives from the 33 Senior Girl Scout Troops in the Council.

Dial-a-matic adding machine. For small offices, home use, income tax, etc. Six dials, answers appear automatically. Also subtracts. Priced at $4.00 at the Winchester Star.

Allstate—for sensible rates on all kinds of insurance

Wherever possible, Allstate's rates are substantially lower than the rates of most other companies.

For example, Allstate Collision Insurance rates may save you as much as $15—$20.

For less than you may be paying for ordinary fire insurance, you can protect yourself against loss from fire, theft, personal injury claims and many other hazards with an Allstate Homeowners policy.

You'll be surprised, too, at the amount and kind of Allstate Life Insurance you can buy for a cost averaging as little as $2.50 a week.

And Allstate Business Insurance rates are often 30%—40% lower than most other companies'.

It pays to do business with Allstate!

All these Allstate policies available for you:

Auto • Homeowners • Life • Health Boatowners • Residential Fire • Family Liability • Business Insurance • Mortgage Cancellation Life Insurance • Also representatives for Allstate Motor Club and Allstate Econo-Rate Finance

Do you form your opinions—or does somebody else?

Everybody is entitled to an opinion. But before you can form an opinion—at least a good one—you must have all the facts. If your facts are incomplete or distorted, then you're going to end up forming a mistaken opinion. Since your daily newspaper is your most convenient source of current information, doesn't it make sense to read one that's complete—and completely objective? People who know what they're talking about make it a habit to read The Globe every day. The Globe is famous for its broad coverage of the news, the accuracy of its reporting, its many writer-specialists. Holy Name Group Names F. Flahive Vice-President

Franklin G. Flahive of 49 Russell Road will be installed as vice-president of the Archdiocesan Holy Name Society at the annual convention of the group to be held at the Hotel Bradford, Boston, this Sunday, November 24, at 1:30 p.m.

He will join Joseph H. McPherson, of Newtonville as president, Albert L. Sullivan, of Arlington, as secretary, and Thomas E. Gaquin, of West Roxbury, as treasurer in the installation exercises.

Highlights of the convention in addition to this biennial installation of Archdiocesan officers will be the presentation of the Medallion Circle Award to retiring Archdiocesan President Leo C. Renaud of Jamaica Plain; a keynote address by Attorney Edward B. Hanify of Belmont; a special address by Rt. Rev. George A. Schlichte, newly appointed Rector of the Pope John XXIII Seminary for Delayed Vocations, Weston, and a Walking Rosary from the Hotel Bradford to Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut Avenue, Boston, for Benediction services to terminate the Convention.

Christian Science Service to Be On Thanksgiving Day

A traditional Thanksgiving Day service will be held in all Christian Science churches on Thursday, November 28. In Winchester, the service will begin at 11:00 a.m. in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, located at 114 Church Street.

A Bible Lesson on "Thanksgiving" will be read, opening with a verse from Psalms (33:1) "Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous: for praise is comely for the upright." The service will also include hymns prayer and a special period during which church members in the congregation may stand up and express their thanks.

A CHANCE TO HELP

Many elderly and infirm persons, as well as those with small children and limited means, need help at Thanksgiving and Christmas if these holidays are to be happy occasions in accordance with the American tradition.

Gifts may be sent to the Winchester Community Relief Committee.

Boston Christmas Play to Feature Dance School Here

Ballet sequences performed by the Noreen Johnson School of the Dance in Winchester will feature the Boston Children's Theatre production of "The Christmas Nutcracker" opening on December 7 at New England Life Hall. The play will be performed again on December 14 and 21 at 2:30 p.m. There will be an additional performance at 10:30 a.m. on December 21.

Adele Thane will direct, with costumes by Vivian Dooley and settings by C. Edwin Shade. The theatre is again offering group rates for birthday parties, scouts, schools, civic groups, etc.

For reservations, call or write the Boston Children's Theatre, 263 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, KEnmore 6-3324.

Lesley College Designated Testing Center

Lesley College has been designated as a testing center for the 1964 nationwide administration of the National Teacher Examinations next February, college president Don A. Orton announced recently.

College seniors preparing to teach and teachers applying for positions in school systems which encourage or require applicants to submit their scores on the National Teacher Examinations along with their other credentials are eligible to take the tests. The examinations are prepared and administered annually by Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey.

The designation of Lesley College as a testing center for these examinations will give prospective teachers in this area an opportunity to compare their performance on the examinations with candidates throughout the country who take the tests in the nationwide administrations.

At the one-day testing session a candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in Professional Information, General Culture, English Expression, and Nonverbal Reasoning. In addition, each candidate may take one or two of the thirteen Optional Examinations which are designed to demonstrate mastery of subject matter in the fields in which he may be assigned to teach.

Applications for the examinations and Bulletins of Information describing registration procedures and containing representative test questions may be obtained from Barbara Wickson, Lesley College, 29 Everett Street, Cambridge (02138), or directly from the National Teacher, Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey. Prospective teachers planning to take the test should secure an Application Blank and a Bulletin of Information promptly.

Toastmistresses Evaluate Talks

The Winchester Toastmistress Club met recently at the Church of the Epiphany in Winchester. Hostess for the evening was Mrs. Joseph Dagnese. Doris was also speech evaluator and being a teacher, she caught all of the grammatical errors, mispronunciations etc., that needed correction.

Two minute extemporaneous topics by all present were about "Historical People and Landmarks" Faneuil Hall, Old Ironsides and the Longfellow house, to name a few.

Evelyn Sostek, president, conducted the meeting and welcomed three guests. Toastmistress Viola Bruno was praised by the evaluator, Pamela Papadinis, for a smooth and correct performance of her duties.

On November 18th at 8 p.m. a meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Pyne on 5 Sussex Road.

Checking Of Registration Plates

All persons receiving 1964 motor vehicle registration plates in the mail are asked to check the contents of the envelope against the registration number on the certificate so as to make sure that they are the same.

Each year numbers on some of the envelopes do not coincide with the numbers on the plates enclosed.

Persons who examine their plates and certificates and find discrepancies in plate numbers or registration certificate should immediately contact the correspondence section of the Registry of Motor Vehicles. In case of discrepancies, all persons are asked to act promptly, for otherwise their motor vehicle could be improperly on the highways as of January One.

The Wyman School Brownie Scouts of Troop 519 held both an Investiture and Troop Birthday party in the Wyman school assembly hall this month.

The girls dramatized the Brownie Story for their guests thereby showing that they understand what it means to be a Brownie Scout. The cast of the play was made up of the following: Robyn Gerwan, Patricia Byrd, Denise O"Toole, Debra Yavner, Suzanne Quigley, Wendy Dillon, Karen Tesar, Judy Houlding, Janet Chelman, Dorothy Clark, Beverly Cade and Lisa Fitzgerald.

After making her Brownie Promise each second grader to be invested came forward and looked into Troop 519's magic mirror pond in search of a real Brownie. Girls who were welcomed into the troop were: Patricia Annino, Deborah Bellinowiz, Janice Dillon, Victoria Haag, Susan Higgins, Holly James, Patricia Kaufmann, Anita Louise Lucey, Betty McDavitt, Nancy McDavitt, Sara McGovern, Paige Vincent and Barbara Witham.

When the surprise silver birthday cake with one big candle appeared, all joined in singing "Happy Birthday" to Troop 519 which was one year old. After the candles were blown out, membership stars were presented to the following girls: Patricia Byrd Beverly Cade, Marie Casey, Janet Chelman, Dorothy Clark, Wendy Dillon, Lisa Fitzgerald Robyn German, Judith Houlding, Denise O'Toole, Suzanne Quigley, Karen Tesar and Debra Yavner.

Refreshments were served to the guests by 26 very helpful Brownies. Troop leaders are: Mrs. Lane McGovern, Mrs. Galen Vincent and Mrs. Edward McDavitt; refreshment chairman is Mrs. Robert Tesar, assisted on this occasion by Mrs. Raymond Dillon.

Sons Of Italy News

We, the members of the S.O.I., certainly wish to express our sincere sympathy to the Bellino family in the recent loss of a devoted husband and father, Mr. Michele Bellino.

It certainly is pleasant to see brother Tony DeLuca up and around after being hospitalized. Nice gong Tony!

The first half of the fourteen team bowling league is coming to a fast close and Notre Dame seems to have first place clinched with Yale, Bates, Navy, Army and California offering strong bids for the other three playoff berths. There are some real strong bowlers and anything can happen.

Chairman Dick Tofuri and his sports committee are hard at work planning a sports night to honor the S.O.I. softball team for winning the championship in the Town Softball League last summer. The golf participants are also to be rewarded on the same program.

The function held recently by business manager Boss Dattilo and members of the degree team was a huge success. The affair was to raise money to help defray expenses for the team's trip to Cleveland last August to install the supreme officers of the S.O.I. organization.

Frank Provinzano and his program and entertainment committee are hard at work making plans for the Social Night being held at the club hall on Saturday, November 30 and a good number of members of both lodges and their husbands and wives and friends is anticipated. Come on down and get acquainted.

Venerable Bob Fiore reminds us of the Friday night fish plate. Everyone welcome for clams and lobster. Serving starts at 6:30 and goes until all has run out and it hasn't taken too long for that to happen, so get down early!

Ex-Venerable night was held last Saturday at the club hall and seated at the head table were M.C. Anthony Vespucci and ex-venerable Frank Dattilo, Gene Rotondi, Angelo Tofuri, Carmine Frongillo, Dom Provinzano, Richard Penta, Michael D. Saraco and ven. Robert Fiore.

M.C. Vespucci thanked all for attending this annual affair which is a means of recognizing the excellent work performed by the outgoing venerable. He immediately called upon the assistance of Dom Provinzano in presenting a beautiful bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Angie Dattilo, wife of ex-ven. Dattilo.

M. D. Saraco was then asked to present the past venerable button to Frank Dattilo and M.C. Vespucci then called upon venerable Robert Fiore to say a few words. He pointed out that every ex-venerable seated at the head table are still very active members of the organization and praised Frank for the diligent manner in which he carried out his responsibilities. Venerable Bob then presented Frank a set of traveling bags on behalf of the officers and members of the Winchester Lodge.

In response, Frank thanked all for the consideration shown and mentioned it wouldn't have been possible to do all he did without the loyal support of every member of the order.

Angelo Tofuri then was introduced and he gave a brief summary of the growth and progress made by the Winchester S.O.I., and how the lodge is connected with and shows much interest in the undertakings of the entire town of Winchester.

M.C. Vespucci then recognized William Fiore, Randy Kazazian, Carl Bertolucci, Frank Procopio, Fire Chief Frank Amico for their interest of lodge doings and for holding important offices in the past.

Next to be called upon was Gene Rotondi who mentioned that the Winchester lodge made a big hit in Cleveland by installing the supreme officers there last August. He said he's proud to be able to assist and mentioned he's getting old but just fading away.

M.C. Vespucci then called upon Mingy Frongillo who is a charter member and the first venerable of the organization when he carried far back in 1930. He said the venerables and members of the S.O.I. must uphold the faith bestowed upon them by others in the community who are not of Italian extraction, must continue to show much interest in the affairs of the town.

Closing the speaking part of the program, M. C. Vespucci thanked all for attending and invited all to remain and enjoy the collation and dancing to follow.

Modern American Masters At De Cordova

Paintings from one of New England's finest private collections and prints from the famed Wiggin Collection of the Boston Public Library will be shown at the De Cordova Museum in Lincoln from November 24 to December 29.

The fifty paintings to be exhibited are borrowed from William H. Lane of Leominster, who has over the years assembled a collection representing some of the greatest names in American art of the 20th century—among them Marin, Sheeler, O'Keeffe, Dove, Feininger, Graves, Tobey, Hofmann and Gorky. From the Boston Public Library, the Museum has borrowed thirty-two prints representing American art of the depression years; included are works by such familiar names as George Bellows, Thomas Benton, John Steuart Curry, Edward Hopper, Reginald Marsh, and John Sloan.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lane will be guests of honor at a preview for members of the Museum on Saturday evening, November 23. The public is invited to attend the official opening of both the painting and the print exhibitions on Sunday afternoon, November 24, from 2 to 5 p.m. The galleries are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, and from 2 to 5 p.m., Sunday; there is no charge for admission.

Scholarship Is Aim of Holy Name Turkey Festival

Before you read another line mark the calendar now to appear at the Turkey Festival on next Monday, November 25, at 8:30 p.m. at St. Mary's Hall.

Under the spiritual directorship of Father Martin Dolphin and co-chairmen Gregory Sacca and Leo Roche of the program committee, the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Church is all set to go ahead with the turkey festival with the prime purpose of raising money for the most worthwhile Scholarship Fund.

An over-crowded audience is anticipated by the entire committee which will be most happy to be able to present you with one of the more than one-hundred and sixty items to be awarded during the course of the evening.

Your response to this annual affair will determine how many boys or girls can win the scholarship to give them an education they could not otherwise afford, So won't you do your part to help others to go ahead in this world of ours?

The evening is full of suspense and entertainment until you may be called to claim your earnings, so if you have yet to attend one of our turkey festivals, make this first one a must and you'll be anxious to go to the next one.

League Meeting Friday Discusses Foreign Affairs

The League of Women Voters has scheduled an open briefing meeting tomorrow, Friday, November 22, at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. James Baker, 7 Grove Street. "Private Investment in Developing Countries" and "Commodity Agreements" will be explored in more depth than is possible in a single unit meeting.

North American-Latin American relationship is a cause for deep concern. It rivals East-West ideological disagreements as a source of tension and conflict. Can we keep the poor countries (mostly in Latin America) from getting poorer while the rich get richer? The job of closing the gap in living standards between the rich industrialized countries and the poor underdeveloped countries has hardly begun.

"Foreign economic aid alone," U Thant, secretary General of the United Nations, says, "is no solution to this problem because such aid, though very desirable, is no substitute for fair and stable prices and expanding markets which the developing countries need to get themselves over the hump of industrialization."

Where will the necessary capital be found to build strong economies? United States investors are understandably reluctant to invest in unstable countries; yet it takes capital investment to guarantee real stability and progress.

Three countries of different economic structure will be discussed. Bolivia, Brazil and Venezuela have been caught in a vicious circle in the last decade in the struggle for export income.

The Winchester League notes with pride that Mrs. Edward Rendall is now on the State Board as chairman of Foreign Economic Policy. She has given enthusiastic help to the committee which includes Mrs. James Baker, Mrs. Norman Holmes, Mrs. Marshall Kincaid and Mrs. Richard Alt. To the many league members who have keen interest in foreign affairs, we extend a special invitation to become ad hoc members of this committee.

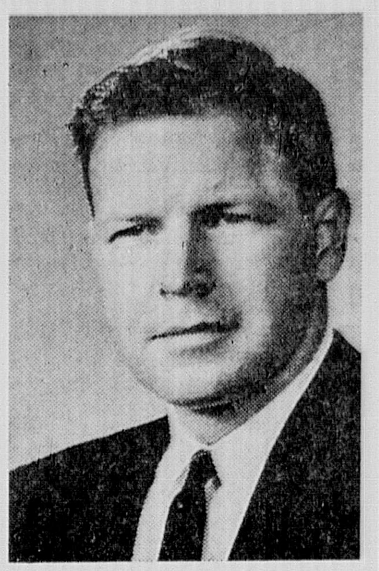
To Address Old South Seminar

"Massachusetts Courts and You" will be the subject of a talk by Robert P. Bigelow before the Old South Seminar to be held at historic Old South Church, Copley Square in Boston, on Sunday, November 24, at 8:00 p.m.



ROBERT P. BIGELOW

Assistant counsel for the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, Mr. Bigelow will discuss the structure and powers of the Commonwealth's court system.

Mr. Bigelow, who lives at 39 Grove Street received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Harvard University in 1950 and subsequently was awarded his Bachelor of Laws degree by Harvard Law School. He has been associated with the John Hancock's Legal Department since 1956.

Active in the Boston Bar Association, he is also a member of the American Bar Association Sections on Business Law, Insurance Law, and Bar Activities.

Second Award For Freedom Received By Greer Co.

Don S. Greer of 82 Arlington Street, president of the J. W. Greer Company, Wilmington, and outgoing president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, recently received from the A.I.M. for Freedom Committee, a second award for his company's second consecutive year of participation in the unique, private enterprise "people to people" program through which Massachusetts manufacturers and others contribute machinery, equipment and services to aid technical school students in developing countries to become self-sustaining and "build a better tomorrow."

Since the program was launched by A.I.M. early in 1962, more than 100 manufacturers have contributed a total of 220 tons of tools, machinery and equipment through Tools for Freedom. Of that total, 151 tons have thus far been shipped from Boston to 28 schools in 14 nations of the free world, and additional shipments are constantly being prepared.

Jaycees Invite New, Prospective Members

The Winchester Junior Chamber of Commerce invites all new and prospective members to an orientation meeting on Tuesday evening, November 26, at 7:30 p.m., at the home of membership director, Bill Bird, at 8 Lawrence Street.

This meeting will provide an excellent opportunity for men between the ages of 21 and 36 to become acquainted with Jaycee activities and objectives.

To be introduced for the first time by the Winchester Jaycees is SPOKE, an incentive program for first-year Jaycee members which offers a chance for award and recognition by the National Junior Chamber of Commerce. SPOKE chairman, Dave Petrie, will be on hand to outline the details of this program.

The name SPOKE is derived from five basic element: Service, Participation, Orientation, Knowledge, and Enthusiasm. To be eligible for the national SPOKE award, new members must participate during the first year in five mandatory Jaycee activities and earn 100 points by further participation in a number of other activities.

The SPOKE award is one of the greatest leadership training projects ever offered for new members. It offers real incentive for those who really want to serve the Jaycee organization by participating in worth-while local and state projects.

Mrs. Sibley, the wife of Robert H. Sibley of 48 Lloyd Street, has studied privately under Andrew Wyeth; Harry Ronnie, teacher of art in Arlington, New Jersey; William Hogg, head of the Art Department of Toronto, Canada, and at the Massachusetts School of Art. She is also well known in Winchester for her monologue work and as director of the Unitarian players.

More than half of the paintings exhibited were placed at this first showing.

Children's Country Store Is Success

The Children's Country Store, sponsored by the St. Mary's Mothers' Club, which was held Saturday afternoon, November 16, was a wonderful success, with many children of the town spending a very exciting afternoon and going home elated over the lovely prizes which they won on the penny tables.

Mrs. John W. O'Grady handled the affair expertly. The officers of the St. Mary's Mothers' Club are very grateful for her efforts and time involved in making this the tremendous success it was. And, many thanks, too, to the wonderful gals who worked diligently under the capable direction of Mrs. O'Grady. They are: Mrs. James Murphy, Mrs. Bernard Stygles, Mrs. Donald Bumiller, Mrs. William A. Smith, Jr., Mrs. John W. Carey, and Mrs. Charles McLaughlin.

MSPCA Members Hear of a Good Turn for Terns

Undulating sand dunes, dazzling beaches and angry waves were seen in all their beauty on the slides which introduced Mr. J. C. Appel's fascinating lecture on Plum Island's Parker River Refuge, where birds and animals find asylum.

Mr. Appel spoke last Monday at Winchester Auxiliary of M.S.P.C.A.'s monthly meeting held at Mrs. W. E. Underwood's attractive Ravenscroft Road home.

The original "bird on Nellie's hat," the silver and black tern, a small relative of the sea gull, was almost annihilated years ago. The fashion for tailored hats came along just in time! Now, Mr. Appel warned, the tern would be in grave danger of extinction if some refuge were not provided. (Parker River is one such.) The birds' arch enemies are beach buggies and hunters.

Beach buggies create deep ruts in the sand out of which a tern cannot seem to escape, hence becoming helpless prey to the next car which rolls along. In the case of hunters, if a tern is shot his sympathetic friends and relatives (literally) gather around to find out what's wrong and to offer assistance. This, of course, provides the hunter with a perfect shot at the entire group!

Prior to the lecture, members discussed plans for a Junior branch of the M.S.P.C.A. here in Winchester. Mrs. Lewis Snow is forming a committee and Mr. John LaVigne of the American Humane Education Society is to meet with them to further plans.

A delicious tea was served by Mrs. Dean Carleton and Mrs. Richard Cannon, assisted by Mrs. William Macdonald. Mrs. Richard Chase and Mrs. Crosby Kelley poured.

Mrs. George Winterson and Mrs. F. J. Hughes are co-chairmen for the event, assisted by the following committee: Laura Boyden, Mrs. U. Conti, Mrs. Walter Crotty, Mrs. Percy Cliff, Mrs. Emilio D'Errico, Mrs. Daniel Doherty, Mrs. James Donohoe, Mrs. Harold McCarthy, Mrs. Peter Murphy, Mrs. William Perkins, Mrs. William Pearce, and Mrs. Harold Smethurst.

A regular meeting of the Guild will be held in the afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Rev. John J. White of St. Patrick's Church, Stoneham, will be the speaker. His subject will be "Mental Health and Community Responsibility."

Mother Borella's paintings form a pre-Christmas showing presented by Miss Charlotte Dempsey, director of the Art Centre, which is under the auspices of the Red Feather agencies and serves the children of the Boston area. It provides an opportunity for the artistically inclined children to develop their talent under the guidance of trained personnel. The Centre's exhibition program gives the children a chance to see work done by representative artists in the area.

Marycliff Academy also donated two works to the recent auction-exhibit at the DeCordova Museum, Lincoln. Mother Borella gave her two-color etching "Saul." Chosen from among the high school art students' work was a piece by Paula Beatrice, a sophomore from Medford. It was a monotype entitled "Night Flowers." Paula won a Certificate of Merit in the National Scholastic Art Awards contest last spring.

"God Omnipotent Makes Man Triumphant" Lecture

To accept God as "the only real power in our lives" is the key to man's victory over evil, said a Christian Science lecturer here last Friday.

Noel D. Bryan-Jones of England was the speaker, under sponsorship of First Church of Christ, Scientist. The title of the lecture was "God Omnipotent Makes Man Triumphant." It was given in the church edifice.

A rule of Christian Science, Mr. Bryan-Jones said is that "we must always begin with God."

He noted that the Bible speaks of God as "Almighty." "If He weren't almighty, He wouldn't be God," said the lecturer.

"God isn't merely the greatest power in the universe; He is the only real power there is. He isn't just a glorified being; He is the only Life there is, the only Principle of existence," he said.

He quoted from the textbook by Mary Baker Eddy, discoverer of Christian Science: "The starting point of divine Science is that God, Spirit, is All-in-all, and that there is no other might nor Mind,—that God is Love, and therefore He is divine Principle." (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 275).

"This Spirit, this Love, this Life is the God" to whom Jesus taught us to pray as "Our Father," said the lecturer.

And because He is the Father "we need to remind ourselves of our divine sonship.

"Never do we have to reach out blindly for the Father," he declared For "Jesus said, 'Behold, the kingdom of God is within you'" (Luke 17:21).

This "intimate sense of sonship" comes to us through the Christ he said. It's part of the "pattern for all Christian praying left to us in the Lord's prayer"—acknowledging God's infinite presence as "a loving Father."

Such prayer "has healed countless cases of hopeless disease," the lecturer stated.

He related the case of one man who had been dying in a hospital of what was diagnosed as an incurable skin disease. It was then that he asked for Christian Science treatment, left the hospital, and was completely healed, said Mr. Bryan-Jones.

Such healing "is not primarily physical," he said. "It is spiritual illumination, destroying in our thought the sin of believing in a power other than God.

"It makes great demands upon us," he said.

"It means giving up, sometimes with a great mental struggle, habits of thought and action which have been cherished for many years.

"Sometimes, healing calls for a great mental purifying, a willingness to love, a willingness to obey what we know in our hearts is the highest standard of thought and behavior. God, good must be loved. Life, God, must be lived. Principle must be obeyed. Truth must be embodied."

If we "seem to fall short of this divine pattern," it's because "we're not understanding our divine heritage as man," the lecturer asserted.

"The image of God can never be unlike God," he declared. "When it seems to be so, there's something wrong somewhere. But it isn't wrong with God; and it isn't wrong with man. It's just that we're looking in the wrong mirror, the twisted mirror of mistaken material sense instead of the pure mirror of Truth.

"As we begin to understand our real nature, our power to be the sons of God, we are able to combat all that would tend to lower the divine standard.

"Accept fully the omnipotence of God," he said, "and we experience the dominion of man as spiritual, under the complete control of divine Mind.

"Does this seem presumptuous?" he asked. "Is it presumptuous to claim for ourselves all that God gives us, the dominion and grandeur of spiritual being?

"Wouldn't it rather be presumptuous to accept the belief that on occasions God isn't able to maintain His image man, fully and constantly?

"God is the loving Father always," the lecturer declared, "tenderly caring for each one of us as a beloved idea, an infinitely valued creation.

"This is our authority for living, because it is our Father's will; it's our authority for being well and happy and prosperous, because our creator is Life—and Life is good! This is the nature of God, and therefore it must be the nature of man as His beloved son."

'64 Motor Vehicle Registration Is At Woburn Armory

The Motor Vehicle Registry will have an office in the Woburn Armory on Main Street, starting on Monday, November 25, from 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m., for the processing of 1964 car registrations.

Registry Inspector Anthony Melaragna recommended that car owners wishing to expedite service should get their applications in early. Last year the Woburn office handled approximately 14,000 car registrations in this area for a total of $110,000 in fees.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

You see a jagged yellow flash and then you know lightning has hit the ground. Or, at least, so it seems. But science says most lightning actually strikes UP, not down! An invisible electrical tongue from a cloud finally touches the earth; then the real lightning stroke begins. Because of the "grounding," intense luminosity and current is produced. This makes the blind flash, and crashing thunder. It doesn't last long - usually less than 1/100th of a second. But a lightning bolt may be a foot in diameter and several miles long.

In the time it takes you to breathe just once, lightning will strike the earth somewhere a hundred times. - shattering wrecking, burning or killing.

Lightning accounts for 37% of all rural fires, and takes a big toll in damage and lives - killing more than 400 people in the U. S. last year, and doing over $100 million in property damage.

But, fortunately, the effects of lightning can be reduced by preventive devices - and of course, through fire insurance coverages.

Enlist And Stay at Home For Holidays

Army Sergeant Fred T. Nixon announced today that, in response to numerous requests, the Army Recruiting Service has scheduled "Operation Holiday" for the month of December.

This will be the 4th year that such a program has been in effect, Sergeant Nixon said, and it has received such acceptance in the past that it is well on the way to becoming an annual event. Under "Operation Holiday," qualified young men may enlist between the 16th of December and the 1st of January yet remain at home—on leave—until the holiday season is over.

Often referred to as the "enlist now, train later" plan, this program permits young men to determine their qualifications, to pick their assignments, to enlist for those assignments, but delay their initial "basic training" until after the first of the year.

Young men interested in receiving more information about this unique program should contact Sergeant Nixon at 49 High Street, Medford or telephone EX 6-5777.

Winter Driving

Chief of Police Joseph J. Derro, who worries about next month's traffic safety record like the rest of us worry about next month's budget, today explained a unique characteristic of winter driving hazards.

"It's clear to most drivers," Chief Derro began, "that winter driving involves many of the same danger factors that are with us the year around — such as, other drivers missing their signals, kids running into the street, jay-walking pedestrians, and the like.

"What we may forget is that winter weather can rob us of our best means of coping with such hazards."

The chief pointed out that a driver defends himself by keeping a sharp lookout and, when danger looms, depending upon his brakes for a sure, safe stop.

"Both of these vital defenses against accidents — looking and stopping—can be rendered ineffective by the twin winter hazards of sharply lowered visibility and reduced road traction," he explained.

"Lowered visibility results from darkness, falling snow, frost or snow that has not been carefully cleared from car windows. This makes it entirely possible that we won't see trouble as soon as we should. And then what happens? A fast stop may be out of the question—no matter how good our brakes are—if the roadway is glazed by ice or packed snow."

Even if a driver is moving at a speed below the normal, legal limit, say 20 miles an hour—it will take some 60 feet to bring his car to a stop on loosely packed snow and close to 200 feet on glare ice, the chief warned. "This fact has been clearly demonstrated in scientific tests by the Committee on Winter Driving Hazards of the National Safety Council and it has the endorsement of the International Association of Chiefs of Police," he said.

"These two terrible hazards—poor visibility and poor traction—are going to have a lot to say about our safety record in the months ahead," Chief Derro predicted. "Drivers who have accidents may talk about 'bad luck'—but accidents aren't caused by bad luck as often as they are by taking chances. The dangers of winter driving could be pretty well neutralized by guarding our two best defenses: our ability to see and our ability to stop."

The means by which winter safety capability can be maintained are neither new nor difficult, the chief observed. For seeing they include adequate defrosting equipment, a few minutes of scraping windows clear of snow and ice, effective windshield wipers, and properly aimed lights. For reasonably quick stopping they include balanced brakes, good tires, and reinforced tire chains.

"We mention these things because they can contribute so much to a good winter safety record," the chief said, "but I also want to point out that the men of this department have a personal interest in this. When they're out directing traffic on a wintry night, it means a lot to them that drivers can see them in plenty of time to stop safely."

Youth Service Director Gives Talk On Supervised Parole

Parents Afraid Of Their Children State Can't Build Enough Institutions For Delinquents Adequately Supervised Parole The Alternative.

Dr. John D. Coughlan, director of the State Department of Education's Division of Youth Service, and chairman of the Youth Service Board, was presented the annual "Honor Award" of the Massachusetts Juvenile Police Officers Association. The event was held recently at a luncheon at The Fantasia, Cambridge.

He told the state-wide membership that a current nation-wide wave of juvenile delinquency, in far too many cases, to "the unseating of mother and father as king and queen, and their replacement by pampered, undisciplined, teenage tyrants."

"Indeed, some parents are completely afraid of 15-year-old children.

"These same children show contempt for all authority figures—the home, the church, the school, and certainly the police and courts.

"In other cases they are the bewildered and deprived victims of cruelty and neglect."

Dr. Coughlin added "the situation is so acute that the Commonwealth cannot keep pace with the number of boys and girls being sent to the board by juvenile courts.

"Merely building institutions is not the answer. It has become increasingly important for us to build, instead, more adequate programs of prevention and control, in addition to improving institutional treatment and training to arrest the resurging tide. Attorney General Robert Kennedy has repeatedly pointed to the dangers of failing to take effective action.

"At this very moment we have so many boys in our custody that we are running out of space for sleeping and recreation and our other programs.

"I believe fundamentally in parole on the juvenile level as a means of reducing institutionalization. I believe in it as a means of saving children by using the resources of the community, but I must confess to you that I do not believe that juvenile parole has really had the chance to succeed, despite all our efforts to improve the program and to provide the maximum safeguards for society.

"And that it cannot succeed in its basic concept until we have enough men and women of the kind that can do this job, to provide the supervision which is so vitally needed to prevent repetition by offending juveniles. Let me repeat and emphasize adequate supervision; without it parole for juveniles can become a mere device for release, to which I object with all my heart.

"My concept is one of complete after-care and supervision, of counseling and help, of close and constant personal contact, of educational counseling in the lives of these children and by our parole agents. For the past five years I have repeatedly sought to win acceptance of this changed concept. I will continue to do so and earnestly solicit your help.

"It is not enough to have a program within the institution. The real test is—how well he or she does in the community upon return.

"To double or triple our parole personnel would still save the Commonwealth tremendous amounts of money. It costs an average of $3000 per child per year in our institutions. With our present inadequate parole force, we spend only about $200 per child on parole in the community. Obviously, to have enough people to do the job as it should be done would not only be more humane, it would be vastly less expensive and much more effective."

Dr. Coughlan paid tribute to the juvenile parole officers for helping many boys and girls "straighten out." He described the policemen as "the first line of defense in a campaign to reduce the rate of juvenile delinquency."

However, he added that "the root of the problem is in the home. There is no simple solution, but before the psychologists wrote about children, there was an effective method of parental control—the salutary discipline and supervision coupled with real love incumbent on all parents that are indispensable if children are to develop into normal youths and adults.

He also lauded the police for being "one of the few groups in our society that are meeting the juvenile delinquency problem before it reaches the juvenile court."

"Our police deserve our commendation. They are our friends and our defenders and are not afraid to do their duty patroling our city streets. I think it incumbent upon me to make public note of the fidelity and fearlessness exemplified by the officers who in past months sacrificed their lives for society. Not one shirked his duty in the moment of truth. Indeed it is significant that some were actually off duty."

Coughlan also pointed out that the Massachusetts Detention program, with centers in Roslindale, Worcester, Westfield and Jamaica Plain, is the first and only State-supported system of its kind in the country.

"This program," said Coughlan, 'exists to safeguard youngsters awaiting trial and arraignment and to serve the police and the courts. It is a striking symbol of the kind of cooperation which exists in our State between the police and courts and the Youth Service Division.

"Unfortunately, we are now severely cramped for physical facilities, and it has become necessary to propose the next step in the original plan by adding another large center in Essex County to serve that area and Northern Middlesex. There are over 1½ million people here," he pointed out, "and it has now become necessary to meet the area's needs more adequately and to help relieve overcrowding in the Boston units, by providing new facilities.

Coughlan closed his remarks by restating his oft-repeated plea during the past five years for special legislation for handling offenders. "Recent shocking and saddening events have once again focused attention on the need for sounder methods and better protection of society in handling offenders between 17 and 21, and even up to 23," Coughlan said. "Several years ago I sought to develop support for new legislation in this age range. Unfortunately nothing has been done and the problem of the youthful offender remains one of the greatest challenges to the Commonwealth.

"I can only hope that under Governor Peabody, who has moved in to improve parole, the shortsighted and often submerged opposition to this basic proposal will soon be overcome and that a completely new program will be developed involving probation and parole, special diagnosis and treatment, and modern facilities. All of us have a stake in this matter because this is the most serious area of threat to our society."

Telephone "Pioneers" Help Locally

Individual members of the Winchester unit of the Telephone pioneers have helped tremendously in preparing and sorting the 240,000 pieces of mail that will carry the 1963 Christmas Seals to homes in Middlesex County. Miss Kay Doyle, of 83 Sheridan Circle, past president of the Telephone Pioneers Chapter of Winchester and a member of the Active Council, has been a leader of members of the chapter who journey to Burlington regularly to assist in preparation of the Christmas Seal appeal.

Although the local telephone "Pioneers," a retired group of former telephone workers, who make their headquarters at the attractive Pioneer Lounge at 125 Washington Street, are best known for their work in behalf of the blind, their individual members participate in a wide variety of good works including the fight against tuberculosis and other respiratory diseases through Christmas Seals.

Other members of the Telephone Pioneers who have served with Kay Doyle include: Mrs. Mary McCarthy, Mrs. Norma Lindquist, Mrs. Estelle Duran and Mrs. Adelaide Stockwell.

Chairman of the Publicity and Public Relations Committee for the Winchester area is Sherman Russell of 1 Wolcott Road. Mr. Russell is a veteran worker in the fight against TB and has served in the capacity of chairman of the Winchester TB Committee for many years. The many posters, signs and store exhibits are the work of Mr. Russell and his committee.

Wakefield Trims Sachems 26-18; Cutting Outstanding In Defeat

Wakefield wanted it and took it. It was as simple as that. A comparatively small crowd of some 3,000 at chilled and wind-swept Walton Field, Wakefield, witnessed the Warriors' 26-18 win and generally agreed this to be so.

With just two minutes gone in the game, Junior quarterback John Sage hit end co-captain Tom Stuetzer with a pass play that covered 54 yards and put the Warriors on the Winchester 15-yard line. A converted guard named Tony Pietrafitta, running at fullback, carried twice to the two. Halfback Dick Encarnacao, playing with a harness to hold his dislocated shoulder in place, picked up one more. Then Sage himself kept and went over for the score. The conversion attempt failed.

The Sachems rebounded in the second quarter, apparently determined to make a go of it. Halfback Ed Cutting sparked the first drive when he failed to find receivers open on an option play and sprinted 13 yards to the Wakefield 14. Four plays later, fullback Jack Kimball cracked over from two yards out to tie the score. The try for extra points failed. The Sachems, still having their problems, ran their string of unsuccessful conversion attempts to eight in this game; five in the Reading contest and three at Wakefield.

After another quick exchange, Cutting, repeating the option, tossed long to end Vic Papadinis who gathered the ball in on the Warrior 4, and put Winchester out in front 12-6 with a play that totaled 35 yards.

The lead, however, was not long enjoyed. Two downs later, and with less than two minutes remaining in the half, Sage and Stuetzer teamed again on a 75-yard pass play. Stuetzer also held onto a Sage pass for two extra points, giving Wakefield a 14-12 intermission margin.

The second half began with a bang, but it exploded right in the faces of the Sachems. After Encarnacao and Pietrafitta shared nine ground plays, and picked up three first downs in the process, Sage bucked his way to pay dirt from the two. Five plays later, Pietrafitta, running like a miniature Jimmy Brown, stole the show and made a shambles of the same Sachem defense that had held Wakefield to a mere 12 yards rushing in the first half on two consecutive carries that netted 42 yards and a 26-12 Warrior lead.

Winchester's final touchdown came early in the fourth period and was once again the by-product of a Cutting option. This time, Papadinis, battling two defenders, collected a 35-yard pass and was immediately downed on the one-yard line. A minute later, Cutting went over for the score.

Now, with a little more than six minutes left in the game, neither team could sustain any appreciable drive. The ball changed hands seven times, and ultimately ended with Wakefield in possession on the Sachem 29-yard line.

Eastern Dog Club 51st Annual Show Saturday, Sunday

A total of 1155 canines are entered in the two-day Eastern Dog Club Show to be held next Saturday and Sunday (November 23-24) at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston.

The 51st Annual event will feature demonstrations on both days by the Boston Police Department's Canine Corps which will display the many and varied duties the dog can perform that would not be possible of the officer alone.

The New England Dog Training Club, which will sponsor the Obedience Trial on Saturday only, will conduct its very popular demonstrations on Sunday afternoon and evening.

A plaque will be presented to the Massachusetts Veterinary Association by the Eastern Dog Club. Dr. Howard C. Adams, president will receive the award for the Association from Charles R. Miles, president of the club. It is made on the occasion of the Centennial Anniversary of the American Veterinary Medical Association and as a means of extending the thanks of Eastern for the excellent cooperation received from the Veterinary group over the years.

The youngsters will again get their chance to display their ability when the Junior Showmanship Competition is held on Sunday afternoon.

Breed and obedience judging will continue all day Saturday. Group winners will be selected on Sunday afternoon and evening and the Best in Show will be chosen on Sunday night.

Belmont Here Saturday For Postponed Game

Belmont High School, currently riding in second place in the Middlesex League, will come to Winchester for its postponed game with the Sachems of Winchester High, commencing at 1:30.

This is the game that was postponed two weeks ago, and both teams want it badly, Belmont to keep its hopes alive in the league race, and Winchester to pick up one more win before the big game with Woburn Thanksgiving.

Belmont set back luckless Stoneham, 18-0, last Saturday at Belmont, which is better than Winchester's showing aginst the big Blue. There was a big element of luck in Belmont's Stoneham victory and Winchester figures this is one it can win.

Last Saturday at Wakefield the Sachems did everything but win the game, and they might have done that had they wanted the win a bit more!

Saturday is another day, and with Winchester in its familiar underdog role, anything can happen, and, it probably will!

Franklin D. Roosevelt was end and halfback on the second team at Groton School in 1899. At Harvard, he was elected captain of a freshman scrub team in 1900.

"Quality Is Our Most Precious Asset"

Lynch Ties McCall

In the final game of the season for both schools, the underdog Lynch Junior High School football team held the favored McCall Junior High to a 6-6 tie at the Lynch Field last Wednesday afternoon.

Going into the contest visiting McCall held a 3-3 record, while Lynch had a 1-5 record. The latter realized it had to go all out to give the favorites any kind of competition. McCall was at full strength, while Coach Provinzano of Lynch used his co-captain, Bob Russo, sparingly at fullback because of a charley horse developed the day before the crucial game.

An anxious and eager audience of about 700 reported for the contest that ended in complete darkness and satisfaction.

McCall kicked off to start the game and Lynch did well to move the ball from the 20 to the visitors' 40 when Jim Mumma and Bob Russo were finally halted and Mumma punted to push McCall back to the fifteen. McCall was stopped in the first series of carries and had to kick out of danger. Quarterback Brian Collins caught the punt and after advancing a few yards handed off on a criss cross to Jim Mumma who was stopped by McCall's Schlener on the 35 yard marker. Collins called for single wing with Mumma and Russo showing gains to the right side and Scott Bennett then made a first down on a T counter reaching midfield. Going into a third down kick formation Brian carried through the middle for four yards and had to kick out of trouble.

Dave DeTeso, McCall's signal caller then got his team rolling when he called on the fast running combination of Bob Nutile and Dan Magee. After controlling the ball for three series and getting close to pay dirt the first period ended and with the ball on Lynch's 45, the Lynch line dug in and held McCall who then had to kick.

With a beautiful block by Brian Collins, Scott Bennett was able to return the punt for twenty yards. Being contained in the next series, Mumma dropped back to punt but because of a low pass from center had to try to run it out but was hit by Reardon, Blanch and Queen.

With both teams then failing to gain the ball went back and forth until Lynch got rolling with the single wing. Collins, Mumma, Russo and Bennett were able to reach McCall's 40 and Collins then faked a sweep right to hit end Kevin Barry deep to the right for a pass and a touchdown covering 40 yards. Russo's attempt through the middle for the extra points failed.

With the first half near ending McCall's DeTeso faded back to pass at several occasions which were not successful. Having to kick to Lynch, Collins called upon his back to advance and finally Collins dropped back to throw a deep pass to the middle where Scott Bennett tucked it in and being ahead of the opposition he got excited and rather than going straight ahead for pay dirt he zig-zagged and was finally caught from behind on the four-yard line when the half ended.

The second half saw McCall's Nutile, Magee and Bates doing some fancy stepping but once deep in Lynch's territory were unable to reach that last white line. Then DeTeso handed off to Bob Nutile on a cross buck to the left and once Bob got beyond the line of scrimmage, he was off for a 35 yard run around his left end and did not stop until he scored the tying six points. McCall tried to hit the line for the extra points but failed and the game ended in a 6-6 tie with practically complete darkness setting in.

Sorry the writer is not familiar with the names of the cute cheerleaders yelling them on for McCall but on the Lynch side were Co-Captains Jane Sexton and Candy Nelson, Karen McCormack, Martha Broadhurst, Mary Fenoglio, Mary Ann Hill, Becky Irwin, Corlane Crandall, Kim Reeves, Maureen O'Toole, Shelly Swanson, Kathy Quigley, Janice Leighton and Sharon Keith.

Recreation Club Varies Activities

On Saturday, November 2, the Recreation Club held its first meeting in the McCall Junior High School gym. Approximately 250 persons attended the evening meeting which was chiefly for registration.

The second meeting of the Recreation Club was held the following Saturday night, November 9, and had as activities, basketball, ping pong, and records for dancing.

Throughout the year, the Recreation Club will vary its activities; having basketball, ping pong, and records on most nights, and holding a dance whenever the high school gym is available and whenever there is no conflict with any other church or school function.

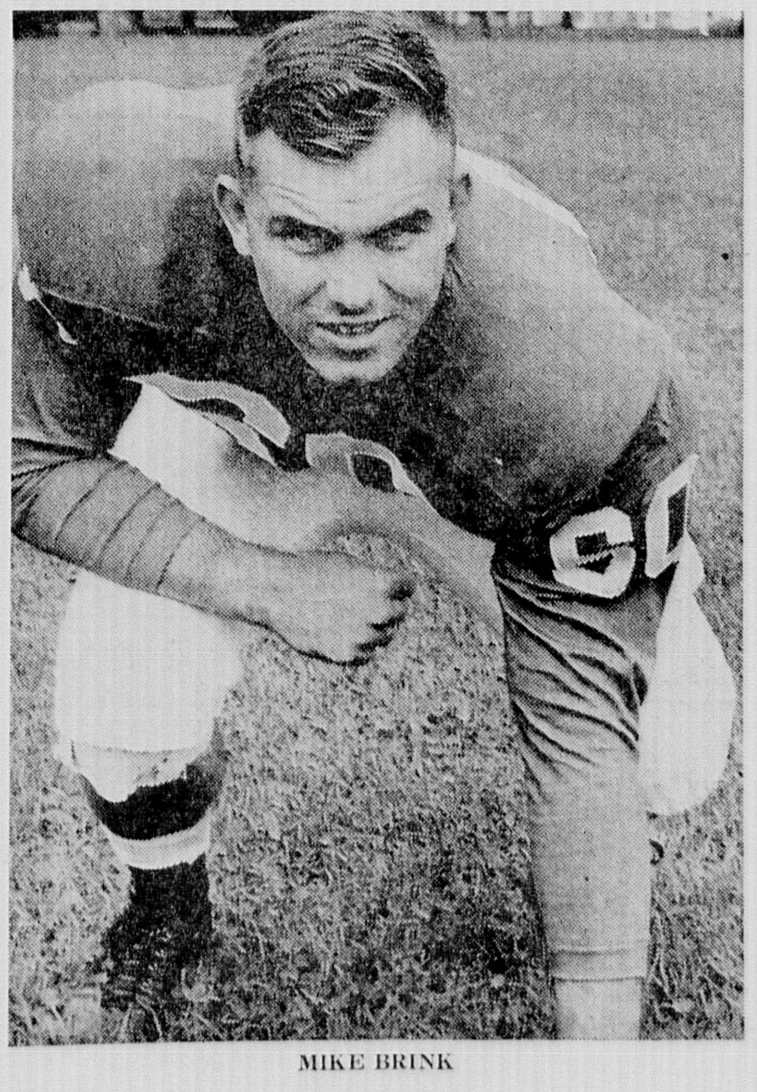
St. Lawrence Linebacker



MIKE BRINK

Despite its first losing season since 1958, SLU with a 3-4 record, had a good shot at a 5-2 finish, but the mud and rain, plus the University of Rochester and Hobart College spoiled Saint hopes at home for its final two games. Both UR and Hobart wins were unexpected and came as upsets.

Brink will be back as a senior Saint in 1964 to face an eight-game card including two new foes, Bates College and Susquehanna University.

BY FRANK PROCOPIO

The Navy's Frank Dattilo (j.g.), who hasn't seen very much of football these last few months, has just returned from exercises in the Orient where he served aboard a destroyer. Now, temporarily stationed at Long Beach, California, Frank is considering a transfer to submarine duty . . . Local college hockey candidates include: Steve Powers (Northeastern) and Bill Lamarche (Harvard) of Winchester, and Jack Rotondo (Boston College) of Woburn . . . Speaking of Woburn, if sophomore quarterback Eddie Foley doesn't succeed Jack Concannon next year BC ought to option him off to the Patriots. Which should present a fair idea of how set the Eagles are in this department and how, suddenly, the Pats are sorrowfully lacking . . . It was either too much or too little imagination on Babe Parilli's part to send Harry Crump into the middle four consecutive times with a first and goal from the Kansas City one yard line in last Sunday's 24-24 bit of frustration. Has it ever been accomplished before? One yard out, four tries, and a total gain of one-half yard . . . Winchester High School's Varsity Club, under the direction of Coach Henry Knowlton, will sponsor an exhibition of the world-traveling Harlem Stars on December 7th. These zany basketball wizards began their current season the last week of September in Alaska and plan to hit about forty states; Mexico, Canada, Australia, Japan and parts of Europe are also on their schedule. The Stars feature Raymond Lee, 6ft 4 in., Bob "Indiana Slim" Johnson, 6 ft. 8 in., Aturo Agard, 6 ft. 6 in., Donald "Gildersleeve" Beckner, 6 ft. 7 in., Charles "Ike" Harris, 6 ft 4 in., and Showboat Buckner, only 5 ft. 2 in., but packed with speed, deception and showmanship . . . Don Allard tossed four TD passes last Sunday to pace the Boston Sweepers in the season's finale win over the Ansonia (Ct.) Black Knights, 38-7. Rick Sapienza hauled in three and Butch Mahoney the fourth . . . The New York Giants, who released speedster Johnny Counts last week, must possess acute perception. Two years ago football fans felt that they had made a mistake in releasing Bobby Gaiters. Gaiters has just been dropped by Denver of the A.F.L. . . . End Roger Deminico had the good fortune of playing with a team of genuine championship caliber this year. More so since the University of Massachusetts (8-0-1) had the good sense to reject a post-season bowl bid last Monday.

Ring Magazine has demoted former heavyweight boxing champion Floyd Patterson from fourth contender to sixth . . . And on the night of December 9th two non-contenders named Tom McNeeley and Duke (6ft. 9 in.) Sabedong will again present Boston Arena fans to a legalized street fight. Also rematched on the same card are Charlestown's Dick DiVola, NE lightweight champ, and Roxbury's Tommy Tibbs . . . Major league baseball's inter-league trading period gets under way this week and rumors are still flying rampant that Dick Radatz will go to San Francisco for slugger Orlando Cepeda.

Sachems Basketball Squad Starts Practice Sessions

The nucleus of the 1963 WHS basketball squad will be made up of two returning first string lettermen, 6ft. 3in. forward Vic Papadinis, and 5ft. 11in. Bob Branley, quarterback on the football team.

Last year's freshman teams did not enjoy the victories of past seasons, winning only three games out of 28. Prospective players from McCall include Steve Fahey, Bill Floyd, John Doherty, and Steve Harris. Players from Lynch are Whitney Gay, Mike Cosgrove, and John Collins.

Approximately 50 boys are fighting for positions on the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams. Practice started last Friday, November 15 and will continue daily until the first game on December 6. Scrimmages have been arranged with Somerville, Natick and Medford.

Seniors: Peter Fahey, Tom Ford, John Yagjian, Ron Eriksen, Bill Hilfinger, John O'Connor, Bob Washburn, John Gannon Victor Papadinis, Buddy Rotondi, Bob Branley.

Notre Dame was still going strong to hold first place when it whipped Army 8-0 to move the losers from 4th to 5th. Capt. Moose Bellino of N. D. is having an extremely successful year and knocked the pins over for scores of 117-125-145 and little Emile Doucette helped considerably with 103-128-106. The big guns for Army but in a losing cause were Capt. Choppers Gangi 91-115-116, Jack McIsaac 107-97-105 and Correction Fiore 92-109-103.

Second place is held by Yale after taking seventh place B.C. by a 6-2 score. The winners Capt. Richie Bucci should be satisfied with strings of 122-104-130 and helping his team was Al Saragosa with 94-93-113. B.C.'s Max LaCarubba was the only one of his unit to hit the 300 mark with 95-106-101.

Bates defeated Maryland 6-2 to hold onto third place while the losers dropped one notch to twelfth place. Capt. Bob Fiore of Bates was hot with tallies of 113-137-115, his brother Roundy helped with 104-110-100 as did Arka Amico with 111-101-101. Three hundred hitters for the defeated were Gaspar Lentine 89-122-105 and John Dattilo 94-105-114.

Navy moved back into fourth place after winning eight over last place Alabama and having a big hand in the victory were Capt. Richie Riga 90-151-130, Joe DiTucci 117-84-111 and Mario Mascioli 97-96-103. Coming closest to 300 for Alabama was Capt. Dick Tofuri with 91-103-96.

Capt. Dick Trabucco's California team still holds sixth place but lost to ninth place Georgetown. Having much to do with the win were Tony Chefalo who hit for 99-115-109 and Pucky Perritano 90-115-108 while the top performer for the losers was Trabucco's 110-106-95.

Moving up one slot to eighth is Harvard even though it split 4-4 with eleventh place St. Mary's. Going over the 300 mark for Harvard were Joe Capone 111-87-111 and old reliable Hokie Procopio 107-101-94 while doing likewise for the St. Mary's unit were Rudy Fiore 108-114-88 and Capt. John Mangano 101-97-111.

Penn moved from last to thirteenth place as a result of taking eight points from Holy Cross who moved from eighth to tenth spot. Penn really zeroed in when Carl Bertolucci rolled 112-106-117, Capt. Babe Tofuri 95-106-121 and John Frongillo 109-86-110. The sole 300 bowler for H. C. was Capt. Muskie Tofuri who had 99-121-101.

There are but two more weeks before the end of the first half and there will be many old college tries in this short time to try to win berths for playoffs. If the lead teams relax just a bit it could mean a big difference in the final tries for the first half so let's go men!

Well it happened to the Kools! After seven weeks on top they dropped to second place. By a slim margin of four pins the Newports are in first place. That's Rose DeTeso's team.

Next week all eyes will be on alleys one and two. Reason: Newports and Kools will be battling it out. May the best team win. If Peggy Fiore bowls as she did last week, Kools look out. Peggy had three successive spares, and also made the 100 club. Nice going Peggy!

As for Dottie Falzano, I hear she fell down. Sure hope she did not hurt herself. We hear she finished the string, with her sore wrist and did very well. No more falls Dottie, one is enough.

The Rams continue to hold the commanding lead as the teams near the end of the first half of the season. All they need is two eight point nights and they will clinch the first half championship.

Apologies to Charlie Allen for not mentioning his big night two weeks ago. The shock of the whole thing was too much for this old heart to stand.

Bob Taylor had the spotlight for a while the other night the way he was knocking the pins down. He probably thought he was aiming at milk bottles.

This week is turkey week. All members should make an attempt to be present. No bowling Thanksgiving night.

Eddie Hughes rolled a nice 363 to help Peterson Chair move into second place and only 2 points behind Bowladrome. Danny Winn had a bad night, or it might have been a different story as Peterson Chair rolled over Woburn Carpet taking all 8 points.

Butch Garvey had high single for the night, 135 and paced Winchester Bowladrome to a 6 point win over Winchester Esso. Phil Dresser of Winchester Esso rolled a 326, the only 300 posted for his team.

Trefrey took 6 from Cradock by only 11 pins. Alan Motors took all 8 from Olsen Pontiac with Moe Russo the only man for the losers to hit over 300. San-O Cleaners swept 6 points from Suburban Construction.

V.F.W. Auxiliary

Sorry that the reports of the V. F. W. Aberjona Post Auxiliary's November 7th bowling did not appear in the paper, due to illness. The only item of interest on this date was the fact that Norma Kenton joined the "100 Club." Sure hope that Sam sees this.

Now to report on the bowling of November 14th. Rose Airey captured the high triple of the evening with a 311. Rose now holds the season's high triple and high single.

The second high bowler of the evening was Rose's sister, Fran Lucas, who rolled a 295 triple string total. Rose DiTucci was the third bowler of the evening with a 285.

Sachem — Tanner Contest Figures To Be Even

Winchester's Sachems disappointed a lot of people this year. They were supposed to win a few football games. Some enterprising forecasters even tabbed them as contenders in the strong Middlesex League. Instead, the Sachems have won only one league game, have blown more opportunities than most teams see in four seasons, and generally looked like they learned their football out of a Herman Hickman instruction booklet.

Between now and Thanksgiving morning the Sachems and their slowly dwindling cohort of loyal fans will have to endure even more. Today (Thursday) first quarter marks are released and a few names will undoubtedly grace the ineligibility list. On Saturday the make-up game of the November 16th rainout with Belmont will be played. Yet, barring a catastrophe of consummating proportion they should still be in reasonably good shape to face Woburn's Tanners.

They say you can toss the record book away when analyzing the annual Woburn-Winchester encounter, and it matters not what each team has or has not accomplished. But no statement could be more infested with falsehood. The Sachems lost last year because they had been losing all season long and had no other recourse but to lose again. The year before, Woburn simply outscored the last of the second generation Bellinos—Mike. Three years ago Winchester had a more logical excuse for losing when they had to face a rifle-armed quarterback named Eddie Foley.

This year, 6,723 (seating capacity)—plus will witness a contest between two teams that haven't exactly overwhelmed the football world. Long range weather bulletins predict a sharp, cold morning—cold enough to enhance thoughts of simmering afternoon turkey. Unfortunately, the brand of football doesn't figure to do much to improve anybody's appetite.

The 27th annual Winchester-Woburn Victory Dance will be held at Winchester High School Thanksgiving night, all proceeds going to the Scholarship Fund.

Lockheed Aircraft Announces Fifteen Full Scholarships

Planning on college next fall? Then how does this sound?

Four years' free college tuition. An extra five hundred dollars a year for expenses. Enrollment in one of the nation's major colleges or universities. A total package worth $8000, qualifying you for a good job in the aerospace industry upon graduation.

How do you get it? Through a Lockheed scholarship.

The Lockheed Leadership Fund is offering 15 all-expense-paid scholarships to qualified high school seniors. Ten are in engineering and science, five in other fields. Scholarships are for next fall in colleges and universities throughout the nation.

What study fields are available? Anything related to the aerospace-electronics industry—and this is a very broad area including almost all the physical and life sciences, related technologies, and every aspect of modern business and management. If you have demonstrated leadership potential by your school grades and participation in school and community activities, you owe it to yourself to apply.

How do you apply? You can get full details from the principal's office, including a list of schools and colleges to which you should direct your application. Don't delay. Deadlines for applying vary from college to college. You should get your application in at the college of your choice as soon as possible to be considered for scholarships beginning in 1964.

Marycliff Acad. First Honor Roll

The students in the second grade room of Miss Norma Littlefield's and Miss Eileen Cummings' room at the Mystic School are preparing the Thanksgiving program to be given next Monday, November 25, to all parents and school mates.

Against a life-sized mural, the children will tell the story of the Pilgrims, their struggles and hardships and their way of life in America. The narration of the story is being done through choral speaking and dramatized by the action and dialogue of the players on the stage. One group is doing a creative Indian dance, another group is performing a Dutch dance and the Children's Polka, all students will participate.

A choir is also singing a medley of Thanksgiving songs.

Galen, born in Asia Minor in 131 A.D., was an early and potent name in medicine and his influence was felt until the 17th Century. In fact, it is quite possible that even today pharmacopoeias are still not totally free of some of the compounds of no worth called vegetable simples, or galenicals, attributed to Galen.

One result of Galen's teaching was the Galencian system of therapeutics which called for use of several thousand drugs. It wasn't uncommon for a single prescription to call for a hundred or more drugs.

We aren't particularly thrilled at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY by single prescriptions calling for a hundred or more drugs. But you can be sure that they will receive our personal attention. Seriously, for a complete prescription service depend on McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700. 24-hour prescription service. Free local delivery.

CORE Opens New Boston Office To Manage Activity

The Boston Chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality announces the opening of a permanent office at 373 Bluehill Avenue in Roxbury. Opened Friday, November 15, it will be staffed by volunteers and will operate six days a week. Weekly open meetings will continue to be held at Freedom House, 14 Crawford Street, on Wednesdays at 8:00 p.m. All are welcome.

The new office answers CORE's long-standing desire to establish roots in the Boston community, particularly in Roxbury. It will be a central headquarters, making it easier to organize and coordinate CORE activities.

From the new location CORE will continue its efforts to improve race relations in the Boston community. In employment CORE demands equal opportunities for all citizens; in housing CORE demands that Massachusetts law be practiced, and that any unit be made available to any qualified applicant, regardless of race. As in the past, CORE will pursue its policy of direct non-violent action to secure these goals.

CORE anticipates that once opened, the office can sustain and justify itself as it discovers new sources of support. We would of course appreciate interested contributions, financial and material.

CORE is always anxious to provide representatives to meet with groups and individuals interested in Boston civil rights problems. Winchester residents are invited to visit the new headquarters as soon and as often as they are able.

THE MISFIT

Section A produced its usual glittering assortment of slams, long suits and high bids, notably Board 20 where East - West winners Nelson Bell and Art Hills scored a clear top being the only pair to bid the cold six spades (against us, of course). The hand of the week, however, is one of those less flamboyant ones which, nevertheless, in duplicate counts just as much as the more exciting ones.

The early bidding on this hand proceeds normally, pass from East, one heart from South, pass from West, one spade from North and back to South for two hearts. Here is where temptation sits in for North. Bridge players, despite some rumors to the contrary, are most tender-hearted toward their partners and hate to leave them in bad contracts. Some North players feel two no trump might play better or two spades, and on they bid. And, of course, the bidding feeds on itself, for South infers that North must be strong if he keeps bidding.

The hand was played eleven times, with four pairs stopping at two hearts, where two or three can be made, a good sound spot to be in. Two other pairs hopefully tried one more round of bidding, going down one apiece in two spades or three hearts, still not a bad board. The other five pairs in trying to find the best spot for the bid progressed up to game, with four spades going down four tricks and three no trump being set one or two, except once when a very brilliant or lucky (possibly both) pair made three no trump. Maybe we have magicians in our midst; count the combined points in the hands!

All East - West can do is pass and be philosophical about the outcome. Their score depends on which particular North - South they draw as opponents.

The moral, as my partner remarked, is for the first one to sense a misfit to pass. North knows by the second heart bid from his partner that there is trouble but less of it at a lower level of bidding. Sometimes a pass is the best bid you can make.

Bike Hike Takes Girl Scouts To Mishawum Road

On Saturday morning, November 16, twenty-two members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 508 set out from The George Washington School on a bicycle trip.

Expert trail blazers Barry Keene and Larry Lunt led the way for the 22 girls as they pedalled through East Woburn along Washington Street to Mishawum Road, with the two adult leaders, Mrs. James Phillips and Mrs. Lawrence Lunt, bringing up the rear.

An early lunch was enjoyed on the shores of Mishawum Pond, after which they proceeded on a different route home, along New Boston Street to Beach Street and Montvale Avenue with adequate scouting at each questionable turn to ensure their not ending up in Woburn Square.

In the eight miles covered, the only casualties were a slipped chain, a temporarily bent mudguard and a flat tire (at the end of the trip, luckily!).

Boston Edison Comments On Electric Heating

Commenting on the increasing numbers of electrically heated homes being built within the 40 cities and towns Boston Edison serves, a spokesman for the company reveals that these houses follow no particular style or price range.

"Some are for families in the lower income brackets, others are for middle income groups and still others are in the custom-built class," he said. As for style, he went on, electric heat can be found in the traditional Cape Cod, the popular Garrison Colonial, the modern ranch, the split level as well as the latest contemporary.

Flameless electric heat is adaptable to any style of home, according to the Edison spokesman, and the lover of the traditional dwelling is as likely to want this kind of heating as is the devotee of the contemporary.

Asked about the preference for the various types of electric heating, it was stated that this, too, varies with individual tastes. He pointed out that there are five basic types of flameless electric heating systems now on the market. They are electric baseboard, radiant ceiling cable, electric wall panels, electric heat pump, and electric furnace.

Builders in the Metropolitan area, according to Boston Edison, have found a preference for electric baseboard among their customers, with radiant ceiling cable and electric wall panels following in that order of popularity. Whatever the choice, each method permits individual room control.

As for the reasons behind the growing preference for electric heating, the utility executive referred to a nation-wide consumer study which indicates that the cleanliness feature ranks highest with women while the man of the house, with an eye on the budget, likes the promise of virtually no maintenance, repairs or periodic servicing.

Thanksgiving Day Driving Safety

In a pre-Thanksgiving Day message to all who will drive to distant or nearby homes of relatives to observe America's traditional feast day, Chief of Police Joseph J. Derro urged that the celebration be seasoned with safety.

"This time-honored tradition is the source of many of our most cherished memories," he said, "but these would be changed to life-long regret if we, through negligence, should allow future Thanksgiving Days to be marred by memories of the death of a loved one in an auto accident."

The important thing is to be able to close each Thanksgiving with a prayer of thanksgiving for a safe journey, the chief said; and this usually can be assured by a few simple precautions, he pointed out.

"Schedule your trip so that you can take time for safety," he advised. "Remember that over-indulgence—particularly by the one who is responsible for the driving—has no place in a meaningful observance of the occasion. And a holiday so closely associated with patriotic pride is no time for unpatriotic disregard of our traffic laws."

If the weather turns vicious, as it can at this time of year, it may even become necessary for the head of the household to decide to cancel the trip—in spite of the groans of disappointment (temporary) he will have to endure, Chief Derro advised. One Thanksgiving Day trip missed could preserve the joys of many Thanksgiving Days to come, he observed.

Col. Glenn Promotes UNICEF Cards

In a television spot for public service distribution, Col. John Glenn invites the public to "join me this year in buying UNICEF Greetings Cards."

"What does a child need?" the astronaut asks. "What should every child, without exception, enjoy?"

His answers are, "A name and nationality; love and understanding; good health and treatment when ill; an adequate diet and adequate shelter; an education; social protection, regardless of race, color or creed; protection from work at too early an age; and, of course, play and recreation."

Col. Glenn adds, "This is a part of the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, unanimously adopted for UNICEF by the United Nations. To the millions of underprivileged children of the world, UNICEF extends its hand and heart."

America's foremost astronaut concludes, "I hope you will extend yours and join me this year in buying UNICEF Greeting Cards."

Published by the United Nations Children's Fund, the cards offer 21 designs by 13 prominent artists from nine countries. The sale of each box of ten cards at $1.25 can protect 50 children from tuberculosis or supply the penicillin to cure ten cases of yaws, a crippling tropical disease.

Marriage In Istanbul, Turkey

Mr. and Mrs. Guy L. Mingolelli of 422 Highland Avenue attended the marriage of their daughter Regina to Mr. Teoman Pekoz in Istanbul, Turkey, last month.

The bride was graduated from Winchester High School, class of 1957, and from the Katharine Gibbs School (Liberal Arts-Secretarial Course) in 1959.

The groom was graduated from Robert College in Istanbul. He received his M.S. degree from Harvard University in 1958 and initiated studies for his doctorate at M.I.T.

The couple are spending this year in Ankara where Mr. Pekoz is teaching in the Civil Engineering Department of the Middle East University. Next year, upon their return to the U. S. A., Mr. Pekoz will complete his Ph.D. studies.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Celestino Vozzella of 1 Winter Street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Matilda C. Ann, to John R. Harbour, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Harbour of Burlington.

A June wedding is being planned.

Thanksgiving Day: Somber Celebration Across The Nation

The day set aside as a Day of Thanksgiving, a national tradition and a heritage particularly important in this state where the first Thanksgiving Day was celebrated at Plymouth in November of 1621, will be celebrated today with a little more reverence and somber reflection on the meaning of the observance this year than in ordinary years because of its following so closely the terrible and tragic events of last weekend.

Here, in Winchester, the annual Thanksgiving Day football game between Woburn and Winchester will be played, and residents will offer prayers—many with comments on the tragedy—before indulging in the partaking of the turkey and enjoying the festivities of the day when every family that can get together has all of its members present.

In the original thirteen colonies, Thanksgiving was observed sporadically from the earliest days onward, until it was first officially proclaimed by President Lincoln in 1863—precisely 100 years ago. It was President Lincoln who decreed that the fourth Thursday of November should be formally and nationally observed as Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving in a purely secular sense, connotes for most people a time to formally, with prayers and feasting, honor and bless the sources of life, our rich earth, and the human labor that makes the earth yield its treasure.

But Thanksgiving is equally supreme as the day on which America really got started. In even the briefest review of the history of Plymouth colony, even the most cursory reading of Governor William Bradford's history of the Plymouth Plantation, everything America stands for and was meant to be can be sensed.

America's vigorous belief in intellectual and religious liberty and its conviction that rulers do in fact derive their power from their subjects and may not govern without the consent of the governed was begun there.

Also, in Plymouth, another emerging American dream was formed—one that today is still in the process of being resolved, but which is actively being tested and is progressing slowly: the concept and vision of racial harmony. For the braves of Massassoit and the Pilgrims broke bread together and in their separate ways prayed to the one God.

It is a moving and stunning story, the story of the Pilgrims—it is a story of the progress of man as he seeks to continually improve the old order and change it to a better way of life. The words of their covenant, the "Mayflower Compact" have lost none of their excitement to those who realize the importance of the Pilgrim flight from Britain and the significance of what they started here.

"In the name of God, Amen," they wrote at Cape Cod. "We whose names are underwritten, the loyal subjects of our dread Sovereign, Lord King James . . . Having undertaken for the glory of God, and advancement of the Christian faith and honour of our King and Country, a Voyage (expedition) to plant the first colony in the northern part of Virginia; we do these presents solemnly and mutually, in the presence of God and one of another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a Civil Body Politic. . . "

And they signed their names on that November 11, 1620 rugged men for whom God was a personal reality, an infinite source of strength and courage. And what they did there was to commit themselves, in Lincoln's words, to a nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Highland Avenue Dwelling Broken Into, Ransacked

According to police, Mr. and Mrs. Doherty left their home at about 4:30 Friday afternoon, and returned at 7:30 on Saturday night to discover that someone had broken into the house and thoroughly ransacked it from the basement to the attic. The contents of pulled drawers and file cabinets, closets, and other furniture were strewn about the house.

The intruder, according to police, entered the home through an unlocked rear window. He went upstairs and unlocked a window facing Highland Avenue over a porch roof to use as an escape route if necessary. Then drawing the shades all the way down on windows, he began searching the house—apparently looking for hidden money, but ending up taking many articles. Police believe the intruder used a flashlight to look around early Friday night while ransacking the home as neighbors saw the shades drawn later that evening.

Police list among the items taken: a mink fur jicket valued at about $500, an IBM recorder valued at $500, a Polaroid camera, four eleceric shavers, a transistor radio, a Philco portable TV, a Kodak movie projector and screen, a lady's diamond wrist watch, and a Christmas package of clothes, among other things.

OUT OF RESPECT TO THE MEMORY of our late President, John F. Kennedy, the Board of Selectmen has declared that a state of mourning is in effect in Winchester for thirty days. The flags on all public buildings will be half-staffed for the mourning period, including evenings at the Town Hall, where the symbolic scene is illuminated at night. Most local government offices and departments, as well as businesses, were closed all day Monday, the national day of mourning.

Derro Is Elected Director Of Police Chiefs Association

Winchester Police Chief Joseph J. Derro was elected a director of the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association at the monthly meeting held at the Shrewsbury Motor Inn in Shrewsbury on Thursday, November 21.

Chief Derro's term of office in that post will be for one year. He has been a member of the association for the past three-and-one-half years, and recently was very active in supporting the retention of capital punishment in the Commonwealth by the State Legislature.

For three years Chief Derro has served on the association's traffic and safety committee, where he was active in discussions and planning on having the association back the legislative proposal for having a "no-fix ticket" law in Massachusetts, modelled after the Connecticut and Rhode Island systems.

As a director of the 76-year-old association, which was organized in 1887 and incorporated in 1949, Chief Derro will meet frequently with other directors on the board to establish policies—especially in

Easton Appointed Voter Registrar; Replaces Harwood

The Board of Selectmen unanimously voted to appoint Harry M. Easton of 20 Hillside Avenue as a registrar on the Board of Registrars on Monday, November 18.

Mr. Easton repiaces H. Rushton Harwood, Jr., of 30 Ledgewood Road, whose term would have expired on April 1, 1964, but who was also serving concurrently on the Finance Committee, which was against the principles established in the new conflict of interest state law. When Mr. Harwood became aware of the technical conflict, he resigned his post as registrar, but the Selectmen held up the effective date until Mr. Easton could be appointed.

Mr. Easton is the New England region manager of the National Association of Manufacturers. He was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1904 received his early education in schools in Pittsburgh; Evanston, Illinois; Steubenville, Ohio; and was graduated from the East Orange, New Jersey High School. He received a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1926.

Saddened Nation Mourns Loss Of President Kennedy, Winchester Joins World In Prayer, Sorrow

Winchester was quiet on Monday—quieter than it has been here for many years. Throughout the cool, crisp, sunny November day, one could hear the occasional snap of the flag as it whipped in the wind at its half-masted position . . . waving in the breeze . . . almost as though it were waving goodbye to some one.

Winchester was like every other town and city in the nation, and like many throughout the world that day, the day of national mourning for the assassinated President. Everything in the normal daily life of Winchester was suspended and stilled, as the town stopped all activity out of respect for the memory of our fallen President, John F. Kennedy, who was being laid to rest after his untimely death. All town departments and offices, businesses and schools, were closed; and there weren't many people seen walking or driving about — except to go to their churches and pray in their sadness.

Of the ten churches located in Winchester, every single one had its doors open on Monday, either for special services devoted to the late President, or for parishioners' use in solitude prayer.

At St. Mary's Church on Washington Street, a special solemn high Mass was celebrated upstairs at 11 a.m. by Rt. Rev. Monsignor John M. Manion, pastor, to a completely filled church. And downstairs, also filled with worshippers, a low Mass was celebrated.

The 9 o'clock special Mass for the President at the Immaculate Conception Church at Sheridan Circle was celebrated by Rev. James Kenny to an overcrowded congregation.

The Episcopal Church of the Epiphany on Church Street had a memorial communion with the full choir singing in the morning, and at 5 o'clock had a period of evening prayer, accompanied by organ music.

The Crawford Memorial Methodist Church at Church and Dix Street was open for meditation and prayer during the hours of the service in Washington.

The First Baptist Church on Mt. Vernon and Washington Streets was open all day for directed meditation with organ music.

The New Hope Baptist Church on Cross Street was also open all day for meditation.

The First Congregational Church on Church Street was open all day and lighted, with organ music during the time of service.

The Second Congregational Church on Washington Street was also open for visitors, although it held its prayers and services mostly on Sunday.

The Unitarian Church on Main Street opened its church and chapel from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., with many parish members going in to meditate and pray.

And at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, on Church Street, there was a special memorial service at noon on Monday.

Every American Flag in Winchester was flown at half-mast in tribute to the President on Monday. And by special order of the Board of Selectmen—which met in an emergency session on Saturday—a state of mourning was declared to be in effect in Winchester for thirty days (as of Friday, November 22) and "out of respect to the memory of our late President, John F. Kennedy, all flags (are) to be half-staffed for thirty days on all public buildings." The Selectmen also officially closed all Town Hall offices and departments (except police and fire) on Monday.

The flags at the Town Hall, the Common and the Fire Station, were left flying during the evening hours with special lighting for illumination. Jake Horn, past commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and foreman of the Highway Maintenance Department, erected the lights around the flagpole in front of the new Memorial Honor Roll on the Town Hall grounds with the approval of the Selectmen.

Throughout the town, businesses, small and large, and without exception were closed on Monday during the time of the funeral service in the nation's capitol and interment in Arlington National Cemetery, from 11 a.m. to 2 o'clock.

A large number of residents watched the official mourning proceedings from Washington, D. C., on their television sets at home. During the low funeral Mass which was televised and observed by millions, Rev. Leonard F. Hurley, 32, formerly of Mt. Vernon Street in Winchester, narratively described and explained in English Richard Cardinal Cushing's ritual of the altar offering for President Kennedy.

Also on Monday, all ten Winchester public schools were closed. In closing the schools, the School Department said it felt its official note of the death of the President was the very proper closing of the schools so that the students could participate in the national day of mourning in their own way.

Undoubtedly, some Winchester residents journeyed to Washington to see the funeral, or to join the many thousands who passed by the bier in the Capitol Building Rotunda to pay tribute to the late President John F. Kennedy. Some may even have attended the special ceremony on the State House steps in Boston.

As in evey community across the country, Winchester residents were shocked, grieved, and bewildered when the tragic and sorrowful news from Dallas, Texas, was confirmed on Friday afternoon.

Negro Job Hunter Is Fair Housing Discussion Topic

"The Negro Job Hunter: How Can Business Help Him?" was the question asked — and answered — on Wednesday evening, November 20, in the Rich Room at the public library when Winchester's Fair Housing Association sponsored a forum featuring a panel discussion.

The panellists, representatives of a community organization and two prominent business firms, seemed to agree that business not only can help the Negro job hunter, but in many cases actively is doing so —and in a variety of ways. Those participating in the discussion were John E. Venson, industrial relations secretary of the Urban League of Greater Boston; Charles S. Johnson, Jr., from the personnel office of the Polaroid Corporation; and Miles Weaver from the personnel office of H. P. Hood and Sons, Incorporated, and a well-known resident of Winchester. The Reverend Joseph O'Donnell, pastor of Winchester's First Baptist Church, acted as moderator.

Mr. Weaver and Mr. Johnson both said that their companies were so concerned with the importance of hiring Negroes that they were engaged in campaigns to recruit Negro employees. It developed that because of this mutual concern, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Weaver, and Mr. Venson were well acquainted before they met as panellists in the Rich Room.

Steps that H. P. Hood and Sons are taking in the direction of recruiting Negroes were described by Mr. Weaver. The first and most obvious of these is to indicate in all "Help Wanted" advertisements that

High School Math Team To Be Host To Seven Schools

The High School Math Team will be host to the Northern Sector group of the Greater Boston Mathematics League next Wednesday afternoon, December 4, at 3:30 in the school.

This is the third year of interscholastic competition for the Greater Boston League, which is broken into five sector groups of eight schools each. There will be this year, as before, four sector meets and a final intersectional tournament for the ten top schools in the area.

The two seniors, two juniors and sophomore who will represent WHS are scheduled to be Bill Hopkins, Brian Kincaid, Brenda Baker, Craig Nickerson and Nancy Beckley. These five will compete against teams of the same class breakdown coming from Arlington, Haverhill, Medford, Malden Catholic, St. Mary's Catholic Boys School and Girls School and Revere.

As it has been in the two first years, competition here next week is to be in arithmetic, algebra, geometry and trigonometry, with two representatives from each school competing in the seperate category questions, and all members working together on the last, or "team" question, which may be chosen from any math type.

Visitors to the meet may not enter the competition room; but they are invited to attend the meet and stay by the score board. Excitement among the large percentage of students who are not competing at any given moment centers here at this point.

Local Man Is TV Kennedy Funeral Mass Narrator

The Rev. Leonard F. Hurley, 32, narrated Cardinal Cushing's Latin Mass in English over nationwide television. Throughout the service Fr. Hurley described and explained the ritual of the altar offering as Cardinal Cushing performed it.

Fr. Hurley was graduated from St. Mary's School in Winchester. He is the son of Attorney and Mrs. Frank P. Hurley of 151 Mystic Street, Arlington.

He graduated from Boston College High School and attended Boston College for two years. Fr. Hurley was assigned to St. Paul-Augustine Parish in Washington upon his graduation from St. Maur's Seminary, South Union, Ky., and his ordination by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle at St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington.

Fr. Hurley also narrated Bishop Sheen's Christmas Mass last December from the Immaculate Conception Shrine, Washington.

A Progress Report: The Present State Of Special Town Meeting Articles

WATER MAIN IMPROVEMENTS

COMMON IRRIGATION SYSTEM

LEONARD POND DREDGING

With just one month left in this calendar year, and four remaining before the 1964 annual Town Meeting is convened, the town government has entered the fourth quarter of its yearly schedule of operation and has seen to completion many of the special articles approved at the 1963 Town Meeting.

The Town Meeting approved appropriations of approximately $242,900 for special articles, most of which have been completed.

As of the beginning of this month, the Water Department had spent $25,000 of the $140,000 bond issue approved by the Town Meeting for the laying, relaying and lining of water mains and aqueducts for the improvement of water supply, leaving $114,198 or five-sixths left in that account. This work was done in the Calumet, Ledgewood, and Johnson Roads, Sheridan Circle, Wildwood, Cross, Forest and Washington Streets. Contracts are continuing on this.

Of the $10,000 appropriated for dredging and improving waterways, $1,083 was spent in June for dredging Leonard Pool, leaving $8,917 for work yet to be done at Mill Pond and part of the Aberjona River, which is planned to be started as soon as the State approves the plans.

With the $3,000 appropriated, and $1,000 from the Reserve Fund transferred, the underground watering system at the Common was completed in August for $3,771, leaving $229 left over.

State-county-town Chapter 90 highway reconstruction work continues on Ridge Street. At the Town Meeting $39,200 was appropriated, to be spent in 1964—probably for the fourth section, from Johnson Road toward Woburn. This year, 1962's appropriation was used to rebuild from Wincrest Drive to Johnson Road on Ridge Street, at about $32,515 cost. There is about $49,955 balance in this account. Under Chapter 90 mutual programs, the state pays 50%, the county 25%, and the town 25%. The town raises and expends the money, and is reimbursed by the other governments. This program always runs a year behind schedule because of contract and engineering technicalities.

The Shore Road Playground Field should be completed in 1964, ready for McCall Junior High School use next fall. It just needs seeding and care by Park Department now that Highway Department has levelled and graded it. Of the $46,229 appropriated in 1962, $20,105 was spent that year. In 1963, $26,124 was approved, and $5,450 has been spent, leaving $20,674 in balance.

With $10,500 appropriated for the construction and dedication ceremony of a new Memorial Town Honor Roll, $10,203 was spent for erecting it, leaving $297 for the exercises.

This year $15,000 was appropriated for Town Hall improvements; finishing up in the basement. There was $1,000 balance from last year's on this. By the time renovations were completed in August, $15,210 was spent, leaving $790 balance.

However, with the sudden emergency at the Town Hall clock tower last spring, the Selectmen had to spend an additional $10,500 on that part of the Town Hall, including the balance noted above. In a recent Selectmen's meeting, the board noted that it probably would not be seeking funds for continuing renovations at the Town Hall (as it has for three years, and planned to for several more) for a few years—until the tower is either completely repaired, rebuilt, or taken down.

With $4,500 appropriated for the Auxiliary Fire Headquarters at 14 Reservoir Street, and an added $450 transfer from the Reserve Fund, the total cost to the town for the new station came to $4,827, leaving $123 as balance — which will probably be spent for fixtures. This was completed in August, with opening ceremonies early in September.

In other monies expended for 1963 special articles, $1,700 was appropriated for the Mystic Valley Children's Clinic and given to that organization under the direction of the Winchester Board of Health, whose regular budget will contain this item annually in the future.

An amount of $3,000 was appropriated for equipment at the Washington School, and $2,035 was spent, leaving $965 in balance.

The article to make alterations to the Washington School was dropped this year, but $2,500 was appropriated in 1962, and $1,361 was spent for the architect's fees, leaving $1,139 left in balance.

There has been no action taken on the Noonan School area land-takings, which had an appropriation of $8,003, and similarly no action on the Winter Pond area land-takings, with $300 appropriated.

The Lynch Junior High School Committee began 1963 with previous monies of $5,451, spent $1,713, and has about $3,738 in balance. The committee began with $1,584,554, and spent from 1957 about $1,580,816.

The Vinson-Owen School group began 1963 with $9,340 available, spent $1,302 and has $8,038 left. From 1957 to 1961, $769,990 was appropriated, and from 1957 to 1962, $760,650 was spent.

The Johnson Road sewer and water article of the 1962 Town Meeting had $73,600 appropriated, and

Mrs. Josephine McElhinney

Mrs. Josephine C. (Kelley) McElhinney, a long-time resident of 11 Englewood Road and a recent resident of Somerville, died on Wednesday, November 20, following a long illness, at the age of 61.

Mrs. McElhinney was the widow of the late Hugh McElhinney, an employee of the Winchester Post Officer for thirty-nine years. She was born in Somerville, the daughter of the late John J. and Sarah J. (Crowley) Kelley.

Well known here, and especially in her parish of St. Mary's Church, Mrs. McElhinney was for many years associated as an operator with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Surviving her are three sisters, Alice C. Ryan of California; Sarah J. Ludwig and Katherine A. Kelley, both of Somerville; and a brother, John J. Kelley of Cambridge.

The funeral was held on Saturday, from the McLaughlin Funeral Home in Woburn, with a Solemn High Mass of Requiem following at St. Mary's Church here. Interment took place at Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Mabel Hoyt Caldwell

Mrs. Mabel Hoyt Caldwell, the widow of the late H. Lindsey Caldwell, died on Monday November 25 at the Winchester Hospital.

She had been a resident here since 1919, living for many years in the family home at 48 Cabot Street, and more recently at 16 Brooks Street with her surviving son, Lindsey H. Caldwell.

Born in Chelsea on March 19, 1882, Mrs. Caldwell was the daughter of George T. and Annie L. Hoyt.

She had been a member of the First Congregational Parish here since coming to Winchester.

Mrs. Caldwell is also survived here by three grandchildren, Jean M., Joan H., and Stephen L. Caldwell. She leaves, in addition, a sister, Mrs. Ethelda H. Cummings of Hamilton.

Funeral services were held at the Ripley Chapel of the First Congregational Church yesterday afternoon, with the Reverend Wesley A. Mallery officiating. Burial took place in the Cedar Grove Cemetery in Dorchester.

John Francis MacDow

John Francis MacDow, a resident of this town since childhood, died suddenly, on Sunday November 24, in the Winchester Hospital.

Born July 4, 1904, in Charlestown, the son of the late John H. and Anna (Mulcahey) MacDow, he was 59 years of age.

He was the brother of Rose M. Morris, of 850 Main Street, and he had lived here for about 55 years, having gone to school in Winchester.

Mr. MacDow was well known in town. He had been an employee of the Winchester Country Club for about 20 years before ill health forced his retirement in 1956. Before that he was associated with the Splendid Lunch and with Tom Brown's in the Centre.

Mr. MacDow was a member of the Holy Name Society and the Woburn Lodge of the Moose.

He is also survived by two nieces, Mrs. Margaret Saunders and Mrs. Rosemary Kelley; four nephews, Robert, James and Thomas Morris, all of Winchester, and Christopher, of Reading.

The funeral was from the Lane Funeral Home on Wednesday. A requiem high Mass followed at the Immaculate Conception Church. Interment was at the Holy Cross Cemetery in Malden.

Mrs. Dorothy Davis Ebens

Mrs. Dorothy Davis Ebens, the widow of Frank J. Ebens and a resident of this town for about 35 years, died on Friday, November 22, at the Woburn Nursing Home.

Born in Somerville, April 12, 1901, the daughter of Benjamin and Josephine (James) Davis, Mrs. Ebens lived for about 30 years on High Street, moving to an apartment at 410 Cross Street after Mr. Ebens' death.

She is survived here by a daughter, Mrs. Jean Phipps, of 8 Sachem Road, and by a second daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Bergeron, of Cambridge, and by a son, the Reverend Richard Ebens, of Westminster, Maryland. She also leaves 18 grandchildren.

Mrs. Ebens was a member here of the Fortnightly and of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Funeral services were held on Monday at the Church of the Epiphany, with the Rev. Dr. John W. Ellison officiating. Burial was in the family lot at Wildwood.

Mrs. Ada Brazier Winchester

Mrs. Ada Brazier Winchester, widow of the late Roy Wentworth Winchester and the last resident in town to bear its name, died on Thursday, November 21, at the age of 73.

She had resided at 9 Cottage Avenue, with her only surviving daughter, Mrs. Jean Baldwin until eleven months ago when she entered the Glendale Nursing Home in Woburn.

Her late husband was a tourth generation descendant of Colonel William P. Winchester, the illustrious early citizen for whom the Town was named in 1850.

Born in Cambridge on October 6, 1890, she was the daughter of George and Ada Brazier Woodbury. She attended the Medford High School and was married in West Medford before moving to Winchester where she lived for nearly 40 years. She was a member of the Fortnightly here.

Mrs. Winchester is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Harold Slocomb, of Winthrop, and by one grandson, John Winchester Baldwin.

Funeral services were held from the Norris Chapel here on Saturday, November 23. Interment was in the family lot in Wildwood Cemetery.

Barbara Lillian Sullivan

Miss Barbara Lillian Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Smyth Sullivan and the late John E. Sullivan, died suddenly on Sunday, November 24, in Newton Highlands where she had been living since she moved from the Winchester Arms here five years ago.

Miss Sullivan was born on May 20, 1922, in Melrose, and was until her death associated with a Boston insurance company. In addition to her mother, she leaves a sister, Mrs. Ruth M. Dodge.

Funeral services were held yesterday morning in the chapel of the Norris Funeral Home, with the minister, the Reverend Chester Portier of the Christ Church in Quincy, officiating. Interment was in the family lot in Wildwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Katherine L. Finn

Mrs. Katherine L. Finn, widow of the late John A. Finn, and a former resident of Winchester, died in Boston on Tuesday November 19, at the age of 86.

She is survived by one nephew, Lewis A. Armistead, of 66 Fresh Pond Parkway.

The funeral was from the Crosby Memorial Chapel in Boston and was followed by a requiem Mass in St. Aidan's Church, Brookline. Interment was at St. Joseph's Cemetery.

Holy Name Turkey Festival Postponed

Sharing in the nation's and entire world's public mourning over the death of our beloved President of the U. S., John F. Kennedy, St. Mary's Holy Name Society postponed its annual Turkey Festival which was to be held at the Parish Hall on Monday, November 25.

The new date now set for this affair is Wednesday, December 11, at the Parish Hall at 8:30 p.m.

Readers of previous columns referring to this function and already aware that the prime purpose of it is to raise money to assist some able boys and girls earn scholarships to further and enter their college educations. The number of such recipients depends upon the response of those attending the festival and it is definitely anticipated by the program committee that every member of the Holy Name Society and their families and friends report at the hall. It is strongly felt that the occasion is one of much entertainment and suspense and all participating will leave with a satisfied feeling by the end of the evening's undertakings. And for all you know you may leave the premises with one or more of the more than one hundred and sixty items to be awarded.

It is urged that all members return the envelopes as instructed and more tickets for anybody desiring same may be obtained from co-chairman Gregory Sacca and Leo Roche and members of the committee: Fred Fiumara, Frank Antonuccio, John MacDonald, Frank Provinzano, Richard Hines, Vito Giarizzo, James Henry, John Looney, Bernard Delorey Vincent Erhard, Ed Sanford, George Ross, Ernest Cantella, Hugh Fay, Robert Costello, Gene Rotondi and John Fitzgerald.

Crittenton Fair December 4

"Holiday in Paris," the annual Florence Crittenton area Christmas bazaar is to be held this year at the Arlington Town Hall on Wednesday, December 4, from 10 to 5.

In addition to the art objects, flowers, toys, gifts and food, you will also find a lobster salad roll lunch, served from 12 to 2. Reservations recommended, PA 9-0397; parking free.

Richard Spellman Loses Father Here

John F. Spellman, for the past year a resident here with his son, Richard L. Spellman, of 3 Fairview Terrace, died suddenly on Sunday, November 24.

He was the husband of the late Marie H. (Lee) Spellman and he leaves in addition to his son and grandchildren, one daughter, Mrs. Dorothy H. Purcell, of Jamaica Plain.

Services were held from the Daniel O'Brien Funeral Home in Arlington followed by a solemn high Mass at St. Mary's Church here.

Republican Town Committee Meets

The Republican Town Committee met at the East Room of the Town Hall on Thursday evening, November 21. The meeting was called to order by the Town Committee Chairman, Representative Harrison Chadwick. As the first order of business, Henry C. Gerrould reported on the P.E.P. (Precinct Educational Program) now being organized by his committee. A voter survey is being planned for early in the new year. Donald Folkers also reported on the P.E.P. program in his precinct and the work has been done in conjunction with the P.R.O. organization.

Mrs. Charlotte Greer, Republican State Committee woman, reported on the activities of the State Committee at the present time.

Mr. Chadwick announced during the evening that Harry Easton of Hillside Avenue has been approved by the Board of Selectmen as the new Republican member of the Board of Registrars of Voters to replace H. Rushton Harwood. Philip Wadsworth, chairman of the By-law Revision Committee, then reported on the progress to date with the revision of Town Committee By-laws.

Earl Spencer, chairman of the Membership Committee, then presented a new form to be filled out by associate member applicants.

The next meeting of the Republican Town Committee is scheduled for early in January.

A Wine-Tasting Party by Simmons Local Alumnae

Pre-holiday festivities for local Simmons alumnae include a wine-tasting party to be held at the home of Mrs. Edwin G. Allwood on 17 Frances Street, Woburn, on Thursday evening, December 5, at 8 p.m. Husbands, friends and neighbors of alumnae are also welcome.

Five wines will be tasted, and Mr. Louis De Santis of the Taylor Wine Company will discuss how these wines are made and when and with what they should be used. Other refreshments will also be served.

Numbers for this meeting of the Club are limited. Reservations are requested. Please call Mrs. Cedric Robinson, PA 9-3939, or Mrs. John Cataldo, MI 3-5313.

Women Here Attend Republican Workshop

Wednesday, November 20th, was a day of pleasure mixed with education for members and friends of the Massachusetts Federation of Republican Women.

Many Winchester women attended the workshop and luncheon held at the King's Grant Motor Inn for which Mrs. Sherman W. Saltmash, Jr., vice president of the Winchester Women's Republican Club, made the arrangements.

Local members were extremely proud of their panel member, Mrs. James W. Blackham, who explained in full the varied ways of securing new members to clubs. Mrs. Blackham was past president of the Winchester club, and is now serving as vice chairman of the Republican Town Committee, chairman of Republican Finance for the town of Winchester, and is membership chairman for the Federation.

Others attending the meeting were: Mrs. Don S. Greer, State Committee woman for the Sixth Middlesex District; Mrs. Arthur E. Rand, president of the Winchester Women's Republican Club; Mrs. William Goodhue, Mrs. Walter Winship, Mrs. Ernest J. Wright, 2nd vice president of the club; Mrs. Nelson Bell, Mrs. William D. Barone, Mrs. Albert Thompson, Mrs. Everett Goss, Mrs. Douglas Littlefield, Mrs. Herbert Thompson and Mrs. Frank McCullough.

Reserve Bank Assesses New England's Economy

The New England economy exhibited varying degrees of strength in the third quarter of 1963, in some cases improving upon and in other cases falling short of the national pattern, according to a quarterly review of regional business conditions published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston in its monthly Business Review.

While employment within the region improved little if at all during the quarter, the bank reports that spending trends are suggestive of a long-run vigorous economy.

Total employment in nonfarm industries in September showed no real change from a year ago. The September total for manufacturing was 2.2 percent less than a year ago. Only transportation equipment (up 2 percent in September from a year ago), instrument, food and printing industries showed net gains over the period, the report said, while electrical machinery, textiles, leather, rubber, and primary metals industries suffered substantial losses.

The September index of New England's manufacturing production showed a rise of 0.7 percent, compared with a rise of 4.7 percent in the national index.

Affected by recent employment trends, personal income in the region as reported by Business Week showed an annual rate of gain of 3.2 percent for the month of August, and of 2.9 percent for the year to date, compared with national gains of 5.3 and 5.2 percent respectively.

On the other hand, the bank reported that sales at reporting department stores in New England exceeded comparable 1962 figures in every week during the third quarter, and by higher percentage gains than were achieved nationally in eight of those 13 weeks. In July and August, sales were up markedly from a year ago, attaining relative gains of at least 6 percent for the quarter and 5 percent for the year to date. The study said that registrations of new automobiles during the third quarter exceeded those of a year ago by 12 percent, and that vacation business during the summer quite consistently surpassed that of the preceding summer.

Spending plans for new construction in the region have surged upward since early spring, the bank said. Third quarter contracts for new construction of all types topped the total for the corresponding period a year ago by 8 percent.

Capital spending plans of New England manufacturers are also encouraging. A recent Reserve Bank survey shows an upward revision of new plant and equipment spending plans to a total 5.4 percent above actual expenditures for 1962.

The bank noted that the New England economy has responded in part, but not fully, to the quickened rate of advance that has developed in the national economy in 1963. "But," the bank states, "the region's pattern of strength in recent months has been spotty—in some respects bettering, in others failing to match, the national pattern."

Art Association

The December meeting of the Winchester Art Association will be held in the Rich room of the Library at 7:45 P.M., Tuesday, December third. Members and friends are most fortunate to have Mr. Tomie de Paola, a young artist from Greenwich Village, New York City, who commutes to Boston twice weekly to carry out his duties as Head of the Art Department at Newton Sacred Heart College.

Mr. de Paola is an illustrator, muralist, and designer. Some of his work is on display at the library for the month of December.

The Botolph Group in Boston gave Mr. de Paola a one-man show in 1961. He has done free lance work in murals in Vermont, Missouri and New York state. Christmas and occasional cards have been designed by him for Conception Abbey Press in Missouri, and he is a partner in the Guadalupe Christmas card Workshop in Meriden, Conn.

Mr. de Paola studied at the Pratt Institute of Art in Brooklyn, New York. He won a scholarship to summer School of Painting and Sculpture in Skowhegan, Maine.

The exhibit of Mr. de Paola's work and his Tuesday evening timely and seasonal program will have a real appeal to the general public as well as for those who regularly attend our Art meetings. Come, see and hear.

EMARC Clinic To Open at Epiphany On December 7

At the November 20th meeting of the East Middlesex Association for Retarded Children, (EMARC) held at the Reading Community Center, 52 Sanborn Street, Reading, President William Powers informed the membership of two very important openings.

The first took place November 25th when the North Reading Rehabilitation Center opened its doors to its first applicants. On Saturday, December 7th, the Center will hold open house. Invited guests include Governor Peabody, state and local dignitaries and anyone of the general public who wishes to attend. Deliliah Reimer, M.D., director of the Center will head a staff of approximately 50 trained personnel.

The second opening will take place Monday, December 9th when the much awaited pre-school clinic will be opened at the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany in Winchester, whose pastor is Reverend John W. Ellison. Youngsters from Woburn, Winchester, Burlington, and Wilmington will attend classes four days a week, from Monday to Thursday. Miss Carol Mosher is to be the teacher, her assistant is to be announced at a later date. Large outdoor equipment is needed for the play area for spring.

Mrs. Eleanor Burke of Wakefield reported on the National Convention, held in Washington, D.C., "It was very successful," she said, "President Kennedy's arrival at the luncheon on Friday created pandemonium. He presented an award of merit from NARC to Dr. Richard Masland, director of the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness, for his outstanding work in research."

Scoutmaster Thomas Basti of Burlington is looking for boys for his Boy Scout Troop. Any boy 10½ years and older may participate in the program.

Changes in the constitution that were discussed at the October meeting were voted on and accepted.

After the business meeting the association divided into three groups to discuss retardation.

One group with Mrs. Lucy Cripps of Reading as moderator discussed the brain damaged child living at home. The pre-school nursery clinic, public school system, Occupational Center and the new Reading Rehabilitation Center were thoroughly discussed.

The second group with Mr. William Powers of Lynnfield as moderator discussed the child who is living away from home at a residential school. The pros and cons involved for the parents and child in adjustment, evaluating the children, and the overcrowding of these schools were carefully analyzed.

The third group with Mrs. Eleanor Burke of Wakefield as moderator discussed the mongoloid child. After ventilating all the facts involved in rearing these children it was agreed that this type of child is particularly easy to manage.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of Melrose.

Disabled American Veterans Day Is On December 1

More than 8,000 hospitalized veterans will be visited and remembered on Sunday December 1, 1963 by the members of the Department of Massachusetts, DAV and Auxiliary.

Governor Endicott Peabody, in recognition of the efforts of the DAV has officially proclaimed the first Sunday in December as Disabled American Veterans Hospital Day.

Following World War II, the DAV in commemoration of that fateful first Sunday in December, 1941, when Pearl Harbor was bombed, set aside the first Sunday in December as a day of remembrance and visitation to hospitalized and disabled veterans.

There are 6 VA Hospitals and 2 Soldiers' Homes within this Commonwealth, housing ex-servicemen and women. Hospitalized veterans will receive some sort of remembrance on DAV Day, a toilet article, cigarettes or a Canteen Book. Over a thousand members of the DAV and Auxiliary will be identified with this tremendous task.

Mrs. Helen Morgan of Winchester, State Commander, DAV Auxiliary has named Laura Perrie of Burlington to head the Auxiliary activities.

"It is difficult to measure the value of visits," said Herman Lee, chairman of the visitation. "Some of these veterans are without relatives or friends and your visit might be the only one during the year. Certainly you will feel much better on being associated with this visitation."

The Epiphany Yuletide Mart

A big boost to your Christmas decorating will be given next week by the Home and Garden Club as they present their annual evergreen sale, this year called the "Yuletide Mart."

The occasion will take place on Wednesday, December 4 this year at the Church of the Epiphany, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Hadley Hall.

According to the most attractive pre-sale folder, traditional wares will include trimmed and untrimmed fresh balsam wreaths, decorations for doors, mantels, tables; ingredients for the "do-it-yourself" decorator and boutiques.

And to help your appetite along at this display of Christmas greens all prepared by the group, will be a buffet luncheon to be held from 11:30 to 1:30 for which reservations may be made with Mrs. Burton Gove.

Benefiting from the sale will be the many civic projects planned and carried out by the Home and Garden group. Heretofore they have included the Hospital, the Home for the Aged, the Library and the Common.

Animal Hospital Visit for Pupils From Washington

Under the auspices of the Winchester Chapter of the M.S.P.C.A., the combined Washington School sixth grade classes of Mrs. Ruth F. Graham and Mrs. Phyllis Roberts took a recent, highly instructional trip to visit the Angell Memorial Animal Hospital in Brookline.

Although they have annually collected bedding and bandaging for the animals cared for here, this was the first time they had visited. The head of the educational staff of the Hospital welcomed them and gave them a brief lecture including a film on mammals of the area.

They then toured the wards observing treatment of the sick and injured animals and giving a not uncommon amount of attention to these waiting for adoption, one youngster experiencing a reunion with three kittens with which he had recently parted, still waiting for a home.

The students were proud to see the number of cages donated in the name of the Winchester M.S.P.C.A. They came home well informed and grateful to Mrs. Frederick Cardin, local chapter president, for her efforts in arranging the trip for them.

Pilgrim's Trip, Early Day Here On School Stage

A series of dramatic sequences which took the Massachusetts Pilgrims from Holland, across the Atlantic, through their early days here and up to and through the first Thanksgiving was presented on the Washington School stage for parents and students on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30.

All of the students in Mrs. Linda Stark's room had a part in the production, which translated for their audience the hardships and philosophies of the early settlers to modern day maxims and things to be thankful for today.

Modern Math Explained At Mystic School

On November 20, John J. Waite, head of the mathematics department at the high school, spoke to Mystic School parents on the much discussed subject of "Modern Math."

In his introductory comments, Mr. Waite explained the three reasons why the schools have had to make a change in the math program, mainly: (1) Developing advances in research, (2) automation, and (3) digital computors.

The five major programs now in existence were examined thoroughly by Winchester teachers, and the Laidlaw program was adopted, not only because of its context but because it offered to teachers a background which would not necessitate years of further study.

The emphasis on the word "why" is the major interest in modern math. It is based on the idea that math is "correct" and offers rules in elementary grades that are applied in a spiral method right through school. Modern math is also based on the discovery method. It encourages the student, by the way the material is presented, to discover things for himself with the final result of accomplishment.

Mr. Waite explained the terminology in this new approach to math so that parents might understand the strange new words which their children were applying to this subject.

In conclusion Mr. Waite reported that in addition to the three modern math classes offered by the Adult Education Program, the town library has ordered books designed for parents of modern math students.

Many parents went home better informed and prepared to meet a new challenge of parenthood-togetherness in modern math.

The Raccoon

Some of us here in Winchester are becoming quite familiar with a certain breed of nocturnal visitors, namely, the Raccoon.

In North America only two members of the Raccoon family are to be found; the common Raccoon and the ring-tailed cat. The scientific name of the family is Procyonidae, the Raccoon being a Procyon lotor.

Perhaps some of us have never seen, or at least have never had the chance to study a Raccoon carefully. If you have, you've noticed that they are the size of a Cocker Spaniel, having short legs, bare feet, five toes on each foot. Their claws are curved and are non-retractile.

The head is broad, tapering down to a pointed nose; the ears stand erect and are rather short and cylindrical. The coat has long hairs, generally colored dark to silver-grey. Raccoons have the familiar blackish rings around the tail and a black patch over each eye.

A full grown Raccoon weighs anywhere from 15 to 25 pounds, is about 32 inches long and has an 11-inch tail. All Raccoons are plantigrade. (Plantigrade animals are those who walk on the entire soles of their feet.)

Raccoons are carnivores (meat-eaters). The diet preferably consists of poultry, mice, birds and birds' eggs, fresh water tortoises and clams. The Raccoon is an expert at opening any kind of bivalve shell.

The animals delight in wading through shallow pools and streams in search of food. Raccoons are unable to dive under-water although they are excellent swimmers.

First rate climbers, the animals make their homes in hollows high above the ground in large trees. They do not, however, chase prey in the tree-tops nor do they feed their young shoots and twigs.

Raccoons are restless and mischievously nosey, especially around farm-yards. It is said that a Raccoon will put up a good fight if cornered. It is not uncommon, though, for a Raccoon to sham death with all the deft of an oppossum.

Raccoons resemble the bear in many ways. Both animals are, as mentioned before, plantigrade, and both share the practice of dipping food in water before eating it.

Raccoons retire to their tree houses for hibernation during the severest months of the winter, reappearing in late February or March. They dislike deep snow, but have a grand time when a hard icy crust has formed. It is unusual to find a Raccoon alone, for they usually live and travel in small battalions consisting of members of the same family.

Don't go off half-cocked
There's nothing worse than letting people know your opinion about something, and then finding out that your opinion is all wrong. Because you didn't have the facts at all, or because you didn't have them straight. That's why The Boston Globe is edited to present all the facts on both sides of important issues (international issues, state issues, local issues). Not half the story. Not one side of the story. Not the story the way we wish it had happened. But the whole story — in depth — and both sides, exactly as it did happen. It's a nice feeling to read a newspaper you know you can rely on. A CHANCE TO HELP

Many elderly and infirm persons, as well as those with small children and limited means, need help at Christmas if this holiday is to be a happy occasion in accordance with the American tradition.

Gifts may be sent to the Winchester Community Relief Committee.

WDBC Completes A Successful Charity Bridge

The American Cancer Society and the National Cerebral Palsy Associations were joint beneficiaries of the charity duplicate bridge tournament held last week in Winchester under sponsorship of the American Contract Bridge League.

We have already mentioned the hard-working committee that did so much for this year's charity drive, and now we would like to give them, and most especially Rae Grove, chairman, our thanks and congratulations on a job well done.

We would also like to thank the local merchants who did much to make this year's effort a success. We extend our thanks to Cradock Apothecary for its gift of a lovely breezette; to Anderson Jewelers, donors of a silver bon-bon dish; to Myron Berlow, who donated a milk glass pie plate; to the Boston Woven Hose Company for its two gifts, a length of garden hose and a scatter rug; to the Station Cleaners, who presented two gift certificates redeemable for their services; to Renton's Market, for its gift of an S. S. Pierce gift box; and last and most appropriately at this time of year, we thank the Converse Market for its donation again this year of a turkey, taken home by Nelson Bell.

Above all, thanks to you, the players, for your help, so important in making this annual charity bridge game a success. We hope we'll see you again next year.

Mail Early For Christmas

Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun said today, "Early mailing of all Christmas cards and gifts is the biggest single factor in getting all of the mail delivered before Christmas. Post Office facilities have been expanded, ample help will be available, and everything is being geared up to handle a record Christmas mail this year."

The entire Christmas mailing period is a big battle against time. Even though Christmas is a month away by the calendar, it's Christmas every day at the Post Office from now on.

The Postmaster advises, "Don't take chances on mailing poorly wrapped packages. Use sturdy corrugated mailing cartons, plenty of heavy wrapping paper and strong cord. Cartons containing several gift packages should be well stuffed with tissue or old newspapers to cushion the contents."

Always send your Christmas cards by First Class mail, using the new five cent Christmas Tree stamps, and be sure your return name and address, including your ZIP Code number, 01890, is on each Christmas card envelope.

Before you mail your Christmas cards, secure free labels from the Post Office which read, "ALL FOR LOCAL DELIVERY" and "ALL FOR OUT OF TOWN DELIVERY" so that you can sort your cards into two bundles, with the addresses all facing one way, thus expediting delivery.

Send all Christmas mail going long distances before December 10. Follow up promptly with cards and gifts for local delivery. Mail "Early and Often" for a merrier Christmas!

Duplicate Bridge Club

Wednesday, November 20th, was master point night at the Knights of Columbus Hall, where two eleven-table sections played 22 boards for an average score of 110 and 99 respectively. The results were:

SECTION A

North - South

Betty Slade and Robert Haskell	136½
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson	132

The Club Open Pairs Championship, generally considered to be the most important single event of the year, is scheduled for the evening of Wednesday, December 4th, at the K. of C. Hall, with play commencing at about 7:30

During some evenings of play, the bridge boards will include many "glamour" hands, with many people bidding slams many times during the evening. On these evenings, there is a feeling of electricity in the air as quiet conversations attempt to give away no information. On many evenings, however, many of the hands are of the variety that permit either side to make two of some suit, but neither to make three, unless some adept player can "steal" an extra trick. On these nights, steady bidding and good play are necessary.

This week approximately fifty per cent of the hands were played by post partnerships as partials. The selected hand of the week was one of these. It follows:

North
♥ 10
♦ J 8 5
♣ A K 10 8 6 5 2

West
♠ K 4 3 2
♥ K J 2

East
♠ Q 10 6 5
♥ Q 8 7 6 4 3
♣ Q

South
♠ J 9 8
♥ A 9 5

Each player of this hand has bidding responsibility. As opening bidder, I feel that West must not pass, even though his point count is not high. As he is well prepared for a major suit bid by his partner, he must encourage him to bid on distribution. Also, by opening, he may crowd the bidding. North must bid that beautiful club suit. Now, East can come in with a heart bid.

The bidding has been 1D, 2C, 2H. South has ten high-card points plus club support. With both opponents bidding, one opening and one freely, distribution must be involved. He must show some strength to his partner. Inasmuch as he has a willingness to play at no-trump if his partner has a long suit, he should bid 2 N.T. Both sides are vulnerable and he might not be able to risk this bid with a poor hand. Therefore, his partner knows that he must go to game.

It is easy for North-South to run off 4 N.T. As for the actual results on the score sheet, it was played once for 6 clubs—down 1; one N.T. once, 4C once, 3 N.T. three times, 4H by West twice—going down; and finally, 2H and 3H by West, making lucky EW, because South was timid.

Points are the same whether the hand is glamorous or prosaic. Don't let some one steal your share.

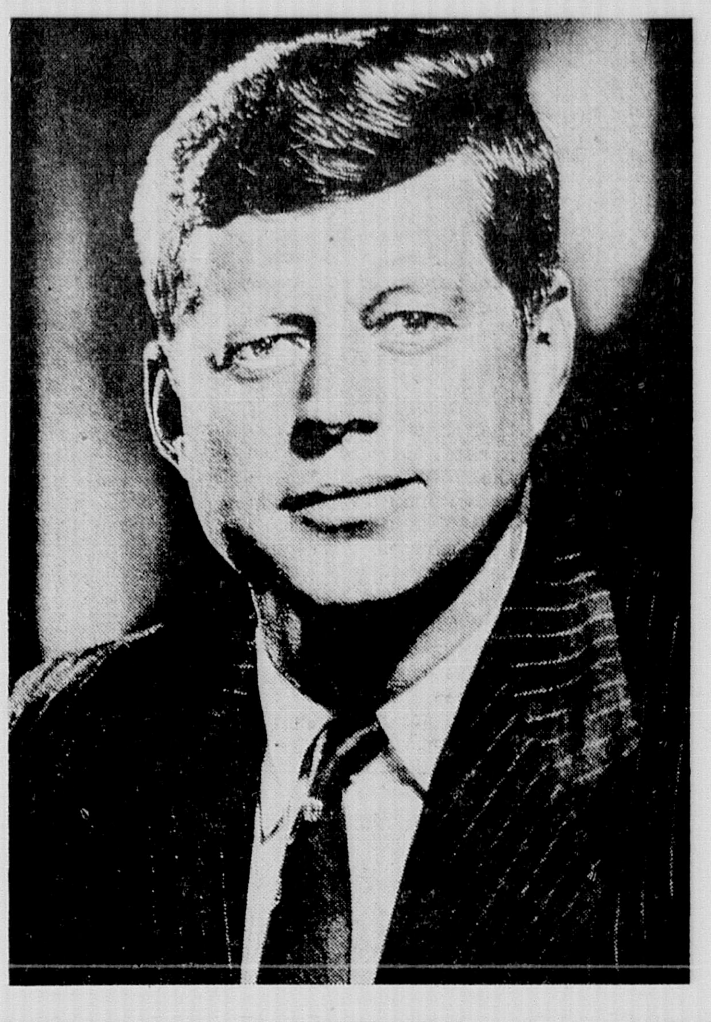
In Memoriam



John F. Kennedy

During the mournful events of the past tragic weekend, Americans everywhere were tied together and united emotionally in a way that they have been few times in the course of our nation's history.

The entire United States was engulfed in a state of national shock on Friday, the day of the infamous assassination of our 35th President, John F. Kennedy. Grief-stricken by Saturday, there probably wasn't a citizen who didn't personally experience the sickening feeling of frustration and anxiety over the nature of the tragedy and the realization of the loss of the valuable life that was the First Citizen. Sunday—a sad Sunday—churches of all religions across the land tried to soothe and comfort the heavy heart and bewildered mind that was the American people. Finally, on Monday, a national day of mourning, there was a catharsis in the stature and dignity of the Funeral Mass and military commitment for the slain President.

The life that was so quickly snuffed out by two bullets, was a familiar guest in millions of American homes. He brought the world, with its encumbent problems and his hopeful solutions, into our living rooms; and we saw him and his family and their White House frequently. We elected him as our leader, but he did not leave us behind in the monumental tasks he was chosen to perform; instead, he welcomed us to the challenge of our time.

We knew him as more than the bright, energetic, youthful man who earnestly desired and accepted the responsibility of taking the helm and steering the nation through the dangerous waters of present day tides. For we also knew him as a resourceful and courageous leader who influenced and inspired us not only in today's thinking, but in preparing and planning for the tomorrows yet to come.

It has been said that Congress may posthumously award President Kennedy the nation's highest recognition for meritorious service above and beyond the call of duty: the Medal of Honor. And it has also been hinted that he is going to be nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize in recognition for his services to world peace. Both the nation and the world would then finally be paying proper tribute to this extraordinary statesman who served the Presidential office with a grace and distinction that will long be remembered.

History will remember him as a philosopher of ideas and man of commendable deeds, as well as a leader of man and nations.

According to the intense way President Kennedy sincerely felt and believed about America, American ideals, and Americans, it may be altogether fitting to make literary transgression and take liberty here, and reword a familiar poem, "In Flanders Fields," out of respect for the memory of the late President, and the life's work he lived:

"I am dead. Short days ago I lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow, loved and was loved, and now I lie in Arlington National Cemetery.

"Take up our quarrel with the foe; to you from failing hands I throw the torch; be it yours to hold high. If ye break faith with me, I shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Arlington National Cemetery."

"In your hands, my fellow citizens, more than mine, will rest the final success or failure of our course. Since this country was founded, each generation of Americans has been summoned to give testimony to its national loyalty. The graves of young Americans who answered the call to service surround the globe.

"Now the trumpet summons us again . . . not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need . . . not as a call to battle, though embattled we are . . . but a call to bear the burden of a long twilight struggle year in and year out, 'rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation' . . . a struggle against the common enemies of man: tyranny, poverty, disease and war itself.

"In the long history of the world, only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. I do not shrink from this responsibility . . . I welcome it. I do not believe that any of us would exchange places with any other people or any other generation. The energy, the faith, the devotion we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it . . . and the glow from that fire can truly light the world.

"And so, my fellow Americans: ask not what your country can do for you . . . ask what you can do for your country.

"My fellow citizens of the world: ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man.

"Finally, whether you are citizens of America or citizens of the world, ask of us here the same high standards of strength and sacrifice which we ask of you. With a good conscience our only sure reward, with history the final judge of our deeds, let us go forth to lead the land we love, asking His blessing and His help, but knowing that here on earth God's work must truly be our own."

Excerpts: President Kennedy's Inaugural Address delivered in Washington on January 20, 1961

On a damp, gloomy day in January of 1835 a funeral procession shuffled slowly down the broad steps of the Capitol building in Washington. As the heavy, flag-draped coffin, in which reposed the body of Representative Warren R. Davis, was borne through the gathering of the bereaved and the curious, respectful glances fell upon it—then, quite naturally, shifted to the bent figure who walked close behind it. Suddenly, the hushed silence was shattered by the exploding cap of a pistol. Anxious faces turned toward the President, Andrew Jackson, and saw that he was now standing erect, apparently unharmed. But, then, in the words of one eyewitness, "All hell broke loose," and, in an instant, Jackson was seen charging his adversary, cane upraised, countenance aflame. A second shot went off, this one at point-blank range. Somehow, later presumably because of the dampness, it too misfired. A young Navy officer wrestled the gunman to the ground, and subdued him, while others attempted to subdue the enraged Jackson, who kept swinging his cane and shouting, "Let me alone, let me alone. I know where this comes from."

A house painter named Richard Lawrence, who all his life felt that the world owed him glory and honor, was tried for attempted murder. Lawrence pleaded insanity, spouted a number of illogical assertions to convince the jury of this, and spent the remainder of his life in jails and mental hospitals. He eventually outlived Jackson by sixteen years, dying of natural causes on June 13, 1861. Ironically, Lawrence achieved a portion of the glory he sought—though it was infamously branded — as the first man in history to make an armed attempt on the life of the President of the United States. His example would be followed seven more times in the years to come. Ultimately, five Presidents, a President-elect and a former President were to hear the ominous crack of an assassin's weapon.

"I do not consider that I have ever accomplished anything without God," said Abraham Lincoln about nine o'clock on the morning of Good Friday, April 14, 1865, "and if it is His will that I must die by the hand of an assassin, I must be resigned. I must do my duty as I see it, and leave the rest to God." Later, he revealed a frightening dream in which he had viewed himself in a coffin. Lincoln was not a fatalist, but he was sensitively aware of the intricate workings of the universe, of man as a small cog, and thus dependent upon a superior force. Upon his desk he kept a large, bulky envelope marked "Assassination." It contained eighty different threats on his life. He looked upon the envelope with stoic resolve, remarking: "If I am killed, I can die but once; but to live in constant dread of it is to die over and over again."

Less than twenty years later, Charles J. Guiteau, thwarted in his attempts to procure a European diplomatic post, stepped up behind President James A. Garfield as he walked for a train inside the Baltimore & Potomac Depot in Washington. Before dozens of horrified onlookers Guiteau calmly drew a revolver and shot the President in the back.

"My God, what is this?" Garfield gasped, feeling the sharp smack of the lead, and struggling to maintain his balance. Guiteau fired again, but this second bullet, unnecessary, passed harmlessly through the President's coat. Tried and convicted, Guiteau was hung, predicting from the scaffold that his "murderers from the Executive to the hangman will go to hell."

On September 6, 1901, at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, President William McKinley extended his hand to a young man who had a white handkerchief wrapped around his own hand. As McKinley smiled, the handkerchief suddenly spat apart with a flash—twice. The President staggered back, struck in the chest and abdomen. He died eight days later. His assassin, Leon F. Czolgosz (pronounced "Cholgosh"), was electrocuted, maintaining to the last that he was not sorry and had "killed the President because he was the enemy of the good people—the good working people."

Ten years later, former President Theodore Roosevelt, campaigning a second time, was shot in the chest by a plump, little man named John Schrank, who believed Roosevelt was responsible for McKinley's murder. Although Roosevelt had been the first President to receive the protection of the Secrèt Service (innovated in 1907), that protection ceased when he left office in 1909. Roosevelt, however, survived Schrank's assault and carried the bullet inside his chest until he died in 1919. Schrank was committed to a hospital for the insane, dying there in 1943. In his last years he bitterly complained about another Roosevelt who was serving his third term.

For Franklin Delano Roosevelt, that third term almost never came about. In 1933, Giuseppe Zangara, a self-styled socialist, fired five shots at the young President-elect. Five people were hit, but Roosevelt was not. Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago, died of his wound. Zangara was hung, at the end complaining because no one was there to take pictures of it, then cockily instructing, "Go ahead, Push the button."

Finally, thirteen years ago this month, on November 1, 1950, two Puerto Rican Nationalists, Oscar Collazo and Griselio Torresola, heavily armed and carrying sixty-nine rounds of ammunition, attempted to storm Blair House in Washington to kill the napping President Truman. Torresola and a police officer named Leslie Coffelt died in a wild gun battle; Collazo was wounded, but recovered, was tried, convicted and sentenced to be executed. On July 24, 1952, Truman commuted the sentence of life imprisonment.

Last week after a sniper's bullet had penetrated the head of President Kennedy, there seemed one recurrent question—why? Perhaps an interview with assassin Giuseppe Zangara in 1933 gives insight to that question at least in part.

"I don't believe in God because I see lots of things," Zangara said. "I see in my mind everything wrong. Somebody trying to kill and steal and everywhere wrong. I figure no God, no nothing. Only air and land. I feel to myself that. If there was a God here, why I suffer all the time? Everything wrong."

"What do you believe in?" he was asked.

"The land, the sky, the moon—what I see."

"Who made the world?"

"Nobody knows."

"Joe, if you kill a man, you don't care if you die or where you go?"

"No."

"No heaven or hell?"

"No. I go into the ground."

"Were you scared tonight?"

"No. No scared."

There was a pause, then somebody asked him if he belonged to a church.

"No, no," he hissed. "I belong to nothing. I belong only to myself and I suffer."

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
BRAD MORSE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23. Mrs. Morse and I have just returned from the White House where hundreds of people keep a silent vigil in a gray downpour. There are no words to comfort the family of President Kennedy; one can only pray that God will give them strength and solace.

John F. Kennedy brought to his office the highest ideals of public service and gave his life in the pursuit of peace, justice and honor for our nation and for all mankind. The best in our society was reflected in his love for culture and the arts, in his devotion to the lives of other Americans who made our country great.

His keen and incisive mind approached the enormous problems of office with vitality and wisdom. The President sought, through his sponsorship of civil rights legislation, to fulfill the promise of the American dream in our lifetime. The impetus he gave to the drive for equality will not pass with him.

The Alliance for Progress stands as a monument to the President's exercise of world leadership. Progress through partnership was his constant theme and his special pledge to our sister republics south of our border is on the way to fulfillment.

That the leader of the free world could be felled so suddenly and so tragically is a solemn warning and a profound lesson. There can be no place in our society for extremism. We must profit from this teaching and close ranks in the moderate course of which President Kennedy so often spoke.

Lyndon Johnson takes up an immense burden in this dark hour. He brings with him the skills of a legislator, an administrator and a diplomat. He has been a genuine partner in the conduct of the Presidency and our nation is secure in the hands of his strong and capable leadership.

We mourn the passing of John F. Kennedy on this Thanksgiving—a tradition begun on the New England shores he loved. Yet we must be grateful once again that "the Government at Washington still stands." The responsibilities he welcomed are a burden we must all share, always remembering the promise of President Kennedy's Inaugural Address:

"We shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty."

BOOK REVIEW

By I. N. Dividual

PROFILES IN COURAGE: THE LAST CHAPTER

"Two thousand years ago, after the battle of Thermopylae, where 300 Spartans were wiped out by all the Persians, they carved above the graves a sign on the rock which said, 'Passerby: Tell Sparta we fell faithful to her service.' Now . . . in another crisis of freedom, we are asked to live faithful to the service of the United States . . ."

—John F. Kennedy

"This is a book about that most admirable of human virtues—courage. 'Grace under pressure,' Ernest Hemingway defined it." These are the first two sentences that a young and bedridden United States Senator named Jack Kennedy penciled when he decided to chronicle the Profiles in Courage of a handful of American statesmen who had taken their places in his mind and philosophy and ultimate aspiration. You can learn a lot about a book through the opening sentences; you can also learn a lot about the man who wrote them.

Here we discover two things: That the author considered courage something superlatively admirable and virtuous; and that, in fulfillment, courage could do no less than increase the stature of the individual to the pinnacle of human dignity, without which life would be void and wasted. This, essentially, is the predominant theme of Mr. Kennedy's Profiles; it is also the theme upon which he molded his own career. And it was precisely this sort of moral courage he had in mind when on that wintry day in January of 1961 he clarified the challenge facing the new Administration: "Now the trumpet summons us again—not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need—not as a call to battle, though embattled we are—but a call to bear the burden of a long twilight struggle . . ." Add to this that most necessary ingredient of historical perspective and you have the why, the motivation and the crusading principle of Profiles.

For some, like Daniel Webster and Sam Houston, courage meant abandoning state and sectional favor; for others, like John Quincy Adams and Edmund Ross, it involved an actual severance of party affiliation. Webster determined to preserve the Union in 1850, not as the eloquent Senator from Massachusetts but as the advocate of compromise during a time when Abolitionist, Whig and Free Soiler had charted a course of extremity. "Necessity compels me to speak true rather than pleasing things," Webster cautioned as the Nation hung precariously on the brink of civil war, ". . . I should indeed like to please you; but I prefer to save you, whatever be your attitude toward me." Houston similarly discredited himself in the South. Adams, the introvert whose stigma was a fear of failure but whose Puritan intellect overrode even this, abbreviated his political career with an embargo measure on aggressive British shipping that enraged Federalists and cooled Republicans. Threatened and abused, he found solace in the counsel of his famous father: "The magistrate is the servant not of his own desires, not even of the people, but of his God." Ross, the youthful Senator from Kansas, may have, in some respects, preserved our very political system with his deciding "Not Guilty" vote in the impeachment trial of Andrew Johnson.

Of a more contemporary nature, we find the striking but self-damaging individuality of "Mr. Republican," Robert A. Taft, whose support of non-party bills and appreciation of good regardless of camp cost him the Presidency.

Thus, Profiles in Courage, reading like a litany of bloodless martyrs, must now stand as the most significant testimony of the man who authored it and who considered sacrifice an opportunity, courage a challenge and conscience a directive to search one's soul.

"No man can suffer too much," affirmed Daniel Webster, "and no man can fall too soon, if he suffer or if he fall in defense of the liberties and Constitution of his country."

letters to the editor

President John F. Kennedy

Editor of the Star:

With the rest of our country, in fact, with the rest of the world, Winchester Democrats mourn the passing of our great leader, President John F. Kennedy.

Those of us who have worked with, and for this great man since he first ran for senator, had come to appreciate his great qualities of leadership, his innate knowledge of government, and the God-given compassion he felt for the poor, the aged, the retarded, and for those who were born with skin of a different color than his.

When I introduced Senator Edward M. Kennedy at the cookout in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Serieka last summer, I said, "The Kennedy young men were raised and trained in two fields of endeavor, statesmanship and philanthropy," Ted remarked to me that no nicer compliment had ever been paid his family, and he would be sure to carry that message to Jack.

And that was the philosophy that the four Kennedy boys breathed in from their earliest days of learning—to understand government as it applied to all people, black and white, rich and poor, the young to be educated, and the elderly to be comforted, cared for, and freed from worry, especially in illness. And daughters, too, in the Kennedy family, as well as sons, all have their charities, for which one is held responsible.

The President exemplified these ideal traits to such a degree that the world has been a better place for his being an important part of it. No wonder Winston Churchill, when told of our President's death, paid him the following tribute:

"He was the greatest statesman and leader of his era!"

And Oscar Handlin, historian at Harvard College, said in Sunday's Boston Globe editorial:

"Basic to all these occasions was the common set of assumption that intelligence, courage and goodwill could aid Americans in the confrontations with the problems of the future as they had, in the past, helped to subdue a continent.

"The President was not particularly successful in evoking a response to his challenge.

"While the country was often moved, Congress rarely followed.

"Controlled by cynical old men, dominated by a fearful unwillingness to alter the status quo, they created obstacles that led to three years of frustration."

The President waited and hoped that persuasion and reason would ultimately have their way as he continued to fight the forces of hatred and intolerance, cowardice, and the distrust of intelligence.

And it was one of those very forces which finally snuffed out his compassionate, warm, intellectual young life.

With our flag at half mast, and our hearts heavy with sorrow, we pray to God for comfort, and say, with Uncle Dudley of the Globe:

"Good night, brave spirit."

Sincerely,
Elizabeth C. McDonald

"Thou Shalt Not Pray"

Editor of the Star:

Faith is our most pressing need today and above all we should have the privilege to pray, particularly the schools, which need spiritual guidance very, very much.

The basis of all human advancement, children or grown-ups, is prayer. The deterioration of humanity today is the danger of our times. Children who are deprived of prayer are also deprived of their integrity and faith. Let us not begin a series of "Don'ts"; "Thou shalt not," etc, etc; but instead erect a positive standard of right; "Thou shalt!"

Reader Suggests Care for Pigeon Nuisance Seen

Editor of the Star:

The last issue of the Winchester Star tells of the nuisance caused by pigeons at the Wedgemere R.R. Station and the Overpass, and the Abatement ordered by the Board of Health.

Those responsible for dealing with this persistent bird may be interested in the following letter from Time Magazine describing how an apartment dweller solved the problem of their abatement by a most humanitarian method.

Pickled Pigeons

"Sir: Boston may be backward on matters of education, but on the extermination of pigeons (Oct. 18) it surely ranks No. 1! I submit the following method, which we used three years ago at our apartment in the Back Bay section:

Soak one pound of split peas for 2 days in 100-proof bourbon. Distribute the peas outside your windows on the ledge or fire escape, and then sit back and wait. Soon hordes of pigeons will descend to eat the peas. The effect of the 100-proof bourbon on a pigeon's constitution is amazing, and soon they will fall to their own natural death.

True, it is killing pigeons, but perhaps it would appease sentimentalists to know that they died with a smile on their faces.

Farrell Announces Candidacy for A Selectman's Post

Editor of the Star:

I wish through your paper to announce to the good people of the Town of Winchester my candidacy for the office of Selectman.

As a resident of the Town for the past 44 years, and with 41 years and 9 months as a police officer, I should and do know the Town well. As a member of the Board of Selectmen, I would do my utmost to serve that office to the best of my ability and judgment, and being a retired police officer, I shall be at the call of all citizens to help them in any way I can.

Sincerely,

The Police Department has requested residents to consider when leaving their homes, even for short periods of time, to make it appear as though someone is still inside. Such precautions as leaving a few lights on in the evening, and other measures, including asking neighbors to keep an eye on the house while they are out, will help to keep housebreakers away, the police say.

The phrase "equal opportunity employer" has been designated by the federal government as a means of communicating this. Advertisements are placed not only in the large metropolitan dailies, but in the smaller newspapers which serve the Negro community. Posters also are displayed in places where Negro job hunters are likely to see them, and handbills announcing that Negro candidates for jobs are being sought have been distributed to Negro customers. Hood recently has joined the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Congress On Racial Equality, and for some time has held membership in the Urban League.

Schools, colleges and employment agencies have been notified that Hood specifically is looking for Negro employees. Because Hood is a large organizatioin with approximately sixty different branches, a kit describing procedures to be followed in the Negro recruitment drive has been prepared for the branch managers. And to insure the branch managers' continuing awareness of the drive, a monthly report summarizing his achievements in this regard is required from each manager.

According to Mr. Johnson, the drive at Polaroid is similar to the one at Hood. Mr. Johnson said that there were nineteen companies in the Boston area that had pledged themselves to follow fair hiring practices and to develop training programs for their employees.

Mr. Venson described the role of the Urban League in helping the Negro job hunter. He said that the Urban League was started originally to help find employment for Negroes who were emigrating from the South. However, the Urban League today does not see itself as an employment agency. Rather, its purpose now is to persuade industries to hire Negroes, to get employment agencies to refer Negro applicants to potential employers, and to work with schools in the guidance of Negro students. He pointed out that in the past there were very few positions open to Negroes and consequently, Negroes did not attempt to enter many fields. Today that situation is changing. Suddenly, a variety of jobs are available, but there are few qualified Negroes to fill them. Mr. Venson said he believed that "something extra must be done to take up the lag. Negroes have been discriminated against in the past. Perhaps a little discrimination for is now in order."

Mr. Johnson agreed with this, saying "Negroes have been at a disadvantage for so long that some compensation is due them." He said he believed that business had a responsibility to up-grade Negro employees by giving them training on the job. He said he thought that the test of a company with regard to its attitude toward Negroes was to see "not how many Negroes a company has, but where are they?"

Mr. Weaver said he had wrestled with the question of discrimination in favor of Negroes and had come to the conclusion that "the essence of equal employment is that it be based on qualifications and not something as irrelevant as skin color." He said Hood's policy was to hire only those people who met the qualifications for a particular job.

A member of the audience asked the panel to respond to a question on the subject of non-violent protests such as "sit-ins," picketing, and "freedom rides." Here all three panellists were in agreement that such demonstrations were a legal, moral, and highly effective means of highlighting inequalities thereby helping to bring about their removal.

Pres. Kennedy

The entire town, as well as the whole nation, was literally in a state of mass shock. No one could really believe what they had heard over the radio and television. Even though there was no reason to doubt the credibility of the news reports as they came in over the air, still no one wanted to believe that the tragic and mournful event could actually have occurred. Almost everyone was numbed by the announcements of the shooting and the death that quickly followed; few could work or do anything but mumble: "I can't believe it."

Even though first and second and third reports were verified, most people couldn't get out of their shock on Friday. The vacant and dumbfounded, often expressionless faces, seen on everybody, seemed to belong to a people living in a world of unreality. Some people couldn't talk much about it without choking up, or unashamed weeping; others had to talk about it to prevent thinking about the horrible reality of it.

A policemen in the Center, store clerks and shoppers, automobile drivers sometimes going through red lights without even seeing them — the tragedy of the event struck everyone personally. It cut across partisan political affiliations, religious, occupational, and the various other lines which separate people with groups both in this small town, and around the nation.

During times of tragedy such as this, many people almost automatically head for a church to console their grief and to pray. That night, the Epiphany Church held a special litany service for the dying, a general litany for our country, and a Holy Communion. The First Baptist Church played religious organ music, and read from the scripture and offered prayers for the President. The First Congregational Church held an evening meditation service, accompanied with organ music.

And on Saturday, many Catholics went to the 8 and 9 o'clock Masses at St. Mary's Church, or the 8 a.m. special service for the President at the Immaculate Conception Church.

The week end of November 22, 23, 24 and 25, was a long, sad, sorrowful time for the American people, and Winchester was as much affected by the tragedy as any and every city and town in the United States.

$2,982 spent that year. Another $60,325 was spent on work in that area this year, which is mostly done, leaving $10,293 in balance.

The widening of Lake Street, begun in the fall of 1962 after the Town Meeting appropriated $7,000, was finished this fall, with $1,135 spent last year and $5,865 this year.

About $8,990 was spent this year from previous balance of $13,579 for street acceptances. There were no new acceptances this year, and there is a balance left of $4,590.

From the old Incinerator construction appropriation of $500,000, there is still about $10,496 left over for intended landscaping in the area.

Of the $10,000 transferred from the Reserve Fund as a special item for the Sabin Anti-Polio clinics sponsored by the Board of Health, $3,609 was spent by the board in 1962-63, leaving $6,391 in the account.

The 1961 Town Meeting decided to eliminate some of the town MDC sewer connections to reduce the fees charged for use, and appropriated $38,000. In 1961 and 1962, $25,276 was spent, and $875 this year, leaving $12,349 for that purpose.

There is $1,132 left in the Wadleigh School demolition account from the 1962 appropriation of $7,500. Demolition and cleaning-up cost $6,368.

Mr. and Mrs. Easton are the parents of two children, Harry Easton, III, of Corona del Mar, California, and Jane Easton, who is Mrs. Todd Wallis of Hampton, New Hampshire.

Democratic Town Committee Notes

The flag is flying half-mast at 10 Hill Street, the home of our Chairman, and at the homes of others of our Committee members. Also it flies on all public buildings in our Town in the position which denotes respect in the ultimate for the great Leader who has passed on.

We congratulate our Board of Selectmen for its speedy recognition of proper procedure as Chairman Shailer Avery promptly ordered all Town Departments to observe Monday as a day of mourning for our assassinated President.

We are delighted, and we know many more Winchester residents are happy to know, that Governor Endicott Peabody signed into law the $300 tax abatement which will do so much to relieve the heavy tax burden on our elder citizens. We hope to have a copy of the Bill at our next meeting.

There has been sent from the Committee a beautiful expression of sympathy to the Kennedy's in their bereavement. It was sent to Senator Edward Kennedy as he is the member of the family who knows us best. Besides, we know that Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy will be swamped with expressions of sympathy.

Mrs. Frances Murphy, Medford, who represents our district on the Democratic State Committee, has requested that she be invited to address the Town Committee at one of our meetings soon. This request will, of course, be honored.

In Memoriam

JOHN F. KENNEDY

A great man dies and nations weep
All voices hush and birds are still,
And there he lies for ere to sleep,
'Neath a grassy slope on a distant hill.

The flags hang dipped on countless masts,
A silent tribute from a nation great.
Men's heads are bowed; men's hearts are grieved,
Stunned by the blow dealt us by Fate.

This great man dreamed a blessed dream
Of a real and everlasting Peace.
He fought and died to realize this dream,
And with his death our efforts shall not cease.

A new star shines in skies above
Over men whose hearts are grieved with pain,
As he looks down on land he dearly loved,
On cities great and winding country lanes.

The nation mourns this man so loved by all,
And prays for earnest courage to do right,
Almighty God, please heed the nation's call,
And guide us, help us in our freedom's fight.

Make him be proud of all Americans,
Let him know that we will leave no task undone,
Show him that we can really "carry on"
So some day he may say, "Americans, well done."

ACROSS THE COUNTER

You've read of the sensational $7,000,000 London train robbery. Big bank holdups are making headlines too. But a "quiet fact," known only to the police officials, is that most crime does NOT involve much money.

Perhaps you've had the idea that it takes "lots of loot" to lure criminals. This is decidedly not so. The FBI report for 1962 shows the average value per larceny was $76, burglary $192, and robbery $223.

Crime continues to increase faster than people—four times as fast as population growth. And the FBI national, "Crime Clock" ticks off a robbery every six minutes, an auto theft every 90 seconds, and a burglary every 35 seconds.

All these statistics add up to the need for some form of insurance against the possibility that you — your car — your home—your business—may be next on the criminals' list.

Like all other forms of insurance, crime coverages help only if they are in force AHEAD of a loss. Why not take a moment to check into the various sizes and shapes of insurance protection? We'd be glad to visit with you about it—in person, or on the phone.

"Pygmalion" Again On December 6 and 7

THREE OF THE LEAD MEMBERS of the fine cast of "Pygmalion" which opened its three-night run on Thursday, November 21. Cancelled due to the President's death, the two final presentations are now announced to be on Friday, December 6, and Saturday, December 7. Above are John McLellan, as Pickering, Nancy Dorsey as Lisa, and Henry Fitts, as Professor Higgins.

Parish Players Are Postponed To Next Week

The Parish Players' production of "Pygmalion," opened on Thursday, November 21 in Chidley Hall of the First Congregational Church and played to a near capacity audience. The proceeds of that evening's production went towards the Senior Forum's annual spring trip.

The performances originally scheduled for Friday and Saturday were postponed out of respect to the late President Kennedy.

These two performances will now be held on Friday and Saturday evenings, December 6 and 7, at which time tickets already issued will be honored. Patrons having conflicts on either of these two nights are requested to call the ticket chairman, Miss Ruth Albee (PA 9-5844) who will be happy to make any changes possible. It is announced that there are still good seats available for both nights.

Harlan F. Grant of the Boston Conservatory of Music is the director and "Pygmalion" was chosen as an appropriate commemoration of his fifteen yeas as director of Parish Players productions. It was the first production which Mr. Grant directed when he became associated with the group in 1948.

The enthusiasm and sincere applause of Thursday evening's audience showed its full appreciation of the tremendous effort of the actors and backstage crews which went into this play to make it such an outstanding success. The leading parts are being portrayed by Nancy Dorsey, Sally Phaneuf, Lenore Black, Henry Fitts, John MacLellan and Steve Brown. They are being supported by Susan Stockwell, Mary Mears, Ralph Seferian, James Hulm, LaVerne Trautman, George Connor, George Hebb, Jr., and Roger Foskett.

The Players have produced three outstanding sets in which they have created the elegance of early twentieth century England. These remarkable sets have been designed by John MacLellan and executed by Roger Foskett and Florence Grant and their committees. H. Kimball Archibald is production chairman and Mrs. James Hollinshead is stage manager.

Walter Josephson, J. Irving Rawding Aid Philanthropy

Walter Y. Josephson of 16 Winslow Road and J. Irving Rawding of 29 Hutchinson Road, have just been announced to be members of the committee planning an 100th anniversary celebration in March for the Boston Baptist Social Union, a philanthropic group founded by Daniel Sharpe Ford, which still actively serves the Boston area.

Mr. Josephson and Mr. Rawding are both past presidents of the Union, today limited to some 300 laymen from about 100 churches in the metropolitan area. The Union dispenses funds for the needy and in addition, its Christian Work Committee continues its charitable work.

Unitarian Choir In Pre-Service St. Saens Music

At the Unitarian Church this Sunday at 10:40 a.m. the pre-service program will be sung from the Christmas Oratorio by St. Saens, including Trio, Quartet and Finale.

The program will also feature the playing of the Downes Memorial Carillon by Mary Ranton Witham, director of music at the Unitarian Church.

The first anthem for the service will be "Behold the Star of Jacob" from Christus by Mendelssohn and the second anthem will be "Psalm One Hundred and Fifty" by Cesar Franck.

Members of the Winchester Unitarian Quartet, Estelle McNeely, Margaret Worcester, William Jeffrey, Sidney Blanchard, Jr., will be assisted in the Christmas Oratorio by Roxanne West and Janet Burbank. The postlude will be "Largo" from the Twelfth Sonata by Purcell.

Thanksgiving Bible Lesson

The Thanksgiving Bible Lesson at First Church of Christ, Scientist, Winchester emphasized praise to God for the ways in which He has revealed Himself to humanity.

Included in the readings was a verse from II Corinthians (2:14): "Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place."

Related readings from the Christian Science textbook stressed the need to show our thanks through our daily lives: "To keep the commandments of our Master and follow his example, is our proper debt to him and the only worthy evidende of our gratitude for all that he has done" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 4).

Donaghey Named A Scheduling Manager at Itek

Itek Corporation of Lexington has recently announced the appointment of Kenneth A. Donaghey of 81 Pond Street, to planning and scheduling manager for Government Systems Operations.

In his new position, Mr. Donaghey will have the responsibility, for the planning and scheduling of major projects for all Government Systems Divisions.

Prior to his promotion, Mr. Donaghey was the planning and scheduling manager for Reconnaissance Systems for the Optical Systems Division.

Mr. Donaghey is a graduate of Wentworth Institute and Northeastern University.

The Antiques Study Group

If you have a love for beautiful and interesting antiques, you should have attended the meeting of the Antiques Study Group at the library on Tuesday, November 19. The members exhibited some of their most interesting pieces and told how they had acquired them.

Mrs. Paul Stoneman showed a very unusual blue daisy and button clock. It is so rare that Ruth Webb Lee stated that she had seen only two others like it. She also had a matching blue plate that she had bought years ago in Indiana for only seven dollars. Today such a perfect plate is worth many times that price.

Miss Hilda Sanderson was seeking information about a small framed portrait of colored wax, which she had purchased at an auction. It seemed to be a head of Christ, but no one could be certain.

Mr. Holbrook Dodge showed three pieces of antique silver. One was a delicate, pear-shaped pitcher of the Colonial period (about 1760). Another pitcher with an elaborate design was from England and dated 1778. The third piece was a Dutch tea caddy embossed with figures of people having a good time.

Mrs. Russell Thompson presented a lovely, Parion mug in perfect condition. It was decorated in bas-relief representing cherubs riding on a donkey.

Mrs. Everett Vincent is a collector of miniature books, but at this meeting she showed another type of miniature, a tiny replica of an antique coffee mill.

Mrs. George Beal's "Uncle Arthur" was a wagon maker in the old days, and he had handed down an old fashioned bit, which he had used in his work. It was indeed an interesting tool, and, after all its use, it was still in perfect condition. Things were well made in those days.

Mrs. Robert Elliot brought a Chinese decorated, covered jar with metal handles, and a beautiful red Bohemian vase.

Mrs. Thomas Knight had everyone guessing about a braided, gold book mark that she owned. It was actually made of spun glass and was probably used as a book mark in a large church Bible.

Mrs. Harry Gilson contributed a handsome, gaudy Dutch milk pitcher, which anyone would be proud to display on an old maple hutch.

Mrs. H. E. Bergquist showed an amber, pressed glass compote with a woman's head for a base. This piece was so unusual that no one had seen anything quite like it.

The next meeting of the Antiques Group will be on December 17th when Mr. Holbrook Dodge will speak on "Books - Old and Collectable."

Rev. Newton Clay Pays Tribute To John F. Kennedy

In a service that was both a Thanksgiving Service and a Memorial Service, the Rev. H. Newton Clay, minister of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church, paid tribute to both John F. Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy.

He said in part, "If we could ask Mr. Kennedy what we should do under these circumstances; a Thanksgiving Service arranged for little children to take part by bringing their gifts, and a Service of Memory on a day when a nation bows in sorrow, I feel sure that he would wish us to do just as we have done: Thank God for our blessings and share our blessings with others. He would say, 'Let the hungry be fed and let the poor be clothed!'

"But today we do join with people everywhere as they pay tribute to a fallen leader. He proved himself a great leader and a great man. The first Roman Catholic to hold this high office it is hard to see how he could have been a better Catholic, yet he carried on in his high office so that he never wavered either as a Catholic or as a President of these United States.

"No man in high office is free of criticism," said the minister, "But I believe that in every act and in each decision, he was eminently sincere in doing what he believed to be the right thing and the best thing for the country and for the world.

"The Peace of the world is more secure today because of his leadership and his firmness. We can not forget that before he was our President he was a genuine hero of World War II. We cannot forget that history will link his name with Lincoln's. Lincoln's death was probably to be attributed to the Emancipation Proclamation, Kennedy's for his fight for human rights."

Rev. Mr. Clay also said, "No heart can express anything but sincere sympathy for Mrs. Kennedy and the two little ones left fatherless. Many waited to see what the youthful Mrs. Kennedy would do as First Lady. Would she be but a 'little girl' in over her head? We all know the grace and charm she showed. We all know that she brought culture and poise to the White House.

"We also know that this young family set us all a perfect example of love and devotion, and an example of what a real home and a true family should be.

"But," said Mr. Clay, "I shall remember longest about this man those great words of his inaugural address. 'And so, my fellow Americans: Ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country!' He lived, served and died by that ideal... It was truly his way of life, and if this could be faithfully followed, this way of life: 'This nation, under God, would have a new birth of freedom, and government of the people, by the people and for the people would not perish from the earth', and we would truly be a nation with freedom and liberty and justice for all."

Behind The Times

THERE IS no doubt that in many respects we are "behind the times." We deal only with the most reputable manufacturers and suppliers in an effort to see that our neighbors get full value for what they pay. We still put in as many hours as are necessary to provide the finest service of which we are capable. And, we do not expect more than a reasonable profit for our efforts — the normal amount we must make if we are to continue to serve this community. That is our, idea of "honest value"—a phrase which we have become aware will often bring a cynical glint to the eye. No doubt, in such simple virtues we are "behind the times"—and we're glad of it.

Hilarious Harlem Stars Breed National Laughter

The hilarious Harlem Stars are coming to town. Advertised as the greatest and funniest basketball team in the country today, the Stars are a combination of Negro stars who tour the world making fans laugh. So there is little doubt that local fans will be in for a king-size treat Saturday night, December 7th, when the Stars make an appearance at the Winchester High School gym.

When the name Harlem Stars is mentioned, hoop fans get ready for an evening of entertainment. Fans will see a fancy exhibition-razzle dazzle ball handling, intricate routines, both planned and impromptu comedy and all sorts of "shenanigans."

The Harlem Stars are unique in the fact they never try to run up a huge score against opponents. It is their policy to keep the game close, devoting much time to comedy stuff.

The Harlem Stars enjoy playing basketball every day even if they have to travel hundreds of miles to do so. The Stars began their season in Alaska the last of September and will hit between thirty-six or forty states and the following other countries: Mexico, Canada, Australia, Japan and some parts of Europe. The round horsehide is the magic carpet that has taken these basektball jesters to all parts of the world.

Magicians is what owner, Boid Bute calls them. Referring to his Harlem Stars when they begin their zany antics on the basketball court—razzle dazzle ball handling, intricate pass patterns, trick shooting, marathon dribbling and impromptu comedy antics all go to make this the greatest show in the business. "Go man go" really describes the Harlem Stars when they are on the court.

Their policy is that, "The World is Our Audience," "Send Them Home Laughing," and they hope they can continue to entertain for years to come. "When we have done this," says Boid Bute, "then we will feel we have accomplished a little something in life."

SHOWBOAT BUCKNER is only five feet, two inches tall, and occasionally finds himself lacking beside his six feet six, seven and eight inch teammates. But Showboat has learned to employ a cat-like agility on the basketball court, much to the despair of his opponents and to the delight of millions of fans around the world. A graduate of North Carolina College in Durham, Showboat played with several championship teams there. He starred with the Tennessee Tigers from 1942 through 1946, spent three years with Goose Tatum's Harlem All Stars, and one year with Marques Haynes' Harlem Magicians.

Babe Ruth, who started his major league career as a pitcher, won 23 games for the Boston Red Sox in both 1916 and 1917.

"The Pheasant In Massachusetts" Booklet Available

"The Pheasant in Massachusetts" is the title of a new publication being offered to the public by the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game.

A 16-page illustrated booklet co-authored by Bill Pollack, chief game biologist, and George Pushee, game biologist, the pamphlet treats all phases of the life of the ring-neck pheasant in the Bay State, including a history of the bird here, a life history of the species, and the roles of stocking, management and hunting of the exotic gamesters.

Anyone desiring a free copy of this interesting and informative booklet may receive one by sending a self-addressed, legal-size envelope bearing four cents in postage to:

Keep The Sunny Side Up

WHETHER THE TEAM IS UP OR DOWN, the Winchester Cheerleaders are out there keeping everything on the up and up and are essential to the pageantry of the game. Co-captains this year are Jane Van Dyke and Lynn Anderson. In the rear row are: Debbie Nelson, Debbie Nichols, Lee Dresser, Jane Abbott, Pat Overacker, Ellen Richardson, Tee Taggart, Gail Snelling, Ann Ahern and Diane Capodilupo.

Winchester Youth Hockey

The Winchester Youth Hockey season is off to a slow start this year. Due to the mild weather the first week, the M.D.C. rink was unable to make ice. The second week all M.D.C. facilities were closed due to the untimely death of the President. There is every indication that we will be off to a flying start this week. .

Boys! ! Keep those fingers crossed.

There is still room for about ten more boys in this program. If you want to be in this group get your application in now, and early, as they will be based on a first come, first served basis.

See you all Sunday.

Unparalleled Tourist Growth

"The prodigious rebuilding of of America's highway network is opening the way to an era of unparalleled growth in the tourist industry."

So said John Murray, director, Motorists Services Division, Michigan State Highway Department at today's Tourist Promotion session of the New England Council's 39th Annual Meeting.

"It is as significant to the second half of the 20th Century as the building of the railroads was to the rejuvenation of America in the years following the Civil War," Murray continued, "and the state or region that prepares now for this growth will reap a great economic harvest."

Murray told Council members that the revolution in surface mobility is just beginning. As people experience the safety and speed of new sections of freeways all over the country, the urge to travel is increased, and so is the ease and access to tourist attractions and recreational areas farther and farther from home.

"Add to this, the staggering projections for population growth for the next 25 years, and the expected steady rise in income available for travel and recreation—and we have an incalculable potential for growth in the tourist industry," said Murray.

He went on to quote figures showing 34 million more pople in the United States in 1970, as compared with 1960, and 11 million of this increase will be in the 20 to 59 age group, the group that makes the travel decisions. Murray added that relatively little has been done in researching this market, particularly in what motivates it to just one area over another and to return or not to return the following year.

"We are a nation of seasonal migrants," Murray concluded, "Where the tourist goes and how long he stays, now that access is improved through new highway systems, depends on what he is told about an area and how he has told it...and whether the tourist returns depends on the hospitality he finds when he arrives."

The University of Oklahoma has a healthy share of national collegiate football marks. The Sooners won 47 consecutive games from 1953-56; managed to score in 123 straight games from 1946-56; averaged 291 yards rushing per game in 1956; averaged 17.9 first downs by rushing per game in 1956; kicked 33 consecutive extra points in 1952; and have won the national scoring championship three times, more than any other team.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

Notre Dame still occupies the driver's seat in the fourteen team league despite its 0-8 loss to sixth place California. Knocking them over in a big way for the victors were Capt. Dick Trabucco who hit for 93-114-110 and Charlie Gangi 109-131-91. Capt. Moose Bellino of N. D. continued to keep his excellent pace with strings of 108-125-107 and Dan Gattineri did well with 93-111-98.

Navy moved into second spot from fourth after defeating Yale 6-2 who dropped from second to third place. Helping to boost Navy were Capt. Rich Riga with 108-126-122, Frank Provinzano 99-95-132 and Joe Pettitte 97-91-118. Yale's Capt. Richie Bucci hit for 125-124-95 followed by Don Kinton's 98-101-110.

Bates dropped a 2-6 decision to eleventh place Penn to go from third to fourth in the standing. Having a big hand in Penn's victory were Capt. Babe Tofuri 118-104-108 and John Frongillo 107-95-109 while giving the good old college try for Bates were Capt. Bob Fiore 122-115-110 and Danny Mistretta 102-117-91.

Still holding fifth place after a 7-1 victory over tenth place Holy Cross is Army. The cadets who zeroed in for a victory were Correction Fiore 91-120-97, Capt. Choppers Gangi 100-107-99 and Jack McIsaac 88-109-105. Coming closest to the 300 mark for the losers were Mike Saraco 94-107-94 and Jake Ciarcia 82-100-112.

Capt. Tony Saraco of B. C. did well enough with 106-100-116 to help B. C. win 7-1 over next to last place St. Mary's and to maintain seventh slot. Strong man in a losing cause for St. Mary's was Capt. John Mangano who hit for strings of 102-106-108.

By defeating Harvard 8-0, Georgetown moved from ninth to eighth while the losers did vice versa. The winners saw some excellent bowling when Capt. Joe Marrone hit for 116-89-112, Tony Chefalo 86-107-121 and Joe Ciarcia 95-110-98. No Harvard bowler hit over the 300 mark for the first time this season.

Alabama and Maryland still possess fourteenth and twelfth places in the standing even though Alabama took the latter by a 6-2 score. Alabama's Capt. Dick Tofuri had enormous scores of 89-128-134 to help his team's win and Jay Cammarata was not too far behind with 108-108-104 and Bill Maggio 93-88-121. Top performers for losing Maryland were Slim Lentine with 93-106-126, Tony Bavuso 107-117-97 and John Dattilo 119-88-93.

THANKSGIVING TRADITION

When friends and family gather near and we behold all those so dear, we're bound to feel an inner glow of deep contentment — for you know no better substitute's been found than gathering our kin around to celebrate this holiday in the grand American way.

For a gathering of any kind, you want a comfortable home. If your heating system is giving you trouble, you have a lot to be thankful for when you get a quick response to your service call. B. T. Conlon Fuel Service, 27 Lake Avenue, Woburn, Phone WE 3-1720.

Star Sports

Indian Tracks

BY FRANK PROCOPIO

Because I generally work through the quiet hours of the night, and get to bed about nine a.m., I awoke last Friday afternoon a few minutes before two. Automatically, I turned on a radio. For a full thirty seconds I lay there, listening, but not comprehending: "President Kennedy has been shot . . . unofficial sources report that he is dead." The voice was excited and spoke haltingly. Then, the reality of it sank in; I got up, dressed, and turned on a television set to absorb all the news I could. By two-thirty everything was official—then came the memory of the man.

I remembered a young man with a quick smile and a sharp mind, who looked directly at you when he talked, who liked to keep himself in shape, and always met things head on. I remembered, too, the more drawn face of the man who, not long ago, got out of the Presidential car and waved to students walking along the Charles River.

I flipped back the pages of a journal I keep until I came to January 20, 1961, a Friday that was cold and clear and blanketed with fresh snow. The entry of that day began with a quote: "'Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans—born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage.' So spoke President John F. Kennedy. Already newspapers are likening his Inaugural Address, a comparatively short one of 1,355 words, to Lincoln's 267 word Gettysburg Address.

"Both speeches held that distinct quality of simplicity; both that awareness of time to infinity in relation to historical perspective. Although a hundred years apart, observers are drawing parallels to the times. Lincoln spoke to a nation torn apart, battered and bleeding, from civil war; Kennedy, on the other hand, directed his message not only to Americans but to a world engulfed in the cold war of nerves revolving around political ideologists. Lincoln spoke of the freedom of the individual, and reminded his listeners that men who die for a noble cause cannot die vainly; Kennedy, again, embraced the whole world when he talked of the same freedom, and the same willingness to sacrifice for the noblest of all causes: truth.

"The London Times found Kennedy's Inaugural containing something of Lincoln's 'sense of spiritual mission.' The New York Times said the address heralded 'the cooperation of all mankind for the benefit of all humanity.'

"To Russia, Kennedy had this to say: 'Together let us explore the stars, conquer the deserts, eradicate disease, tap the ocean depths and encourage the arts and commerce.'

"But as peace is a transient thing on this earth, passing more from the mouths of orators than from their hearts, Mr. Kennedy will find a task of immense proportion. Men have written fine and eloquent words about peace, and numerous vows have been made to preserve peace, but still there comes times when men have to go out and die for peace. The President will be written of as a peacemaker.

"'All this will not be finished in the first 100 days. Nor will it be finished in the first 1,000 days, nor in the life of this Administration, nor even perhaps in our lifetime on this planet. But let us begin.'"

I put the journal down, and as the day and night wore on, found I had no desire to watch a football game; or talk to anybody; or write a sports column. When the great majority of sports events were canceled over the week end, I felt relieved.

"Nor will it be finished in the first 1,000 days . . ." I uncovered some old calendars and began figuring. I found that last Friday was John Kennedy's 1,033rd day in office.

Sachem-Belmont Game Hinges On Outcome of Melrose-Wakefield

School Calendar

December 13, Friday — Second Term Warnings.

June 18, Thursday — Schools Close.

Among the coaches in the football Hall of Fame are: Lou Little, Knute Rockne, Amos Alonzo Stagg, and Glenn S. "Pop" Warner.

The postponed football game between Winchester and Belmont might still be played. It all depends on the outcome of the Thanksgiving morning contest between undefeated Melrose and spoiler Wakefield.

In the event Wakefield pulls an upset it would cause a conceivable tie in the Middlesex League standings. Since Belmont has lost only one game, a win over Winchester would place them even with Melrose of this should occur.

Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Jimmie Foxx — all members of the Baseball Hall of Fame — each batted in 100 or more runs every season in their 13 years of major league play.

S. O. I. News

The functions of the S. O. I. organization were rightly shut off over the weekend in order that the officers and members participate in the mourning of a Massachusetts resident, the President of the U.S. of America, John F. Kennedy. Pres. Kennedy will be irreplaceable, not only in our own U. S. of America but on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He was unique in that he was a sharp intellect, possessed determination, was courageous, a fine leader and a true symbol of power. We certainly extend our deep expressions of sorrow and sympathy to Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and her children and to the entire Kennedy family.

Ven. Bob Fiore announces that the regular Friday night special of clams and lobster will again be served this week (tomorrow) but it is urged that your order be taken as soon as possible after 6:30.

The S. O. I. Boy Scout troop will meet again next Monday evening at the hall.

Chairman Dick Tofuri of the Sports Committee is now working with his committee making final preparations for Sports Night when the championship softball team and golf teams will be the recipients of awards. These details will be forwarded in the near future.

Chairman Art Dunbar has made final arrangements for the Kiddies' Xmas Party with details to be given in the column shortly.

The program and entertainment committee under the chairmanship of Frank Provinzano has arranged for social night activities which will take place at the S. O. I. Hall on November 30 at 8:00 so come on down with your wives, sweethearts and friends for a joyful evening.

The program and entertainment committee has also sat at various meetings to make plans for the New Year's Eve Party and it is urged that tickets be purchased by December 15. First come, first served so contact Frank Provinzano, Boss Dattilo, Randy Kazazian, Joe Paonessa, Mel Fiore, Greg Sacca, Bob Fiore, Frank Antonuccio or Carl Bertolucci. Tickets are limited!

Congratulations and best wishes to the Gattineri's in the dedication of their new Fashion Cleaners Shop on Swanton Street.

The first half of the bowling league comes next week and Notre Dame, Navy, Yale, Bates, Army and California are giving the old college try to gain championship playoff positions.

'64 Motor Vehicle Registration Is At Woburn Armory

The Motor Vehicle Registry now has an office in the Woburn Armory on Main Street, opened on Monday, November 25, from 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m., for the processing of 1964 car registrations.

Registry Inspector Anthony Melaragna recommended that car owners wishing to expedite service should get their applications in early. Last year the Woburn office handled approximately 14,000 car registrations in this area for a total of $110,000 in fees.

Ski Experts At YWCA

Penny Pitou, former Olympic ski champion, and Allen Barry, noted ski instructor and patrolman, will give lectures and show ski films at the Boston YWCA, 140 Clarendon Street in December.

On December 4, at 7:00 p.m., Al Barry will present "Skiing—A Sport For All," a lecture and ski film, open to the public.

On December 11, at 7:00 p.m., Penny Pitou Zimmerman, (1960 Olympic double silver medal winner) will highlight her instructive ski talk at the YWCA with details on her personal championship experiences.

The Boston YWCA also offers classes in indoor ski conditioning and outdoor lessons at the Penny Pitou Ski School in the Blue Hills Ski Area. Call KEnmore 6-7940, extension 23, for ski program details.

Church Panel Answers Queries By Teenagers

"Teenage Questions" was the theme of a panel meeting held by the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Second Congregational Church at its November 17th meeting.

Members of the group submitted questions to an adult panel predominantly in areas of social and family living. They wish to thank Mrs. G. Stewart Brine, Miss Jean Korwatch, Mr. William Cruwys, and Mr. Ronald G. Richburg for their considered opinions while serving on the panel.

The Fellowship program for December first will center around a guest speaker, Mr. Lloyd Stevens of Hillcrest Parkway. Mr. Stevens has just returned from a tour of Europe and will relate some of his adventures and impressions.

Anne Billman Attending Univ. Of the Americas

Taking full advantage of the combined benefits of studying abroad plus the opportunity to master a foreign language, Anne Billman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Billman, of 110 Church Street, is attending this fall the University of the Americas (formerly Mexico City College).

Now the second largest metropolis in the hemisphere, this former seat of the ancient Aztec empire is renowned as a leading, modern and cosmopolitan culture center, rich in archaeological and historical sites.

Miss Billman is the unofficial goodwill envoy from Winchester now attending UA along with representatives of more than 20 nations who lend the university's campus an international atmosphere that few institutions of higher learning can equal.

Her close association with the local and foreign students gives her an insight into the foreigner's concept of the United States, its people, customs and government as well as of the Latin American way of life.

Miss Billman is a graduate of Winchester High School and has also attended Colby Junior College.

Since UA is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, credits earned here by Miss Billman are transferable to U.S. colleges. The university offers both B.A. and M.A. degrees. For numerous years, statistics gathered by the Institute of International Education have placed UA at the top of the list of foreign colleges attended by American students with the Sorbonne running second.

All classes are taught in English, and Miss Billman's instructors include renowned American, Latin American and European educators who give UA students a broader and more cosmopolitan training and world-mindedness.

Dr. D. Ray Lindley, who resigned from the presidency of Texas Christian University of Fort Worth to head UA says:

"Todays struggle is a race for trained minds. In an age of declining muscle power, there is an increasing premium on brain power. Because of its strategic location, the University of the Americas has a distinctive and unique role to play in the area of inter-cultural and international education. Nothing is more important to the free world than respect and understanding at the highest level among all the peoples of the Americas. It is at this point that the University of the Americas has an indispensable contribution to make."

Golf-O-Matic Brings The Fairway To You

Golfers are notoriously precise and analytical about their art. They have been known to devote hours and even days to the various aspects of driving and putting. True perfectionists, they never tire of their game or anything concerning it. So it stands to reason that when a modern innovation appears on the scene of things it quickly becomes an unequaled conversation piece. Like the 6,840-yard, 18-hole indoor golf course they've recently installed at the Strike Lanes bowling alleys.

Incredible? It might have been twenty years ago, but in this fantastic age of electronic miracles very little is considered incredible. That's the way inventor Robert Hopp of New York City, figured, and now his $6,000-plus baby called "Golf-O-Matic" is capturing the imagination of not only golfers but sports fans in general. A Portland, Oregon, businessman thought the idea so unique he purchased no less than eleven computers.

HOW IT WORKS

Golf-O-Matic attempts to simulate as much of actual golf course action possible. You use a full selection of regulation-size clubs. With them you play exactly as you would out-of-doors. The only difference is that your longest drive will never travel any farther than 17 feet. And that's when your ball smacks into a nylon movie screen, on which is projected still color shots of the expansive course at the Doral Country Club in Miami.

The distance your drive would have carried, measured by a computer to millionths of a second, is determined from the sound of the club hitting the ball until it strikes the screen. The film strip, depicting scenes at 10-yard intervals, changes accordingly. Thus a 200-yard drive on a 350-yard hole will click the film ahead so that the next scene the player sees will be the green from a distance of 150 yards.

When the golfer reaches the green he putts from long distance onto the "birdie circle." Any ball stopping within 15 feet of the flag is considered birdie distance.

Then the tricky and hidden contour in front of the screen is lighted to reveal the hole, and the golfer does his best to sink the putt from six or seven feet out. After he finishes, he merely pushes a button to begin the second hole, the lights dim, and the projector flashes its image screenward.

Hippocrates, the greatest of all physicians, was the first to separate medicine from religion and the first to differentiate diseases. Before his time all sickness was but one great disease, and no heed was given to varying symptoms.

Hippocrates' methods were largely based upon direct observations and logical interpretation, and after his time such accuracy of observation was not to serve medicine again for eighteen centuries.

For The "Winter Wonderland"

Methodist Fair Opens Thursday

This Thursday evening December 5, the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church will open its doors to the annual church Fair.

The opening feature of this "Winter Wonderland Fair" will be a delicious dessert and coffee served by the ladies of the church. All merchandise will be on sale from 6:30 till 9 p.m. Also on Friday December 6, at 10 a.m. festivities will begin again. Morning coffee will be served. Luncheon from 11:30 till 1 p.m.—don't miss this. Many Winchester people return to this luncheon year after year.

Our lovely ladies parlor will be the background for an afternoon tea featuring delicate goodies. Then in the evening at 6:30 a chicken pie dinner will be served by the men of the church—here everyone works. Following the dinner, a special feature of this year's Fair will be an auction run by some of the most talented auctioneers in town.

As for the Fair itself, this is where you will find Christmas gifts at sensible prices. Dolls, dressed so beautifully, no little girl could resist them. Mittens and hats on the Knit Table that you will be proud to give to any child. The children will also enjoy their very own shopping center, where the prices fit their budgets. They will want to come and join in the games as well as enjoy the movies.

A special feature sponsored by the young people, will be an ice cream bar, where smiling waitresses will serve your favorite soft drink. Hope to see the after school trade here on Friday.

Accessories for Tots to Teens will have its usual good variety of small gifts for young people.

The Sweet Shop with a great assortment of candy, cakes, pies and pastries will appeal to both young and old.

Many parents and children will enjoy picking out a good used toy and the prices are low, low, low.

Another new addition this year is the "House of Dior"—especially good used clothing—smart hats, attractive dresses and suits, among other things.

Hand made aprons and other household articles will be attractively priced to please that someone special on your list.

Also beautiful costume jewelry, a varied assortment of earrings, bracelets and necklaces perfect for that stocking stuffer.

For those who like to browse, there is the Olde Curiosity Shop, with many used items for the home.

All mothers with small children are invited to come for capable adults will be on hand to baby-sit.

The prices are low and the atmosphere is friendly. Come join in the fun and festivities.

A Way To Give Thanks

On November 27, 1945 in Washington, D. C. incorporation papers were filled out for a fledgling organization called Co-operative for American Remittances to Europe.

A cumberson title, but the initials spelled CARE.

CARE was born during the 1945 Thanksgiving season to provide the means by which a grateful America could share her good fortune and plenty with those across the sea who had so little.

By Thanksgiving of 1946 a million packages had brought many millions of meals into destitute homes in Europe. CARE soon became the sure, swift way to help the less fortunate everywhere.

Eighteen years later CARE is still doing the same job, but on a much larger scale. Thanksgiving 1963 launches another CARE Food Crusade with the hope of feeding 35 million people in 33 countries.

Each dollar contributed to CARE will send life-giving food to those who still desperately need it.

You can join with thousands of other Americans in showing the true meaning of Thanksgiving this year. Share your good fortune with others less fortunate. Join the CARE Food Crusade.

Little Expert On Foreign Competition

A representative of Arthur D. Little said today that New England Industry can effectively meet foreign competition and market opportunities abroad by emphasizing "what their products can do, rather than what their products cost."

Raphael Hodgson, who evaluates investment opportunities abroad for Arthur D. Little, said that "foreign manufacturers cannot compete in quality and service and are forced to go after the price business."

Speaking on the "Challenge of Foreign Business to New England," at the 39th Annual Meeting of the New England Council, Hodgson stated that industries, such as silverware, shoes, and woolens are largely fashion and merchandising businesses; and while the foreign manufacturer can always get a share of this market, he does not get a dominant share because of low prices. Hodgson credits this to European production which is limited because it is geared to demand, while American producers manufacture in much larger quantities because they are more sensitive to the domestic market and because labor wages are higher.

In addition, the American producer maintains a consistently high level of merchandising activity—continually keeping the channels of distribution open and effective through sustained level of advertising and selling effort.

Hodgson went on to say that it is the staple item in both the woolen and silverware industries that is vulnerable to import competition because "the foreign manufacturer can tool up to produce for this large market with its constant requirements."

"Consequently," said Hodgson, "import competition is severe in worsteds for men's wear, but not in virgin woolens for women's wear. The New England worsted mills have experienced difficulty, while the woolen mills geared to the women's market have not. Indeed, employment in the latter has increased in the last five years."

In speaking of the competitiveness of the New England exporting industries, Mr. Hodgson described how three companies in the machine tool, textile machinery, and instrumentation business had all become very high overhead producers in order to achieve a high rate of innovation in their product line and to achieve a very high level of sales and service.

The combination of both these factors, he said, made these companies competitive in both the United States and abroad.

"In one of the companies, 60 per cent of their output was in products introduced since January 1, 1959; in another, 50 per cent of the product line was introduced in the last 5 years," Hodgson stated.

"The higher costs they elected to incur for research and development, engineering, tooling, and experimental models have given them a product line that meets U. S. market requirements for increasingly labor-saving, productive equipment and unique enough abroad to have market potential there," continued Hodgson.

"The same foreign machinery sells for half the price," said Hodgson, "but it is less flexible and limited to much lower horsepower."

"Consequently, the American producer effectively competes by not selling a machine, but the way of doing a job," he said.

In conclusion, Hodgson said that costs are often more the outcome of the business policy followed by different companies, than of differences in wages—and this brings the total cost of the American product more in line with its foreign competition when the whole package of the sale is considered and not just the product. "There are American companies who are effectively competing on a cost basis," he concluded.

Garden Club Will Decorate Bedford Hospital for Xmas

On Thursday, the 21st of November, members and guests of the Winchester Garden Club were entertained by Mrs. Chandler W. Symmes.

The afternoon began with coffee and dessert served in the charming dining room. Mrs. William H. Gilpatric and Mrs. Edward B. Mansfield presided at the table which was decorated with yellow snapdragons, chrysanthemums and eucalyptus foliage.

Mrs. Harold F. Meyer, president, opened the business meeting by reading a poem describing the month of November.

Mrs. Mansfield stated that plans have been made to have plants placed in the wards and to decorate the library at the Veteran's Hospital in Bedford at the Christmas season.

Miss Corinne Mead announced that a conservation commission had been formed in Winchester which will help to alert club members to the needs of this worthy project.

Mrs. Harold M. Twombly urged everyone to attend the horticultural meeting at Horticultural Hall in Boston on November 25.

It was voted that gifts for children, from the ages of three to fourteen years, would be brought to the December meeting. These gifts will be delivered to the Metropolitan State Hospital in Waltham.

Mrs. Gilpatric paid a warm tribute to the memory of Mrs. Clarence A. Warren, a life member of the club who recently passed away.

Mrs. Angelo W. Ghirardini introduced Mrs. Walter K. Freeman, the guest speaker. Mrs. Freeman's art of Christmas decorating was different from those of the standard arrangers. Wreaths, trees and swags were fashioned from such familiar objects as egg boxes, coffee can tops and plastic bags decorated with traditional greens, ribbons and pine cones. It was an interesting lecture, giving each listener an impetus to look for unusual containers and with imagination to create works of beauty.

Record Crowd Hears Talk At St. Mary's Hall

On Wednesday evening, November 20, at St. Mary's Hall, the officers, members and guests of the St. Mary's Mothers' Club were privileged to hear Dr. Alexander A. Schneiders, noted professor of psychology at Boston College, whose talk, "Significant Choices During the Teen Years," was thoroughly enjoyed and absorbed by a record audience of well over four hundred. Many arrived early to be sure of a choice seat.

After Dr. Schneiders' talk a short question and answer period alowed several parents in the audience to avail themselves of Dr. Schneiders' advice to their particular problem.

Mrs. George A. de Mars, president of St. Mary's Mothers' Club, then thanked Dr. Schneiders for his fine talk, and invited everyone to enjoy the refreshments being served by the eighth-grade mothers under the chairmanship of Mrs. Vincent J. Wernig, and Mrs. Joseph Duran.

Mrs. John W. O'Grady, chairman of the Country Store, then proceeded with the drawings of the evening. The grand prize, a color TV set, donated by the Winchester Appliance Store, was won by Mrs. Leon Crispo of Somerville.

It is in order at this time to extend our apologies to Mrs. Richard Hines, whose name was inadvertently omitted in our last article. Mrs. Hines was a worker at the Children's Country Store on November 16, and we are most grateful for all of her assistance. To the gentlemen callers who assisted at the Adult Country Store, Mr. William H. McBain and Mr. Clarence Lyon, Mrs. John W. O'Grady extends her grateful appreciation, and to all who worked so hard to make the Adult Country Store a success. Thank you.

Christmas Kettles On the Street

Imagine Christmas without the Kettles!

On November 29, traditional Red Kettles will appear in Massachusetts communities as The Salvation Army prepares people for the celebration of Christmas.

Weatherproof workers will channel Kettle gifts from generous citizens into thousands of needy homes.

Concerning the Christmas Cheer Program of The Salvation Army, Lt.-Colonel Horace E. Weatherly, Massachusetts Divisional Commander, said "the Kettles must be kept 'boiling' if every home is to be assured of a Merry Christmas!"

Advent Season Begins At Methodist Church

The observance of the Advent Season at the Methodist Church will begin this Sunday morning with a Service of Holy Communion at the Morning Worship Service at eleven o'clock.

"Prepare Ye The Way" will be the subject of the Communion Meditation by the minister, the Rev. H. Newton Clay. Mr. Clay will administer the sacrament assisted by the Rev. G. Vaughn Shedd and Dr. Howard Hunter of Boston University School of Theology.

At the Junior High Methodist Youth Fellowship at 4:30 o'clock, Alan Wynn will lead a discussion on "Family Responsibility." A selected group of parents will attend and participate. A light supper will be served for this group.

The Senior High Methodist Youth Fellowship meets at seven o'clock. Royal Morse III will be in charge of the program and the subject of discussion will be "Churchmanship."

Unitarians Share Successful Fair With Whole Town

A happy combination was much in evidence last Wednesday evening and all day Thursday at the Unitarian Church—the customers who were enjoying themselves and the workers who were enjoying another successful fair.

The church decorations, beautifully prepared by Mrs. Richard Hakanson and Mrs. George Blair, were particularly lovely and set the festive note for the rest of the fair.

The fair committee wishes to thank everyone who worked so long and hard to make the fair such a success. Special thanks goes to Mrs. Sumner Andrews who was instrumental in making the recipe table so popular by collecting and compiling much material.

The committee was especially sorry to disappoint people at the luncheon.

Among the others who helped to keep things running smoothly were: Mrs. Theodore Robinson, treasurer, assisted by Mrs. Donald Gifford, secretary, Mrs. Warren Eldredge, cashier, Mrs. Percy Hill, and Mrs. Malcolm Burr, publicity. See you next year!

News From The First Baptist

On Sunday, December 1, at 11 a.m. Rev. Mr. O'Donnell will give his closing sermon on the Lord's Prayer, "Ground To Stand On." There will be a service of the celebration of the Lord's Supper.

The Jr. Hi BYFs will meet at 6:00-6:30 p.m. for recreation on Sunday, December 1. From 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. there will be a program under the leadership of Susan Swanson and Ginger Byrd.

The Sr. Hi BYFs will meet at 6:30 p.m. at the home of Janet Butterworth, 34 Glen Road, for a program under the leadership of Janet Butterworth, Mary Byrd and Ron Mosher. The topic under discussion will be "A Look at the Roman Catholic Church."

Thanks to Rick Allison of the Woolworth's Store, Fresh Pond Parkway, Cambridge, we all may assist our young people as we do our Christmas Shopping. He is willing to grant a 10 per cent discount on all purchases made Tuesday night, December 3. The 10 per cent will be turned over to the BYFs who will assist at the store that evening.

Unit Meetings To Discuss Economy Of Latin America

"Private Investment in Developing Countries" and "Commodity Agreements" are the topics to be discussed next week at the unit meetings scheduled by the League of Women Voters.

Can we keep the poor countries (mostly in Latin America) from getting poorer while the rich get richer? Where will the necessary capital be found to build strong economies in Latin American countries? These and other questions will be put before the discussion groups for consideration at the unit meetings which are scheduled as follows:

Tuesday, December 3, 7:45 p.m.: Mrs. Lewis L. Wadsworth, 54 Wedgemere Avenue, hostess; Mrs. Sears Walker, (729-3564) chairman.

Wednesday, December 4, 1:00 p.m., Mrs. O. Guinn Smith, 38 Rangeley Road, hostess; Mrs. James E. Kimball, (729-2347), chairman.

Wednesday, December 4, 7:45 p.m.: Mrs. Richard W. Freeman, Jr., 14 Franklin Road, hostess; Mrs. David J. Ashton, (729-2708) chairman.

Thursday, December 5, 9:30 a.m.: Mrs. Franklin K. Patterson, 3 Herrick Street, hostess; Mrs. John S. Ahern (729-3914) chairman.

For the convenence of those attending the Thursday morning discussion, babysitting is available for pre-school children at the home of Mrs. Marshall Kincaid, of 12 Prospect Street. For further information concerning these meetings, please call the chairman of the unit you wish to attend. Women who are not members of the league are welcome to attend these informal meetings as well as the membership.

Local Club Hears Report on Smith Alumnae Council

Last week Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. Austin Broadhurst, the members of the Winchester College Club heard a good report of the Annual Council Meeting held at Northampton the week before from its representative, Mrs. Thomas Raleigh.

One of the report highlights was that there now are foreign students from twenty-seven countries studying at Smith.

The director of Scholarships and Student Aid had stressed to the council that every girl who applies for financial aid is treated exactly the same. The choice is made on the girl's academic ability and financial need. This year over $800,000 was awarded.

Smith was announced to be one of eight liberal arts colleges to be given the maximum grant, from the Ford Foundation, out of 50 colleges.

This grant was made because of Smith's "proven past and her pace setting potential."

President Mendenhall was reported to have stressed the fact that Smith must never imperil its independence of action by accepting public funds.

Eben W. Graves has been initiated as a member of Alpha Rho Upsilon fraternity at Bowdoin College. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Graves of 4 Ridgefield Road. A member of Bowdoin's Class of 1967, he is a graduate of Winchester High School.

Home and Garden Hears Traditions Of Decorations

The warmth and enthusiasm of the Christmas decorations presentation of Mrs. Robert Richards of Groveland inspired with Christmas spirit the members and guests of the Winchester Home and Garden Club who filled the hall at the Crawford Memorial Church last Wednesday to hear her.

At this festive occasion members were reminded that the "Yuletide Mart" will be held this year at the Epiphany Church, Hadley Hall, on December 4 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

As she demonstrated holiday decorations, Mrs. Richards emphasized the importance of allowing time for leisure to enjoy the real meaning of Christmas after the hectic days of preparation. Throughout her lecture touches of wit sparkled and she wove into it bits of legends, such as the real origin of the tradition of mistletoe. Her practical advice on preserving the freshness of greens and how to fireproof them was much appreciated. She gave us the humorous, but true, tip that "men will always turn to the color red."

Pourers at the tea table were: Mrs. Russell Pearl, Mrs. Harry Locke and Mrs. Della Femina. Mrs. Deran Hintlian set the table with gold burlap, a wooden compote filled with nuts, fruits and greens topped with a pineapple, symbol of hospitality. The candlesticks were wooden with gold candles and decorated at their bases by more fruit, nuts and greens.

Annual JayCees' Jazz Night Dance Is on December 6

The fourth annual JayCee Jazz Night dance will be held at the Town Hall on Friday evening, December 6th from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Tickets are available from Bob Adams, JayCee treasurer, at the Winchester Trust Company or from the Winchester News. Proceeds from the dance will be used toward worthwhile JayCee community projects. Dress is informal and dance music will be played by Jack Hennessey and his five-piece orchestra.

The general chairman, Bob McNamara, assisted by Ronnie Gravallese, decorations; Bob Adams, tickets; and John Kavanaugh, publicity, have planned an evening that promises to make this year's JayCee Jazz Night the best ever.

Last year's successful limbo contest will be repeated again this year. Raffle tickets for several valuable prizes will be offered as well as door prizes for lucky ticket holders.

Bob Adams has announced that tickets are selling fast and urges everyone to get their tickets early. Many parties have been planned before the dance and a number of guests fom out of town have been invited to join their Winchester friends. Among those planning to entertain before the dance are the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Saylor will entertain: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Stebbins, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Baird, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ericson, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Hillger, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Horton, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fitzpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Van Test, Mr. and Mrs. James Kimball.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bird will entertain: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Coon of Pottsdam, N. Y., Dr. and Mrs. Harry Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brackett, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Woodman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Horne.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McNamara will entertain: Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Lewiston, Maine; Mr. and Mrs. Kent Wright, Sturbridge; Mr. and Mrs. John Beggs, Wellesley; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Forester, Arlington; Mr. Jay Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gove, Stoneham; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Urmson, Wayland; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Knight, Belmont; Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Conners, Hudson; Mr. and Mrs. John Lynch.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Read, Jr., will entertain: Mr. and Mrs. William MacPherson, Concord; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Hoyt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Byford, Mr. and Mrs. John Eaton.

A Tribute To Clyde Y. Mullen

The members and Advisory Board of the Winchester Assembly No. 50, Order of the Rainbow for Girls, are deeply sorrowed at the passing of one of their most loyal members, Clyde Y. Mullen. Mr. Mullen, an active Advisory Board member for many years, was an unselfish and loving person to whom the girls could turn in times of trouble and need, and be assured of patient and understanding guidance. His lively enthusiasm and cheerful friendship will be sorely missed by all the members of this assembly and by all who knew him. It is our hope that other townspeople be aware of the great loss to the community by his untimely death.

A man of deep devotion to his community, Mr. Mullen was active in many local organizations as well as Rainbow, giving of himself continuously to help others. To the members of his family and to his innumerable friends, we extend our deepest sympathy in their great loss.

Senior Forum

"Can Jesus Be a Hero Today?" is the question that Mr. Theodore Clapp will ask the Senior Forum this Sunday, December 1. Mr. Clapp is a guidance instructor at the Wellesley Junior High School and he is chairman of the Youth Committee at the Wellesley Congregational Church. He has been the guest speaker at Forum in past years and is a most forceful and direct speaker.

The chaplains for the service will be Stephen Emery, assisted by Jeffrey Strout. The deacons will be John Burrows and John Barnes, the ushers Carleton Bolivar and David Choate.

The Forum has again participated in the appeal of the Boston City Missionary Society for food to fill their Thanksgiving boxes and for families in need, and also to stock their larder for emergencies during the winter.

First Winter Snow Finds Highway Dept. Organized, Equipped

Monday night's first snowfall of the winter season amounted to a little more than the predicted one-inch, but the Winchester Highway Department was prepared for any eventuality with its equipment ready and the snow removal plans fully organized.

Shortly after 10:30 p.m. two combination sander-salter and five salting adapted trucks left the Highway Department stables off Linden Street and began their usual pattern of covering seven routes. Each route consists of main streets, like Washington Street, steep grades and dead ends, like Fairmount Street by the Hospital, and the many back streets and byways in that order. One such route has four main streets, 29 steep grades and dead ends, and 32 regular roads to salt or sand in its regular pattern.

When the salters and sanders are finished (usually about five hours after starting) and after the salt has had time to chemically work on the snow and ice, the plow trucks go out if the snowfall is heavy enough. Early Tuesday morning when more than one inch began piling up on the streets, the snow plows were called out.

There were 30 snow plow units under the direction of James Wakefield, Jr., town engineer, and superintendent of the Highway Department. In most storms — anything up to 18 inches the town can handle the situation by itself. But if the snow falls any deeper, then Mr. Wakefield has to call in help from private contractors, such as the Derro, Reego, Richburg or DeVries Companies, which send construction equipment to be adapted with plows and operated at an approximate range of from $14 to $18 an hour for their services.

When snowplowing is in full operation, there are 30 trucks running 30 different routes. A full run over the town may take five hours, depending on the depth of the snow. The Highway Department has 11 trucks it puts plows on and 7 tractors (one for roads and six for sidewalks), with 29 men to run them. Mr. Wakefield also has one Tree Department truck with four men, and six Sanitation Department trucks with 12 men to run them under his budgetary and operational direction.

In addition, other town departments help out too. The Park Department sends two trucks and two tractors, with six men to run them. The Water and Sewer Department sends two trucks and eight men to aid in snow removal. And the Cemetery Department sends one truck with two men to help out.

When the snow and ice has been salted and plowed, the next step in the usual order of things is the clean-up operation. This consists of the machines, a blower which throws the snow way into the air and off the street, and a belt loader which carries the snow or ice up an incline and into a following dump truck. This phase of the snow removal program doesn't take long because it is only needed at the Center, in the outlying business district, and at schools and churches.

The only area the Highway Department doesn't touch is Cambridge Street because it is a state highway (Route 3), and is maintained by the Department of Public Works. The town does, however, plow out all the county laid out roads in the town . . . such as Church, Main, Bacon, Forest and Washington Street, Highland Avenue and Johnson Road, which it regularly maintains during the year.

Annual Jaycees' Jazz Night Dance Is Friday Night

The fourth annual Jaycee Jazz Night dance will be held at the Town Hall on Friday evening, December 6th, from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Tickets are available from Bob Adams, Jaycee treasurer, at the Winchester Trust Company or from the Winchester News. Proceeds from the dance will be used toward worthwhile Jaycee community projects. Dress is informal and dance music will be played by Jack Hennessey and his five-piece orchestra.

The general chairman, Bob McNamara, assisted by Ronnie Gravallese, decorations; Bob Adams, tickets; and John Kavanagh, publicity, have planned an evening that promises to make this year's Jaycee Jazz Night the best ever.

Last year's successful limbo contest will be repeated again this year. Raffle tickets for several valuable prizes will be offered as well as door prizes for lucky ticket holders.

Bob Adams has announced that tickets are selling fast and urges

Winchester In England Sends Its Sympathy

This letter was received by the Board of Selectmen on November 29th, and the board passed it along to the Star so that the Townspeople may read its sympathetic message to us in our bereavement by our thoughtful namesake in England.

The Honourable the Mayor of Winchester,
Massachusetts, U.S.A.
Dear Mr. Mayor,

From Winchester, England, home and capital of King Alfred and a line of royal leaders of Wessex and England, I send you on behalf of the citizens our deepest sympathy in the loss of your great President — a man who has worked so hard for peace and who has died so tragically.

America, and the world, has suffered a grievous blow, and I wish to send this message of heartfelt condolence to all our sister cities of Winchester throughout the United States.

Yours very sincerely,
Dorothy L. Richards
Mayor
The Mayor's Parlour
Guildhall,
Winchester, England

The beginnings of ties between the two Winchesters started way back in August of 1917. At that time, the Town received a letter from its namesake which read:

"The mayor, alderman and citizens of the city of Winchester, formerly the capital of England, desire to send greetings to its namesakes in the United States of America on the welcome alliance of the United States with Great Britain and her allies in the Great War for liberty of all peoples and against tyranny and wrong of Germany in the devastation of Europe."

Among other namesakes are towns in Arkansas, Kansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, New Hampshire, Ohio, Tennessee, Texas, Maryland and Virginia.

Mass. Excise Tax On Motor Vehicles Over $90 Million

Motor vehicle owners in Massachusetts were hit in 1962 by a $90,600,000 property tax that's not a tax, the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations reported today.

That's because it's an "excise," based not on the ownership of the vehicle but rather on the "privilege" of registering it. Actual collections were under $90,000,000, due mostly to abatements.

According to Marguerite Troop, town treasurer, the town up until the first of this month had collected $295,072.23 in local motor vehicle excise tax monies. This amount is less than that collected last year at this time, $420,692.60, due to the state's being behind schedule in its new account billing procedures.

The Federation said the excise on a typical heavy passenger car was the highest of any state in 1960, as was the combined impact of excise and motor fuel tax on medium and heavy cars in Massachusetts.

A new-car owner in Massachusetts pays $66 per thousand on 90 percent of list price, almost double the average (full value) property tax rate in this state of $32.50, the Federation notes.

The Federation said that nearly half the states have no property taxes on motor vehicles. The Massachusetts tax is one of the heaviest among those that do.

An Opinion Research Corporation statewide voter survey conducted by the Federation last year found, "Massachusetts residents consider the auto excise, gasoline and real estate taxes as the most onerous of those levied in Massachusetts. At least 60 percent of the public think each of these taxes is too high."

The State's billing with a computer system has not worked out very well this first year, due largely to the late start and to difficulties to be expected in any large-scale innovation. However, there is every reason to believe that 1964 operations will show the promised benefits of monetary savings and returns to municipalities.

New Greenhouse For Rocky Ledge Farm

The new 100 by 300-foot all aluminum large paned glass greenhouse at Mahoney's Rocky Ledge Farm on Cambridge Street is nearing completion. Started last August after the Board of Appeal finally approved a non-conforming use building permit in the residential zone following a two year battle which went all the way to the Massachusetts Supreme Court, the greenhouse will be in production early next spring.

The greenhouse is modern in design, appearing like two groups of three small greenhouses put together without separating partitions, and providing a large growing area beneath the ridge and furrow shaped glass roof. It has a colonial house-shaped front middle entrance, set back about 215 feet from Cambridge Street, to fit in with the character of the residential neighborhood.

Built at a cost of over $50,000, the greenhouse is complete with automatic steam heat and air vents to control temperature and climate conditions for the 85,000 boxes of annuals or bedding plants and 80,000 geraniums that will be grown there. It also has an automatic sprinkling system for watering the plants.

Paul J. Mahoney of 236 Cambridge Street, owner of the Rocky Ledge Farm—one of the largest flower and nursery growers and distributors in New England, said the new greenhouse will help the farm keep up with continually increasing business at the retail stand and through wholesale outlets. This is the third consecutive year the farm has doubled its growing area size to meet business requirements.

Mr. Mahoney has leased the Consolidated Green Houses, Inc., located behind 186 Cambridge Street and adjacent to the Rocky Ledge Farm, which has 42,000 square feet of glass enclosed area for growing flowers and vegetables. In addition, he has leased this year another 28,000 square feet of greenhouse area at South Road in Bedford for flowers and vegetables. Both properties are leased from Dwight Newman of 186 Cambridge Street, who is managing the areas for Mr. Mahoney.

Another 70 acres in Litchfield, New Hampshire, is leased for growing corn and pumpkins.

The total Rocky Ledge Farm operation includes more than 100,000 square feet or about two and one-half acres of growing area, split about even between flowers and shrubs and vegetables. Although the stand on Cambridge Street is the only retail outlet run by the farm, the Rocky Ledge Farm also supplies seven other private stands, and the North Shore area Stop and Shop and Bradlee chain stores. Any surplus is truck-

NEW GREENHOUSE IN WINCHESTER. The new greenhouse at Mahoney's Rocky Ledge Farm on Cambridge Street is nearing completion. Started in August, the 100-by-300-foot building will house growing facilities for about 85,000 boxes of annuals and nearly as many geraniums. Built at a capital expenditure of about $50,000, the large unit has automatic temperature-climate-sprinkler control systems. The nursery expects to open the greenhouse, which was the object of a two-year zoning battle, in the early spring.

Microfilming Of Town's Records May Be Answer For A Storage Problem

The official records of the town's first 100 years of corporate existence—from 1850 to 1950—were all microfilmed in 1952 at a cost of $2,253 by Graphic Microfilm on Route 128 in Waltham. At a nominal charge of about $20 a year, the microfilm has been stored in a vault, and on January 1, 1964, these microfilmed records will be transferred to an even safer underground vault about 20 miles from Boston.

Presently being looked into is the cost of having these microfilmed records updated from 1950 to 1960, and the advisability of having the entire records from 1850 to 1960 microfilmed a second time and stored in the Town Hall with facilities for reading them installed so as to have the records easily stored and accessible here in Winchester.

The Board of Selectmen at its Monday night meeting in the Town Hall discussed the merits of having the microfilmed records updated and the entire set of records refilmed for local use.

According to James Costello, town comptroller, Winchester is one of the only municipalities in the state with a formal records management program. As the town's comptroller, he is vitally concerned with the various aspects of system management in Winchester's governmental operations.

In describing the importance of a formal records management program, he noted that in the storing of official town records such as Town Meeting minutes and the minutes of all official board and committee meetings, accounting bills, and vital statistics such as births, deaths and marriages, there naturally arises the problem of space in which to store the voluminous material and also the problem of organizational classification or filing.

In the storing of official records which must be kept, there are two basic considerations: there must be adequate storage room for all the records, and they must be stored with security against any possible chance of loss or destruction.

When Winchester had its town records microfilmed in 1952 and stored in a vault in another location, it provided for the security of these records. The proposal to update that microfilmed file would simply bring that secure record hsitory to a current decade.

However, in the daily operations at the Town Hall offices, when any of the old town records have to be researched, someone has to find out in which of several storage vaults or safes the huge bound volumes containing a particular set of information might be located in. In addition, the space being taken up by the storage of all these town records deprive several offices of much needed space for their current work and record-keeping, such as in the Town Clerk's office.

So while in the area of records management the Town has provided for the security of its so-called "dead" records of the past, and while the Selectmen are seriously considering asking the Town Meeting for an appropriation to add recent or so-called "current" records to that safe depository, no action has yet been taken to provide for the converting of either dead or current records to microfilm for easier storing, handling and use from the operational point of view in the daily functions at the Town Hall.

Undoubtedly, if the Selectmen can get a reasonable cost estimate for the microfilming of the entire town record history again, and for reading machines for the films, they will probably submit a proposal for a Town Meeting appropriation for that purpose.

Although the town records were microfilmed in 1952, it was not until 1958 that the town first put into operation a formal records management program. Until then, the various town officers and department heads simply took their record books to the vault in the east end of the basement and found a space somewhere to put the book. There was no system or organization to the storage of the town records, and there was often a great deal of duplication (for example, the tax assessors' book on valuations of property for taxes and the tax collectors' book on collection of taxes from assessments were virtually identical . . . with one set piled on one side of the room, the other on a different shelf.)

In the fall of 1958 Mr. Costello and the late Oscar Merrow took an inventory of the stored records and met with the heads of all departments to check on what was there, what was useful or being used, and what was not needed.

They prepared a classification and retention schedule on the records, which was approved by the Selectmen on September 8, 1958, and then submitted the schedule to the State Supervisor of Public Records (according to Mass. law at that time, the state supervisor has to approve any change in the keeping or storing of official municipal records).

LaFauci Becomes New Owner Of The Appliance Store

The Winchester Appliance Company at 15 Thompson Street is in its second week of operation under its new owner, Hugo J. LaFauci of 46 Florence Street. Mr. LaFauci now manages the retail sales and service of appliances at the store which has been at that location for over 35 years.

Al Korn, who has owned and managed the store for the past 15 years, stayed on for a while to aid Mr. LaFauci in getting settled. But Mr. LaFauci is not new to the appliance business, for he has had ten years experience in sales and service at the Mystic TV Company in Somerville, which he owned, and several years in TV repair work.

A resident of Winchester for four years, Mr. LaFauci said he plans to make two major changes at the store in the coming months. First, he plans to enlarge the radio and TV repair part of the business. He said he is starting off by reducing the service charge for calls and work on appliances by more than a dollar—from the previous rate of $4.75 to a reduced $3.50.

Second, he plans to undertake a major record merchandising program after the end of the Christmas season. This will entail having a professional merchandiser review the entire stock of records once a week to keep the selections available continually up to date, with the slower moving records removed—but obtainable on order—and having newer records refilling the display cases weekly.

Irwin Subdivision Gets Preliminary Planning Bd. OK

The Planning Board on Monday night at its regular meeting in the Town Hall gave tentative approval to a preliminary subdivision plan for land of the Irwin property on the easterly side of Ridge Street, adjoining the present Birch Knoll development.

The preliminary plan, submitted by Oneida Corporation of 727 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington, included 25 proposed house lots with land contour lines, and a proposed plan for the extension of Mayflower Road to Ridge Street.

The developer must now prepare a definitive plan on the layout of the subdivision through surveying and mathematically computing precise land lot and road boundaries before the Planning Board will be able to consider whether or not to grant its subdivision approval.

As a matter of policy in Town planning, the Planning Board usually tends to look favorably on subdivision plans that would extend dead-end ways and connect them with already existing accepted public ways. The reason for this thinking is to aid fire and police protective agencies by providing two means of entrance and egress in the event of an emergency. However, residents of the Birch Knoll

Two Hospitalized In Auto Collision At Yale-Wildwood

Two persons were injured and hospitalized as a result of a two car collision at the intersection of Yale and Wildwood Streets during driving Northeaster rains early Friday night.

Joseph R. Allegra of 25 Jefferson Road, Everett, operator of a Chevrolet Corvair, was taken to the Winchester Hospital in the town ambulance and treated for laceration of the right leg and a dislocated shoulder. A passenger in the same vehicle, Charles R. Cook of 54 Church Street, Concord, N.H. was taken from the scene to the hospital by the Fire Department Rescue Truck for treatment for a lacerated eye and face. Both men were admitted.

The operator of the second car, Miss Deborah A. Monkiewicz of 190 High Street, was taken to her home by police for family doctor care for minor injuries.

The accident occured at approximately 7:50 p.m. According to police, the car operated by Miss Monkiewicz had left Dartmouth Street and was headed south on Yale Street, while the car driven by Mr. Allegra was going west on Wildwood Street. The impact of the collision at the junction of Yale and Wildwood Streets forced Mr. Allegra's car off the road a distance of nearly 61 feet and onto the yard of Harry Scott of 72 Wildwood Street.

Clarence H. Fay

Funeral services were held Saturday, November 30 for Clarence H. Fay, 67, who died at the Winchester Hospital, November 28. He had been a resident of Winchester for the past twenty-five years, living for the last seventeen years at 125 Church Street.

Mr. Fay was a retired executive of the Socony Mobil Oil Company, having been with Mobil for 47 years. In 1930, as the New England division personnel manager, he organized the company's first personnel department. He was appointed New England Division fuel oil manager in 1937 with responsibility for the guidance and direction for the marketing of all grades of fuel oils.

During World War II, Mr. Fay served on a special assignment in New York as a member of the Office of Price Administration committee and as manager of fuel oil sales for Socony.

In 1947, Governor Bradford appointed him as a member of the Governor's Council-Fuels, reinstituting a position also held by Mr. Fay during the war years.

After his retirement from Socony Mobil in 1960, he became the head of three different petroleum industry associations, the Oil Heat Institute of New England, the New England Fuel Dealers' Association, and the Independent Oil Men's Association. He then successfully accomplished the merger of the three associations into a unified group, the New England Fuel Institute. Ill health forced him to relinquish his executive-secretary position in September 1962.

He was a member of the Golden Rule Lodge, A.F. and A. M., Wakefield, and also a member of the First Congregational Church here.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mildred J. Fay, and a son, Gordon H. Fay, both of Winchester; two sisters, Mrs. George F. Clarke of Melrose and Mrs. C. Paul Stewart of Brunswick, Maine, and a brother, Percy H. Fay of Lakeland, Florida.

Mrs. Agnes O'Leary O'Mahoney

Mrs. Agnes O'Leary O'Mahoney, widow of the late Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and a native of Winchester, died in Washington on Friday, November 22, in the Holy Cross Hospital in Silver Springs, Maryland, as a result of a stroke suffered a week prior. She was 77 years of age.

Services for Mrs. O'Mahoney were held in the St. Thomas the Apostle Catholic Church, Washington, on the same day as those held for the late President. Interment took place in Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Mrs. O'Mahoney was a graduate of the Winchester High School in the class of 1903 and was one of that class who gathered to celebrate its 60th reunion by attending the graduation of the class of 1963 this past June.

After graduating here she studied library work and went to work in the Library of Congress. While there she met her future husband who subsequently became Postmaster General and then a senator for three terms. The veteran democrat, who was born in Chelsea, died a year ago this month.

Since his death, Mrs. O'Mahoney had been living in Washington with her only surviving sister, Mrs. Joyce W. McLellan. She is also survived by three nieces and a nephew.

Frank Crawford

Frank Crawford, a former resident at 179 Church Street here, died on Wednesday, November 25, in Portland, Maine, where he had been living since 1957.

Mr. Crawford was born in Colbrook, New Hampshire, and was 93 years of age at the time of his death. He was a graduate of Yale University.

Memorial services were held at the Freeport Baptist Church in Maine, and interment was in the Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge.

Mrs. Bridget Cullen

She was the wife of James Cullen and had resided here for about 37 years.

Mrs. Cullen was born in Ireland on October 31, 1886, the daughter of the late James and Ellen Keaney. She was active and well known here in the parish church, the Immaculate Conception, and she had been a member of the Catholic D. A. R. and of the Immaculate Conception Ladies' Sodality.

She leaves six children, Mrs. Ellen Beauchamp of Arlington, Mrs. Rosalie Bonaventura and Mrs. Josephine Smith of California, and Mrs. Mary Doherty, Lawrence A. and Joseph J. Cullen, all of Winchester. She is also survived by 11 grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Celia Clancy of Ireland.

Funeral services will be held Friday, December 6, at 9:15 a.m. from the Lane Funeral Home, to be followed by a solemn high Mass at the Immaculate Conception Church at 10 a.m. Interment will be in Wildwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Ellen A. Kelley

Mrs. Ellen A. Kelley, a native and life-long resident of Winchester, died yesterday, December 4, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Audrey DeMaio, of 8 Laurel Hill Lane.

The widow of the late Patrick A. Kelley, she was 75 years of age.

Mrs. Kelley was born February 13, 1888, the daughter of the late Patrick Cady and Bridget Keady Cady. She had lived for a number of years at 34 Spruce Street until recently when she moved to the home of her daughter.

Mrs. Kelley was a member of the St. Mary's Church Ladies' Sodality and was very active with the Veteran's of Foreign Wars Auxiliary here.

In addition to Mrs. DeMaio, she leaves a daughter and a son, Mrs. Marion Olmstead, of Woburn, and Frank A. Kelley, Jr., of Winchester. She also leaves four grandchildren and two sisters, Mrs. Sara Mullen, of Winchester, and Mrs. Katharine Stuart, of Meadville, Pennsylvania.

The funeral will be held from the Lane Funeral Home on Friday, December 6, at 8:15 a.m., followed by a requiem high Mass in St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery, Woburn.

John O'Donnell

John O'Donnell, of 40 Salem Street, died on Wednesday, November 27, at the age of 57. He was a native of Ireland, the son of Michael and Margaret (McDonough) O'Donnell.

He had been a resident of Winchester for the past 20 years; and for 12 years, until illness forced his resignation three years ago, had worked in the Town Highway Department. Previously he had been a leather worker with the Beggs and Cobb Company for 15 years.

Mr. O'Donnell was a member of the Winchester Knights of Columbus, Council No. 210. He was also a member of the Holy Name Society of the Immaculate Conception Church.

Surviving him are his wife, Sally (Concannon) O'Donnell, a son, Sean, a daughter, Sheila Ann; five sisters, Mrs. Patrick Lacey of Dorchester, Miss Anna O'Donnell of Woburn, Mrs. Donald Pooler of Winchester, Mrs. James McCarthy of Lynn, and Mrs. Joseph Casey of Cambridge.

The funeral was held from the Lane Funeral Home on Saturday at 8:15. A Requiem High Mass was celebrated at the Immaculate Conception Church at 9:00 and interment followed at Calvary Cemetery in East Woburn.

Mrs. Rachel A. Morse

Mrs. Rachel A. (Eshbach) Morse, widow of the late Edward S. Morse of this town and a resident here for more than 65 years, died here on Thursday, November 28.

Mrs. Morse, who was born in Watsontown, Pennsylvania, the daughter of Samuel and Mary (Aartman) Eshbach, came here with Mr. Morse from that state affianced to Mr. Morse and was married here a week after arrival.

She lived until her husband's death on Canal Street here and has recently been with her only surviving son and his family, Carl E. Morse, of 17 Lloyd Street. She is survived also by a daughter, Mrs. Kathleen Cameron, of Angelica, New York, by five grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

She was a member of the G.A.R. Auxiliary when that group was active here, and she has been active in and attended the First Congregational Church.

Services were held on Monday, in the chapel of the Norris Funeral Home, with the Reverend Wesley A. Mallery officiating.

Alfred Ollis Weld

Alfred Ollis Weld, a life long resident of Winchester, died Sunday, December 1, at the New England Baptist Hospital. He resided at 48 Winthrop Street.

Born at 3 Sanborn Place here, June 11, 1881, Mr. Weld attended the Winchester schools, Mt. Hermon School, and was graduated in 1904 from Worcester Polytechnic Institute. He spent forty years in the engineering field, retiring several years ago.

Mr. Weld had a long time interest in Scouting, serving as Scoutmaster, and in later years as counsellor and committeeman. He served as a trustee at Worcester Tech, and was active in the Boston alumni chapter.

He was a member of the First Baptist Church, and was chairman of the building committee at the time of the construction of the present church.

He leaves his wife, Elizabeth M. (Macdonald), his daughter, Katherine T. Meurling, and one brother, Dr. Stanley B. Weld, of Hartford, Connecticut.

Services were held at the First Baptist Church, Wednesday afternoon, with the Rev. Joseph O'Donnell officiating. Burial was in the family lot at Wildwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Celia (Forrey) Perkins

Mrs. Celia (Forrey) Perkins of Stoneham, wife of William H. Perkins and former widely known resident of Winchester, died suddenly Thursday, November 28, at Massachusetts General Hospital after a brief illness. She was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while watching the television showing of the President's funeral on Monday.

Mrs. Perkins was the daughter of John, and Catherine (Murphy) Forrey. She was born in Boston and spent her early life in East Boston where she was educated in the Boston schools.

In 1942 Mrs. Perkins came to Winchester and made her home at 69 Mystic Valley Parkway until September when she moved with her family to a new home in Stoneham. She was a member of Winchester Chapter, Guild of the Infant Saviour.

Besides her husband she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Kathleen M. Palumbo of Chelmsford; Mrs. Gail Garrity of Wilmington; a son, William C. Perkins of Stoneham; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen A. Napier of Stoneham and Mrs. Catherine M. Burke of Jamaica Plain; and a brother, Patrick L. Forrey of Revere.

The funeral was held Monday morning from the Gaffey Funeral Home in Medford with requiem high Mass at St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock. Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

Helen Clark Tozier

Private funeral services were held for Helen Clark Tozier at her late residence, 21 Ridgefield Road, Tuesday, December 3rd.

Mrs. Tozier died November 29th at the Winchester Hospital after an illness of several months. She had been a resident of Winchester since 1937. Born in Natick, February 14, 1880, she was the daughter of Edward and Louisa Clark. Her first husband was Frank B. Hopewell of Newton, who died in 1934. In 1937 she married Dr. Charles H. Tozier of Winchester who died in 1947.

Mrs. Tozier was a graduate of Smith College in the class of 1902. She was a member of the Winchester Smith College Club and of the College Club in Boston.

She joined the First Congregational Church in 1938 and for many years was active in the church and the Women's Association. For six years she served as one of the parish visitors and was a member of the Church Servicemen's Committee. She was on the Governing Board of the Home for Aged People and a member of the Home and Garden Club.

Mrs. Tozier leaves a son, John Clark Hopewell of Hume, Virginia, and four grandchildren: Mrs. Robert Meyer, Rockville, Maryland; Mrs. Walter Brooks, Versailles, Kentucky; Mrs. Paul F. Greenwood, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida; and John Clark Hopewell, Jr., Alexandria, Louisiana.

It was the first such program on records management to be submitted to the state for approval (although it was a common practice in the federal and many state governments). It was approved on June 15, 1959, and the supervisor congratulated the Town on its forward-thinking program. Ironically, in 1962, the State Legislature enacted a law which created a Records Management Board which had the specific authority to approve such a program as Winchester had drafted, proposed and submitted three years earlier.

From an operational point of view, the five-year-old program of classification and retention has worked out well, according to Mr. Costello. However, he said, even the storage of streamlined books is getting to be a problem, and that is why thought is being given to the efficiency and economy of using microfilmed records and doing away with the raw records which pile up year after year.

Holiday Special Offered by U. S. Army Recruiter

More than 10,000 young men in northeastern Massachusetts this week will receive a colorful red and green flyer telling of the Army's fourth annual "Operation Holiday."

According to Sergeant Fred T. Nixon, Army recruiter here, the flyer is being mailed to young men in the 18-25 age group to inform them of the special opportunity to "enlist now, train later."

Under this program, he said, qualified applicants may pick their assignments or special training during December, enlist before the holiday season begins, and defer their "basic training" until January. So, although they will begin training at the same time as men enlisting after January 1, they will be ahead of them in two respects: they will be eligible for promotion two weeks earlier, and they will have a slightly better choice of schools or overseas assignments.

Although a maximum of fifteen days leave is authorized for enlistees entering the Army between the 16th of December and the 1st of January, Sgt. Nixon said that most young men take only about five days. He also pointed out that a special "bonus" is available to men enlisting on the 30th of December, each enlistee that day will receive a three-day pass, and will not proceed to the reception center until the 2nd of January.

Qualified men interested in this unique program and desiring more information may receive it by calling Sgt. Nixon at EX 6-5777 or by visiting his office at 49 High Street, Medford.

ed into Boston outlets such as the Flower Exchange on Tremont Street or the Faneuil Hall Market at Haymarket Square, Boston.

Before the new greenhouse was built, the Rocky Ledge Farm employed about 9 full-time workers and 35 part-time men. Mr. Mahoney expects to increase the number of helpers to about 14 full-time and 40 part-time employees. Besides the usual farm equipment, the Rocky Ledge Farm also has two large tractors and three trucks.

The Rocky Ledge Farm has been in the Mahoney family for many years. It was first known as the Russell Hill Farm in 1858 when Edward Russell, Paul Mahoney's grandfather, started a large agricultural truck garden farm that extended all the way back from Pond and Cambridge Streets to what is now Johnson Road.

The McCue brothers of Woburn then rented the property for many years, selling pansies and other flowers.

Paul Mahoney worked at the farm selling corn and vegetables while going through Boston College and studying economics. When he graduated in 1957 he went to teach for a while at South Boston High School. After a spell in the Army in 1958, he returned to teaching at Boston Latin School, and running the farm during summers. In 1959 he decided to stay at the farm permanently and named it the Rocky Ledge Farm. In 1961 he added the retail stand building with the large parking lot.

While Paul Mahoney is the prime owner and manager of the Rocky Ledge Farm, he also has the assistance of the rest of his family: his brother Charles Mahoney of 228 Cambridge Street helps in managing the farm; and his sister, Mrs. Margaret Mahoney Nunes, a lawyer, offers legal help and advice.

Recent findings indicate that still another curative power of simple aspirin may be its ability to prevent attacks of cold sores.

Cold sores, less commonly known as "herpes simplex," are the fluid-filled blisters that spread from one side to another on the skin. The disease is caused by a virus infection which often remains inactive, triggered into eruption by fever, heavy colds and emotional upset.

Jaycees Greet New Members At Special Meeting

Eight new and prospective Jaycee members were welcomed at the home of membership chairman, Bill Bird, for an orientation meeting on Tuesday evening, November 26. Nearly all have either joined or indicated their intent to become Jaycee members.

New men attending the meeting were Joe Conley, Ed McPartlin, Rudy Peins, Bill Schromm, John Doherty, Ed Nadeau, Bob Horne, and Arthur S. Govoni.

After an opening welcome to new members by Bill Bird, Vice President Bob McNamara explained the meaning of the Jaycee creed. On hand as special guest was Jaycee State Vice President Walter Butler, who outlined the structure of the state and national Jaycee organizations and their relationship to the local Winchester chapter. He pointed out that every state in the Union has local Jaycee chapters and Massachusetts alone has over 100.

Of special interest were his comments about one of the more enterprising Massachusetts chapters (not Winchester) that talked the local town fathers into allowing them to build a public bathing beach. By borrowing trucks and construction equipment from local firms at no charge during off-hours, this particular Jaycee group built a bathing beach for the town that would have cost $250,000!

Next on the agenda was an explanation by Bill Bird of SPOKE, an incentive program for first-year members which offers recognition and award by the national Jaycee organization on its objectives. This program is being instituted by the Winchester Jaycees for the first time and, judging from the enthusiasm, promises to be a big success.

Finally, President Joe Saylor described the various programs and activities which the Winchester Jaycees have been conducting this year, and mentioned projects which are bing planned for the future. Highlighting the upcoming activities are the annual Christmas tree pickup in January and local and state tennis tournaments in the spring and early summer.

The evening ended with a social hour, during which time new and old Jaycee members had a real oportunity to become betted acquainted.

Plan to come to the next general meeting on Tuesday evening, December 10, at 8:00 p.m. at the Winchester Red Cross House next to the library.

Bouillon Lectures For Opera Group

Many members and guests of the Winchester Opera Group Guild and the College Club Opera Study Groups will attend the first scheduled Bouillon Lecture at Tiffany's Restaurant, 46 Beacon Street, Boston, on Tuesday morning, December 10.

Conductor Richard Bonynge will speak on "The Art of Bel Canto" for which both he and his famous wife, soprano Joan Sutherland, are reknown.

Bouillon will be available at 10:30, and the lecture will conclude promptly at noon.

For further information, or for transportation by car, call the general chairman, Mrs. William W. Davies III, PA 9-2578.

Thanksgiving Eve Fire at Mahoney's Ties Up Traffic

Thanksgiving Eve travellers and shopers alike were caught in a two-hour traffic tie-up on Route 3 last Wednesday when a fire at Mahoney's barn necessitated the laying of fire hoses across Cambridge Street.

The Fire Department received the call at 4:01 p.m. when lumber from a demolished barn caught fire from a smaller nearby blaze. It was at a spot about 30 feet from the main house at 236 Cambridge Street.

As the north and south traffic was first stopped and then rerouted around Pond Street and Church, the tie-up began to build and before long extended down into Arlington to the south and up to Route 128 to the north.

Fire hose bridges were then used to allow the traffic to proceed slowly through the area.

Engine 4 responded to the first call but Chief Frank Amico subsequently called for more men and the firefighters worked until 6:30 before it was safe to leave the area.

During the fire, workers at Mahoney's played garden hoses on the two nearby houses, which were steaming a little from the heat.

No injuries were reported.

Glee Club

and the entire glee club, along with a barbershop quartet, composed of club members, will render several of the most popular barbershop tunes which have been loved by audiences since the last century.

The Mystic Glee Club, which has long been a musical tradition in Winchester, got its start at a Winton Club show about twenty-five years ago when a group of men sang a few songs. They were so well received that the group went into glee club work seriously, and now boasts members from many surrounding cities and towns.

Later, the club joined the New England Federation of Men's Glee Clubs and has probably won more awards for excellence in group competition than any other glee club in New England.

Wendell Withington, director of music for the Winchester public schools and well known in this area for his work with choral groups, directs the group again this year. His informal comments about various numbers in the program adds greatly to the enjoyment of the concert. Mrs. Margaret S. Butt of Saugus, is accompanist.

Also included in the program will be a group of well-known college songs and comedy numbers.

The varied program should please the musical tastes of everyone and a large audience is expected. Tickets may be obtained at the auditorium door on the evening of the concert.

Personal Income in Commonwealth Is on the Rise

Personal income in Massachusetts will increase by more than 95 percent between 1960 and 1980, according to a New England Telephone and Telegraph Company forecast.

The study—called "Project 80"—indicates that the commonwealth's population should increase by about 1.4 million during the same period.

Growth in population and personal income should be enough to push the total number of telephones to nearly 4.4 million. This would be a gain of more than 70 percent over the 18-year span of the forecast.

In 1960—the last census year—about 88 percent of Massachusetts' households had telephone service. This was a higher rate than that of the Company's other four operating areas—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Rhode Island, or the country as a whole.

By 1980 the Bay State should have slightly more than 1 million extensions in service, better than one for every two residence main telephones. There was one residence extension for every 3 and one-half residence main telephones in 1962.

The Company's study shows that population in the five states is expected to increase by more than 25 percent from 1960 to 1980.

Growth in population and personal income in the five states is expected to be enough to push the total number of telephone stations close to the 6 and one-fourth million mark by 1980. Telephones in the five states now total about 3.7 million.

"Project 80's" research includes the following statistics for Massachusetts:

GENERAL ECONOMIC MEASUREMENTS

1950	4,690.5 (April 1)	$ 9,700

Adams—Planchet

On the morning of Saturday, November 30, Miss Patricia Joyce Planchet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Planchet, of Medford, became the bride of Thomas Frederick Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Adams, of 22 Hollywood Road.

MRS. THOMAS F. ADAMS

Against a background of white chrysanthemums, the nuptial Mass was held at St. Clement's Church in Somerville, and the couple received the papal blessing. Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the Blue Hill Country Club in Canton.

Carrying a cascade bouquet of glamelias, the bride was gowned in white silk faced peau de soie. Pearl and crystal beading embellished the portrait neckline of her bodice which was set off by a high empire band and bow. Her full princess skirt swept into a wide Watteau train which fell from a high back waistline. Her imported silk illusion veil was held by a flowered pillbox of matching peau. She was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Susan Hasenfuss, of Everett, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Sheila Glennon, of Brookline, and Mrs. Marion Quinn, of Alexandria, Virginia, were bridesmaids. All were gowned in emerald green, iridescent taffeta fashioned in a sheath with a full length overskirt. They wore matching pillbox headpieces and they carried cascade bouquets of gold and yellow chrysanthemums and pom-pons.

Joseph G. Adams, Jr., of Stoneham was best man for his brother and ushering were John A. Hackett, of Medford, Daniel J. Coughlin, Jr., of Somerville, and William T. Novelline, Jr., of Long Island City, New York.

Miss Claire Adams, a sister of the bridegroom, was guest book attendant at the reception.

The bride was graduated from the State College at Boston, and Mr. Adams was graduated from Boston College. He is a member of the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity.

After a wedding trip to Puerto Rico and St. Thomas Island, the couple will make their home in Lexington.

Demonstration Of Fire Control At The Hospital

Some of the Winchester Hospital personnel on hand to watch took active parts in a recent demonstration there by the Fire Department of methods of prevention and control of fire and of evacuation in case of fire.

Captain Peter Galuffo was in charge of the very real exhibition of actual procedures. He was assisted by Firefighters David Dalton, Joseph Faga and Robert Wyman. Chief Frank Amico was on hand to observe.

Captain Galuffo first reviewed for the large group of hospital workers in attendance, methods of evacuation and care of patients in case of fire. He then used a demonstration bed and containers to show how to extinguish fires in beds, containers, storage areas.

Part of a sustained Fire Department program of education about fire and its control, the demonstration included definitions of types of fires and proper methods of handling each one.

Editorials:

A Heinous Crime

Many people like to compare things and construct an analysis that for them satisfies an unfulfilled emotional or mental conditional state. A psychological term for almost obsessively searching for a rational answer to satisfy that void might be called reaction-formation—where one forms a reaction and builds a case around it so that by convincing others of the soundness of the logic, one at the same time convinces oneself of its correctness.

Such a reaction has been much in evidence after Oswald was shot reportedly in retaliation for his alleged sniper killing of President Kennedy.

The entire nation wanted to see what would have come out of a trial of Oswald for the assassination of the President. The majority of the country's citizens wanted the (philosophically speaking) state to handle the matter of not only apprehending the culprit and taking him to trial for proper evaluation of the evidence, but also wanted earnestly to see the state attend to the proper legal execution of the party guilty of executing the executive head of the state.

When one individual took the law of the land into his own hands and away from the people in making himself the self-appointed executioner before any trial was held, there was a tremendous shock and frustrated void feeling left by the act.

Frequently, one could hear the statement that the act done by the killer of the assassin was a more terrible crime than that done by the assassin himself. There is a certain amount of truth in the statement, but for the most part it is an erroneous opinion.

That the state was deprived of the right to handle its affairs was, of course, a regrettable crime, even though many persons were overjoyed that someone had acted right away and done the alleged killer in. However, to say that the assassination of an alleged killer is a more serious crime than the assassination of the nation's chief executive, the First Citizen, the representative of the United States people collectively (in other words, in an abstract and symbolic way, the killer was trying to assassinate the American people), is clearly a misappropriation of values on any scale.

If Oswald were indeed the killer, as few doubt he wasn't, the most serious crimes surrounding his life and death were these, and in this order: First, he betrayed his country and his people; Second, he killed the leader of his nation and people, and Third, he was murdered before he could be taken to trial and executed if found guilty in the prescribed order of law.

The Proven Wisdom Of The Founding Fathers

Oddly, and thankfully, time and again the basic construction of our Constitution has measured up to crisis after crisis in national affairs.

The assassination of President Kennedy, as in the assassinations of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley, was followed in as short a time and as orderly a fashion by a prescribed successor as can possibly be expected under such trying circumstances.

It is a tribute to our national heritage and the wisdom of the founding fathers of this nation that a clear-cut line of succession is not only established, but strictly adhered to. In almost any other country in the world, from the earliest times to the present, the assassination of the chief of state is almost inevitably the first step or sign of revolution, political and social chaos, anarchy, and finally a coup d'etat wherein the old state perishes along with its leader in short order (or, more appropriately, lack of order).

But not so in the United States. Here our people have experienced four assassinations of chiefs of state (nearly an abominably unfortunate 10%), and still our national thread of continuity and unity is so strong that the Union has been preserved without violent overthrow for almost two centuries. For a nation with a relatively short history compared to many, it still can lay claim to a fabric that is so strong it can endure the loss of its leader and replace him in an orderly, pre-planned, and civil manner—and continue to live its destiny without fear of national disintegration.

The Lion And The Mouse

Particularly noteworthy at this time, immediately following the assassination of our President, is the claim made by Venezuela that Cuba is smuggling arms into Venezuela in an attempt to support fifth columnists in overthrowing that country's first real democratic government, and an attempt to prevent a succession of presidents there within a democratic process.

Within the same month that the head of this hemisphere's oldest democracy is slain by a Castroite follower, this hemisphere's youngest democracy is threatened by the same belligerent and aggressive followers of this hemisphere's only Communist country.

The news from Washington is that the Federal Government is making every effort to stem any comments that would associate Kennedy's alleged assassin, Oswald, with anything other than an individual act on his part. And yet it is known that Oswald went to the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City a month or so before the President was killed and shortly after Castro had made threatening remarks about the safety of our government if we exerted any more economic or political pressure on Cuba. Also, Oswald's Soviet-Communist affiliations have been greatly played down since the passing of that weekend of infamy.

Now that our President has been assassinated by a Castroite follower, should we continue to allow Castro to go on with his shenanigans?

Television's Greatest Service

Television in America saw its finest hours of service during its news coverage of the tragic unfolding of events following the assassination of President Kennedy on Friday, November 22.

That American television networks and affiliated stations were maturing in their handling of daily news was evident earlier this fall when NBC and CBS, followed by ABC, announced that their usual 15-minute national and international and 15-minute local news broadcasts would be expanded into a full half-hour devoted to each. This meant that they could tell more than just the headlines and a few brief pertinent facts about each story covered; and looked at in toto, this meant that instead of giving their viewers the equivalent of a little more than a third of the front page of a newspaper such as the New York Times, they would have time at least to present the verbal equivalent of most of the front page. However, with the increase in time space, the networks and local affiliates also took advantage of the situation and broadened their scope of perspective in covering the events, giving interpretations and editorial comment on many of the more important events of the day.

The few short months of experience in expanding their news staffs, equipment, and enlarging their formats stood them in good stead, for when the tragic news broke they were able to quickly adapt their operations to cope with the national coverage necessary—for unlike their coverage of scheduled events such as elections, NASA rocket shoots, and Presidential press conferences or addresses, they had not warning that they would have to gear up to the fantastic coverage that they did in fact present to the American people during that long weekend of national sorrow and grief.

Local TV (and radio) stations provided area interviews with persons who either knew the late President personally or politically, and the networks kept digging up more and more information from Dallas and Washington regarding each turn of events, substantiating facts and separating them from rumors to keep the nation informed on the latest developments as they unfolded.

When Oswald was formally charged by Dallas police with the assassination, TV commentators occasionally made speech errors for lack of script to go by during the long uninterrupted broadcasts and said outright that "police had caught the assassin" and other similar assertions which, as newsmen, if they had been writing the script they would never have said because they knew that he was only the alleged killer. Maturely, they immediately (almost without exception), acknowledged their errors in saying before millions that Oswald was the man who did the act, and continually reminded the American people listening that Oswald could not be named as the killer until he had had a fair trial under the laws of the nation, and that therefore his position at that time was that of an alleged killer of President Kennedy—and that he was no more guilty, although police said they had evidence supporting their charge, than of being in the position of being accused of the crime.

That the television stations along with radio and newspaper media helped keep the people calm during the national crisis of a tremendously violent convulsion at the top of our Federal Government when the leadership of the nation was in a little more than a few hours changed from one man who was assissinated to a successor, is a matter of fact.

In an earlier editorial this year, the Star noted that much of TV programing was little more than a vast wasteland. It was enlightening and heartening to see that from the general barrenness of a wasteland such a tree of knowledge could grow so quickly to disseminate such a vast amount of important information and exert such a wide amount of significant public influence at a time of national need.

Aftermath of a Tragedy; Do Americans Really Care?

> "By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death . . . and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next."
> —Henry IV

How many of us wept last week? How many of us sat in front of our television sets and watched, and watched, and did not grow tired? How many of us spoke a little less, and when we had to speak spoke softly? How many of us found that our own personal problems had diminished in the face of a tragedy that only history will prove to be of worth? that only history will prove to be unique and truly prologue?

Most Americans, I believe, love this country; its form of government; its elected leaders. They also possess a sense of historical perspective; otherwise they wouldn't have formed a line that, at one point, stretched almost eight miles to file past the bier of their fallen President. But there are also the extremists.

A man in Chicago told his wife, "The President has been shot... I'm going to shoot myself," and he put a revolver to his temple and proceeded to do just that. Another man, irate over a derogatory remark about the Kennedy family, drew a knife and stabbed his drinking companion to death. In Dallas, a balding nightclub owner with an explosive temper, ordained himself Lee Harvey Oswald's executioner.

Of a reverse nature, groups of Texas school children cheered when the assassination was first announced to them. A lone picket paraded in front of the White House bearing a placard that read: "I warned you President Kennedy. God curse you." Police took him into protective custody.

Locally, an undertaker joked about Mrs. Kennedy's apparent haste to resume husband-hunting after she had taken her wedding ring off in a symbolic gesture and placed it in the President's stilled hand. And, finally, a young Marine reservist thought nothing wrong with a game of touch football at precisely the same time the President was being buried.

Yet, these are all remote instances of people who just didn't think, or didn't care, or were so illiterate that reason and dignity ceased to have meaning for them.

On a more organized level, and with more serious connotations, many southern and southwestern colleges saw fit to play their regular Saturday afternoon football games. The Boston Bruins took to the ice at Toronto on Saturday night. And the National Football League played their full schedule on Sunday.

But do Americans really care?

During the three and a half days of ordeal, when the three major television networks were losing some $32 million dollars to keep us informed, how many were reminded that this was not a time to sit and brood and complain; but rather to think and reflect and resolve.

How many recalled the assassination of an N.A.A.C.P. official in Mississippi? The bombing of a Negro church and the murder of five young girls? Campus riots at Oxford and a former U. S. Army officer declaring that he was glad to be finally getting a chance "to fight against this damn country?" Anti-Negro riots in Chicago and Philadelphia and the portrait of a ten-year-old boy screaming: "Get out, Niggers?"

How may have received anti-Semetic, anti-Catholic and anti-Everything literature in the mail and let it pass unanswered, unrebuked? How many have actively displayed their discordance toward extremist groups, both right and left?

How many support what they see as good, and decry what they see as bad? Two years ago when this newspaper ran a series of articles critical of extremist groups it was swamped with mail accusing it of being a Communist front organization; but hardly ever a single letter does this same newspaper receive for a stand well taken or in appreciation of something well done.

John F. Kennedy had a favorite story he liked to tell. It was full of meaning and it went like this: "During the Korean War, a young American was called out of the ranks by his Chinese captors and they said to him 'What do you think of General George C. Marshall?' He said, 'I think General Marshall is a great American.' He was hit by the butt of a rifle and sent to the ground. They picked him up and said, 'What do you think of General Marshall now?' He said, 'I think General Marshall is a great American.' This time there was no rifle butt because in their own hard way they had classified him and determined upon his courage. I think in the next decade as individuals and as citizens of the United States, we, too, are going to be called out of the ranks. . . ."

And so we are being called out of the ranks—every hour of every day in a hundred different ways.

It is said that you can judge a man better by his enemies than by his friends. Jack Kennedy had plenty of enemies. One of them, ironically and uniquely, in a sense left the most fitting epitaph when he coarsely declared: "So they finally got the Nigger-lover. Good for whoever did it!"

Democratic Town Committee

The deep sorrow into which we were plunged on Friday, November 22, when news of the death of our gallant young President, John F. Kennedy, was flashed around the world, is still a part of us. But, through the slow passing of the dark days, there have been mitigating circumstances which have helped considerably to lighten the burden of the great sense of loss we must feel for a long time to come.

There have been the visitors, bringing comfort and, in turn, seeking for comfort; the steady stream of telephone calls; the letters and cards from far-away friends, two of those from long distances coming from our Democratic Secretary, John Hogan, who is on vacation at the British Colonial, Nassau, Bahamas, and Margaret Costello who has reached San Francisco in her tour of the United States; and the lovely understanding letters from so many of our kind Republican friends in Winchester.

Then, when we received our copy of our local paper on Friday, our sorrow took on a proud aspect. So many friends have called us to praise the Star coverage of the whole unfortunate tragedy that we must pay public tribute to the wonderfully comprehensive handling of everything that goes to make a weekly newspaper in a small American town rise superbly in its local reporting at a time of national crisis.

First, our thanks to the publisher of the Star, Richard Hakanson, who did such a wonderful job in bringing to us, publicly, the all-embracing sentiments of our townspeople: the services in every one of our churches, their prayers for our President and our saddened country, and the beautifully expressed sermon of the Rev. H. Newton Clay including his praise of our widowed First Lady, will not soon be forgotten. We appreciate, too, the tribute of our Congressman, Brad Morse.

The poem by Mary Frances Galvin, and the comprehensive contribution of our Library with its Memorial Bibliography of the books by President Kennedy and the books about him, well-done by Elva Nelson.

As a climax to all this Town tribute we praise the highlight of the Star's November 28 issue: the splendid editorial, giving so much credit where credit was due, and tastefully paraphrasing "In Flanders Fields," and finally, quoting excerpts from the classic Inaugural Adress.

A year ago the Star received the country's highest weekly editorial award; on November 28, 1963, it demonstrated its ability to measure up to that great distinction.

Thanks again to publisher Richard Hakanson, editor David McLean, and to the good people of Winchester.

Johnson Administration

President Lyndon Johnson's powerful and moving address to the Joint Session of Congress last Wednesday suggested the tone and the direction his Administration will take. While mindful of our deep sorrow at this tragic moment in our history, the President called for action now to reaffirm our dedication to the noble and majestic objectives of our nation.

The President's message reflected his commitment to the policies and programs of the late President Kennedy. His emphasis on civil rights legislation and tax reduction reflect the priorities of the Kennedy Administration. With time so short, a budget to prepare, and a national election just eleven months hence, it is unlikely that Johnson will propose any new programs. In addition to civil rights legislation and tax reduction, a number of appropriations bills await congressional action. The President made it clear that he would not condone delay and said "our most immediate tasks are here" on Capitol Hill.

Although the President pledged thrift and frugality in the expenditure of public funds, current commitments will not permit a significant reduction in spending at this time.

The long years of experience on Capitol Hill as a Member of Congress and as Senate Majority Leader were evident in the President's address. Mr. Johnson understands the legislative process and has a proven record of getting things done. He cooperated closely with President Eisenhower in 1957 and 1960 in the passage of the first ciivl rights legislation since the Civil War period. His experience enhances the prospect that civil rights legislation will be passed, at least by the House, in this session.

SPACE AND DEFENSE

President Johnson has long been interested in our space programs and can be expected to pursue them vigorously. As chairman of the Aeronautics and Space Council and as first chairman of the Senate Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences, Mr. Johnson brngs to office a deep familiarity with our space goals and operations.

The new President also can be expected to keep our defenses strong. He has served on the National Security Council with the Secretaries of State and Defense and is keenly aware of our military needs and capabilities. In his address he emphasized both our willingness to use our national power if necessary and our determination to work for a just and lasting peace.

FOREIGN POLICY

While no man can assume the Presidency fully aware of all the ramifications of our international position, Mr. Johnson in this field, too, has sound experience. He has traveled widely and has met the majority of the world's leaders. One of his first acts upon assuming the Presidency was to reassure the allied heads of state of our continuing commitment to the strength of the free world. He also reaffirmed to the Soviet Union our determination to pursue the cause of freedom throughout the world. The political skills the President possesses will serve him as well at the international conference table as it will on Capitol Hill. Premier Khrushchev's success in consolidating his position in Moscow can be attributed in large part to a skillful handling of political tools. He will find his match in Lyndon B. Johnson.

Until the President has had time to get his Administration underway, however, it is not likely that he will pursue any new initiatives in the Cold War.

In summary, then, the Administration of Lyndon Johnson will be, in large part, a continuation of the Kennedy policies and programs.

More Teen Talk: Miss Crawford Wins Telephone

The teenage dream—of more and prettier telephones—came true for Diane Crawford, daughter of Sergeant and Mrs. Andrew Crawford, of 28 Water Street, when she won for herself a pink "Princess" telephone in a national magazine contest sponsored by Dial Soap.

Diane expects the phone to be installed this week (she won installation and a year's service). Sergeant and Mrs. Crawford expect the talk to treble (they have not been complaining about the lack of it up to now).

Diane is 18 and a senior at Winchester High School. She was one of twelve Massachusetts winners. She received her official notification from the offices of Armour and Company, the manufacturers of the soap, and her gift will be installed through the local offices of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

BOOK REVIEW

by Katrine C. Laban

Winchester Public Library

THE DOMESTICATED AMERICANS

by Russell Lynes

In 1832, Mrs. Trollope (mother of Anthony) published DOMESTIC MANNERS OF THE AMERICANS and became at once "the best-known of British authors throughout America and the worst-hated". With aggravating superciliousness, she was only picturing what she saw—or thought she saw. Mark Twain says (in a suppressed passage in LIFE ON THE MISSISSIPPI) "she lived three years in this 'civilization' of ours; in the body of it—not on the surface of it, as was the case with most of the foreign tourists of her day...she found a civilization here which you, reader, could not have endured; and which you would not have regarded as civilization at all...she was merely telling the truth and this indignant nation knew it."

Russell Lynes begins where Frances Trollope left off. That she was writing the truth about Americans—their lack of manner and manners, their joylessness, sensitivity and avarice—is well attested to by native writers as well as by other European travelers, Dickens, de Tocqueville and many another. But Mr. Lynes is a social historian (A SURFEIT OF HONEY, THE TASTEMAKERS) and he is able to give a reason, if not an excuse, for these characteristics. By following the development of the home, inside and out, the servant problem, etiquette, style, he gives a clear picture, as entertaining as it is sometimes embarrassing, of a pioneer nation determinedly fighting to exist and to push forward.

Even Mrs. Trollope again and again allows that there are exceptions to the mass manners she deplores. On the Eastern seaboard and in the South, there was a nucleus of ladies and gentlemen (European style) who frowned (and still do) on their coarser cousins. The settlers who pushed into the wilderness were not used to amenities to begin with. They had left Europe and then the crowded East to be independent, to better themselves. Life was so difficult, people so few, there was no time nor need for manners or graces. And these people multiplied and set the seal of their pioneer brusqueness on a majority of the population.

Europeans are appalled at the impermanence of American homes—the lack of roots. But it was restlessness that made America; the trek westward took the class which would have been servants, the developing factories drew on the domestics from succeeding waves of emigration. The potential employers and homeowners had to find simpler ways of living as the frontiersman had to make his living more comfortable. The sod hut and the mansion both gave way to boarding houses, flats, apartments, rented houses and trailers. It is easier to seize opportunities afield when one is not anchored to an ancestral hall or family homestead.

But Americans are sensitive to criticism and from the early 19th century on, they have published and read and revised possibly more books on Etiquette and homemaking than the rest of the world together. Social history is anything but dull in THE DOMESTICATED AMERICANS. As one reviewer says "Mr. Lynes combines the virtues of a witty yet considerate ferret and a wise, far-sighted owl. I don't know how he did it, but I wish I did."

However, when the Bishop of Southampton visited here in August of 1954, and requested a chance to bring official greetings personally to the Selectmen, he noted that although the English town had originally contacted all the namesake towns, it was with Winchester, Massachusetts, that it had sustained the best relations.

From World War II times to 1960 the succeeding mayors and mayoresses of Winchester England, have sent Christmas cards and cablegrams of congratulations on the occasion of the Fourth of July.

Official visitors from over there have come here and unofficial visitors from here have called at the Mayor's office at Guildhall and have been most cordially received.

Although there is a large factory making chocolates in Winchester, England, it is primarily an educational town with a famous cathedral and an army depot.

Traveler in Rome Tells of Reaction To Kennedy Death

Editor of the Star:
Rome, 11/23:

I had just returned from evening dinner here at the pension—meal is not 'til 8 p.m. TV was on for news broadcast during dinner. I can tell you I was shocked at the news of President Kennedy's assassination. It was incredible.

About 15 minutes later a news flash came again "E Morto" dead. Our President. We were terribly upset. And the Italians in the dining room were more so. They loved him. I think he was our greatest leader—a great loss, a tragedy. All Italian TV programs were cancelled for the evening. Only a test pattern was on and Beethoven symphonies.

11:25: We walked to the American Embassy this morning, where there were thousands of people waiting to go in to sign a funeral book. Most were school children carrying wreaths and flags with black ribbons. Most impressive I signed the book and obtained tickets for Mass at St. John the Lateran, said by Cardinal Spellman at 5 p.m., coinciding with the 11 a.m. service, home and televised.

Every Bishop, Archbishop and Cardinal in Rome was there. Hundreds and hundreds. Some wore brown, some white, some red, some maroon. Also priests and nuns. Dignitaries representing every country were present. The President of Italy included, who sat near us and cried throughout the Mass. His guards were uniformed men, two with steel helmets and horses' tails. The whole U. S. Embassy staff was present.

We all had special seats, no Italians were able to attend. They had to stand outside the reserved area. These churches are so enormous here, there are no benches. One simply stands. At St. Peter's and St. John's seats were improvised.

A dummy coffin in black and gold draped with the flag of the United States of America was in front of the altar with two marines, a sailor and an army air force man at attention. The choir sang a requiem Mass. Everyone shed at least one tear: cardinals, laymen and politicians alike.

At dinner tonight we watched the whole thing on television.

Sincerely,
Francis E. Ehrgott

John F. Kennedy As Remembered By A Fourth Grader

Editor of the Star:

Ex-President John Fitzgerald Kennedy was an active young American. In World War II he was a Lieutenant on PT-109. Once out in the ocean, his men were rammed by a Japanese destroyer. Their boat was split in half and the men were thrown into the ocean. Lieutenant Kennedy encouraged the men to swim to shore and by doing that, he won an award.

He urged all Americans to be mentally and physically alert.

Ex-President John Kennedy was a kind and thoughtful sort of husband and father whom many people would want to have. He was a loyal young American and was proud of his country. He was calm in times of danger and had a special concern for others.

President Kennedy was born in 1917 in Brookline, Massachusetts, and he died in Dallas, Texas on November 22, 1963 from an unknown assassin's bullet. I say "unknown" because Lee Oswald did not live long enough to have a fair trial.

In his Inaugural Address, these were his words: "And so my fellow Americans, ask no what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

And Charles De Gaulle said: "He died like a soldier under fire."

Sincerely,
Thomas Raleigh

Cong. Keith To Speak Here

Congressman Hastings Keith will be the guest speaker at the Winchester Republican Women's Club meeting on Wednesday, December 11th at 1 p.m.

The Honorable Hastings Keith is the congressman for the Cape area. The meeting will be a Christmas Tea and will be held at the home of Mrs. Don S. Greer, 82 Arlington Street.

Winter

There are no rules on overtime by the snow removal workers. Those who want to work when the snow falls are listed and are called when their services are needed. They get time-and-a-half for every hour put in beyond either their eight-hour day or 40-hour week. "The men work anytime they are needed," Mr. Wakefield says, "but for an ordinary storm they might work a day, a night, and the following day to clear the streets and sidewalks."

Under the snow and ice budget for 1963, the Town Meeting appropriated $124,000. In 1962 the town appropriated $111,000, and spent $124,000 through transfers of Reserve Funds and emergency financial overdrafts. And, to show how different and variable the snow and ice appropriation can be, next year's budget request is now estimated at about $110,000 by Mr. Wakefield.

Norman Stafford Receives Student Airman's Honor

Airman Third Class Norman S. Stafford, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Stafford of Ridgefield Road, was recently nominated for the honor of Student Airman of the Month at the 3357th School Squadron, Chanute Air Force Base, Illinois.

AIRMAN THIRD CLASS
NORMAN S. STAFFORD

Airman Stafford, a student in the Instrument Repairman Course there since July, 1963, was noted by his commanding officer in a letter which said in part, "He is being recommended because of his scholastic record, fine military bearing, neat apptarance, and unsolicited cooperation. Airman Stafford attended the Student Leader Training Program in October, 1963, attaining a 92 plus average. His conduct and devotion to duty are above reproach . . . . His mature approach to problems and willingness to accept responsibility in the performance of assigned and routine duties make him a definite asset to this organization, and the United States Air Force."

Airman Stafford was graduated from the Winchester High School in 1962 and attended the University of Arizona before joining the Air Force.

In addition to new merchandising methods, Mr. LaFauci said he is contemplating reducing significantly the prices of most of the long playing records he will carry: the list $4.98 records which previously sold for $4.29, he plans to sell below the $4 mark; and the list $3.98 records which previously sold for $3.29, he plans to sell at a price below $3. There is no planned reduction in the price of 45 r.p.m. records, he added, because he said he felt the present 89-cent charge was a fair and low price.

In the sale of radios and TV sets, Mr. LaFauci noted that he will be adding the Motorola line to the regular Emerson, RCA, GE, Zenith, Sylvania, Magnavox and other lines already in stock.

There will be no changes in the number of persons running the store's business, according to Mr. LaFauci, which includes a salesman in the front store, two repair men in the back shop, a bookkeeper, and a part-time teen-ager to help out.

During this season, the Winchester Appliance will continue in its usual practice of carrying a full selection of Christmas records and appropriate seasonal choices.

A LASTING CHRISTMAS GIFT

Arthur Griffin's
New England

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL BOOK OF NEW ENGLAND EVER PUBLISHED

New England, by Arthur Griffin, makes a distinguished addition to any library . . . yours or as a gift to a friend's. This beautiful book has 44 full page, color photographs of New England in all the seasons. Each photograph is accompanied by an original essay written especially for this book by 47 famous New England authors. From Faith Baldwin to Robert Frost, the image of the region is caught and held in words and lovely four-color photographs.

This limited edition is hand-bound with hard-back linen covers. Each color print is hand-mounted on gray vellum. It's a big book, 10¼x13½ inches. This will be a collector's item . . . a gift of true and lasting value for anyone who loves New England. A book so fine in every department that it received the top award for the best designed and printed book in the recent Lithographers & Printers National Association Contest.

Annual Meeting of Winchester Scholarship Foundation Tuesday

The annual meeting of the members of the Winchester Scholarship Foundation will be held Tuesday, December 10, 1963, at 7:45 p.m. at the Winchester High School.

Scholarship Committee chairman Otto E. Schaefer will preside in the absence of the general chairman, Neil H. Borden, who is abroad on a teaching assignment.

Reports of 1962-63 committees will be given at this time by their chairmen. Levon K. Boodakian, chairman of the finance committee, will report on the town-wide solicitation of businesses and organizations. Charles W. Butler, treasurer, will give the financial statement of the Foundation.

A slate of officers, trustees and committee chairmen will be presented by Mrs. Ralph T. Jope, chairman of the nominating committee. Other members of the nominating committee are John A. Dolan and William S. Lippman.

Members of the Foundation (any person who contributes $5 or more) are eligible to vote at this meeting. The individual members elect five to serve on the general committee. Each organization that contributes to the Fund is called a group member and elects one representative to serve on the general committee. In turn, the general committee, representing both group and individual members, elects the officers of the Foundation, the trustees and the committee chairmen.

All interested citizens of Winchester are welcome to attend this meeting.

National Economy Changes Slight In the Fall of '63

Washington, D. C. Nonfarm employment rose by 100,000 from September to 58.3 million in October, in a period in which there is usually little change. On a seasonally adjusted basis, employment pickup has continued almost uninterrupted since 1962. Job gains were mostly in the service-producing sector. There were offsetting declines in contract construction and manufacturing. The number of unemployed was unchanged at 3.5 million and total employment rose by 350,000 to 69.9 million in October, the Department of Labor's Bureau of Employment Statistics announced.

Major collective bargaining agreements concluded during the first 9 months of 1963 covered almost 2.3 million workers. The average (median) wage-rate adjustment in the first year of the contract was 3.1 percent of the estimated straight-time hourly earnings.

Primary market prices advanced 0.2 percent between mid-September and mid-October. Prices increased on the average for industrial commodities and processed foods, while farm product prices were off moderately.

Missile sites were 99.92 percent free of work stoppages in available work time; only one manday was lost because of a labor dispute for every 1,288 man-days worked. every missile site was finished and ready on schedule to receive weapons and crews, it is disclosed in the 2nd Annual Report of the Missile Site Commission, for the period June 1962-June 1963.

Action to prevent an increase of .15 percent in the Federal unemployment tax on employers for 1963, has been taken by 6 states as result of an Act passed by Congress recently. States: Alabama, Arkansas, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

Lynch Basketball Candidates

Twenty-nine enthusiasts and eager candidates for the Lynch Junior High School varsity basketball squad answered Coach Frank Provinzano's initial call this week. Despite the fact that height is missing, Coach Provinzano has been encouraged by the showings made during the first week.

It is unfortunate but Coach Provinzano has the most difficult task of cutting the squad down to about half of the number reporting for practice. He encourages those that are not maintained, however, to participate in the school's intramural program which is open to any and all enrolled in the school except for those on the varsity squad who may act as officials for the intramural games.

Making preparations to lead the Lynch rooters onto victory are the cute team of cheerleaders which is made up of co-captains Candy Nelson and Jane Sexton; Karen McCormack, Martha Broadhurst, Mary Fenoglio, Mary Ann Hill, Becky Irwin, Corlane Crandall, Kim Reeves, Maureen O'Toole, Shelly Swanson, Kathy Quigley and Sharon Keith.

Sachems End Three-Year Drought; Down Woburn In Finale, 20-6

WOBURN'S PAUL LISACKI runs into congestion of six Sachems (count 'em twice) as he twists forward for short gain in final period of last Thursday's action. Identifiable players are Sachems: Dick Faieta (82), Bob Branley (27), Jack Kimball (22), Barry Johnson (89), and Steve Goldin (24). Tanners are: Paul LoFaro (13) and Tom Lynch (33). Lisacki, who scored lone Tanner TD, was named Woburn's outstanding back.

The drought is over.

Not since 1959, when the Sachems won 18-8, has Winchester defeated Woburn. But they did it last Thursday morning at Manchester Field, and some 11,000 fans witnessed it.

The scoring, all of it in the first half, was highlighted by Ed Cutting's touchdown runs of 28, 38, and 80 yards. The fleet halfback was forced out of the game early in the third period when he aggravated a knee injury, otherwise the Sachem margin very well could have been larger than it was.

Cutting's first touchdown occurred on the first play from scrimmage after end Kevin Collins recovered a Tom Lynch fumble on the Woburn 28 with something less than three minutes gone in the game. He put the Sachems ahead 6-0 when he took a handoff from quarterback Bob Branley, cut sharply off left end, and raced to pay dirt untouched. Jack Kimball's rush for the extra points failed.

LOOKING MORE LIKE the Celtics out of uniform are Sachems Vic Papadinis (87) and Jack Kimball (22), and Tanner Jim Doherty (66) and Paul LoFaro (13). End-zone action shows Papadinis grabbing Bob Branley pass for PAT after Ed Cutting had scored his second TD. Illegal procedure, however, nullified this play, and a second pass to Papadinis went incomplete.

Three plays later, Kimball made a neat over-the-shoulder interception of a Pete Flynn pass, reversed direction on his own 45 and returned to the Woburn 38.

Once again, Cutting needed only one chance to score. This time he broke off right tackle, twisted loose from several would-be tacklers, and hugged the sdeline for the last 30 yards. The conversion attempt, after illegal procedure had nullified a Branley to end Vic Papadinis completion, failed.

On the ensuing kickoff the Tanners, with fullback Paul LoFaro alternating on five consecutive carries, made their initial threatening gestures to the Winchester 20. But, suddenly, a personal foul dashed their hopes back to the 35, and then Sachem's Kevin Collins intercepted a deflected Flynn pass on the 33.

Five plays later, after the Sachems had penetrated to the Woburn 20 on carries by Cutting, Rowe, and Kimball, Tanner defensive back Don Scott intercepted a Branley flank pass and was pulled down on the 35.

Heads-up defensive work by guard Vic Lawson and end Barry Johnson stalled any appreciable Tanner movement on the next series of downs and Woburn was forced to punt out of their own territory.

With the ball on their own 24 the Sachems began making mistakes. Halfback Dave Rowe had the ball stolen from him by LoFaro on the first play from scrimmage, and the Tanners were quickly inside the Winchester 20. An illegal procedure penalty and a timely tackle by Collins temporarily aborted the threat.

The Sachems were on their own 26, and trying desperately to get out of dangerous territory, when Tanner guard John Carbone broke through and nailed Branley back on the 11. Right afterward a "flea flicker" pass (in which a lateral to a halfback immediately follows the completion) was fumbled and tackle Sal DeTeso pounced on it on the Winchester 6. Lisacki bulled his way to the 2, was next stopped for no gain, and then sliced off right tackle to put Woburn on the scoreboard. A pass for the two-point conversion was knocked down by Cutting; but the Sachem margin was now only six points.

Then came the first of two turning points in the game. Tanner Ron Boutwell lofted the kickoff to the Sachem 20, where Cutting tucked it in. With orange jerseys seemingly everywhere, Cutting scampered up the sideline in front of the Woburn bench. The blocking was good. He crossed the 50, and at the 40 veered to the middle of the field. At least five Tanners were still in pursuit, but Cutting turned on some extra speed and left them behind. Branley tossed good to Papadinis for the first successful conversion since the Melrose game, and the Sachems were out in front, 20-6. There were a little less than three minutes left in the half. All the scoring was over.

Once, with seconds remaining in the half, Cutting tossed long to Papadinis, who had gotten beyond all defenders, but the ball slipped through the lanky end's outstretched hands.

When Cutting was injured on the third play of the third quarter, the Sachem offense sputtered and finally filtered out almost entirely. To combat it, Branley began to throw with increasingly more regularity. On two series of downs he passed five times and completed three. Near the end of the third quarter he came close to teaming with Papadinis for another score but the ball was overthrown in the end zone.

Then occurred the second, and perhaps most decisive, turning point in the game. It began just seconds before the third quarter ended and continued until there were just three and a half minutes left in the fourth quarter.

It came in the form of a Woburn drive that started on their own 20, which utilized no less than twenty consecutive plays (only one of which was a pass), grounded out six consecutive first downs, and ended abortively on the Sachem half-yard line.

A Tanner score at this point would have closed the gap to either 20-12 or 20-14.

Woburn got their hands on the ball twice more before the game ended but each time lost possession on second down; once when tackle Frank Frongillo fell on a Flynn fumble, and again when Kimball made his second interception and returned from his own 40 to the Tanner 25.

SACHEM SIDELINES

Coach Henry Knowlton announced the names of next season's cocaptains immediately following the game. They are John Stavros, a back, and Bob Gilberti, a lineman. Both were chosen by a vote of their teammates . . . Ed Cutting and Barry Johnson were Winchester's recipients of the outstanding players awards . . . Paul Lisacki and Sal DeTeso took Woburn's honors . . . The most impressive tribute this writer has ever witnessed was given to the memory of John Fitzgerald Kennedy prior to the game. The absolute silence of 11,000 people was almost awesome and literally heartwarming . . The Woburn Times noted that when the announcer called for the tribute, "the flag on the northerly end of the field suddenly went limp," and, moments later, when the drums rolled to begin the National Anthem, "the wind picked up and sent Old Glory flying in the breeze."

SACHEM BASKETBALL COACH JIM PHILLIPS lists this Saturday night for the encounter between the WHS Faculty and the globetrotting Harlem Stars. Tickets may be obtained at the high school gym at $1.25 for adults and $1.00 for students . . . Also coming up is a scrimmage with Natick (Dec. 10) and a game between the WHS Alumni and Faculty on December 20th . . . SPORTS WRITER LARRY CLAFIN reveals that the Red Sox almost landed Rocky Colavito on June 10, 1959. The deal would have involved the Indians' Colavito, Cal McLish and Russ Nixon for Frank Sullivan, Jackie Jensen and Sammy White. It went kaput, however, when Rocky slammed four consecutive home runs that very day against Baltimore. Exclaimed Trader Frank Lane: "The deal's off. If I let him go now, they'd run me out of town on a rail" . . . WHILE TERRIBLE TOM McNEELEY and King Kong Kolo Saebedong exchange verbal blasts at each other prior to this Saturday's clash at Boston Garden, promoter Sam Silverman is threatening Dick DiVola with suspension. DiVola stepped out of his rematch with Tommy Tibbs when a sore jaw failed to heal properly. Silverman says that it's a feeble excuse, but has gone ahead and replaced DiVola with Joey Basilio, younger brother of former middleweight champ, Carmen.

S.O.I. Men

This week's games in the league mark the end of the first half of the schedule and the top teams are giving the old college try to land in the first four positions in the standings. There is so much suspense and anxiety in the latter factor because the teams of the first four places earn a place in championship rolloffs later on.

Notre Dame has not lost its grip in the top slot since the beginning of the current season and continued its winning way the last time out by defeating eleventh place Holy Cross 6-2. Keeping N.D. up there were Capt. Moose Bellino, who is having a great year with strings of 116-127-99 and his associates Emile Doucette 114-118-101 and Dan Gattineri 101-96-108. Going strong for losing H. C. were Ben Subrizio whose new shoes helped him hit for 89-112-118, Capt. Muskie Tofuri 103-110-102 and Jake Ciarcia 103-96-112.

Bates is now tied for second place with Navy after white-washing eighth place Georgetown 8-0. Having a big hand in the victory were Capt. Bob Fiore 109-115-124, Roundy Fiore 107-101-110, Dan Mistretta 101-114-125, Angie Amico 130-98-97 and Maxie who hit for 112-88-108 and still he turned out as low man with a total of 308 for 3 strings.

The team tallied a total of 1639 in pinfalls which is going to be hard to beat. Leading losing Georgetown for the night were Tony Chefalo 101-112-130, Pucky Perritano 90-116-119 and Joe Ciarcia 102-110-106.

In the win and loss column Navy is tied for second with Bates but the latter has the edge in pinfalls by a mere four pins. Navy took twelfth place Maryland 6-2 with Capt. Richie Riga leading his pack with strings of 131-118-121 and getting assistance from Frank Provinzano who finished up with 100-126-124 and Joe DiTucci 82-103-101. Trying awfully hard for Maryland were Capt. Woozy Giacalone 118-108-97, John Dattilo 101-105-100, Gaspar Lentine 104-101-97 and Tony Bavuso 87-102-101.

Army climbed from fifth to fourth spot after beating seventh place California 8-0. The cadets with ammunition were Capt. Choppers Gangi 117-108-127, Jack MacIsaac 120-105-113 and Correction Fiore 91-105-113. Coming closest to the 300 mark for California was Nick Molea who had 107-114-69. How did that last one get in there?

After being in third place a week ago Yale dropped to fifth in the standing after splitting 4-4 with ninth place Harvard. Hitting the 300 goal for Yale were Muddy Saragossa 133-93-96 and Capt. Richie Bucci 96-100-117 while the Harvards to hit the mark were Capt. Joe Capone 131-129-107 and Tony Lentine 109-105-102 although Hokie Procopio just missed with 98-88-108.

Sixth place B. C. took last place Alabama 6-2 with some good scores in the game. Top performers for B. C. were Andy Buzzotta 99-99-128, Giro Cerulli 95-108-108, Max LaCarubba 99-107-104 and Capt. Tony Saraco 99-106-105. Keeping pace for Alabama were Capt. Dick Tofuri 121-118-109, Bill Maggio 97-107-129 and Jay Cammarata 115-96-95.

Next to last place (a week ago) St. Mary's took eight points from Penn who dropped from eleventh to thirteenth place and now St. Mary's is in tenth slot. St. Mary's Rudy Fiore was the sole 300 hitter for both teams with 97-88-131 although his teammates Art Dunbar and Tony Melaragni came through with respective strings of 103-104-89 and 104-93-99. Carl Bertolucci of Penn was off but still topped his team with 98-90-98.

This week's games will reveal teams gaining championship rolloff positions and all eyes will be focused on matches between first place Notre Dame and second place Bates; third place Navy against fourth place Army and fifth place Yale against last place Alabama.

S.O.I. Women

As you know the Newports and Kools were tied for wins and losses but the Newports had pinfalls by 4 pins. They battled it out last week and now Newports have 4 points over the Kools.

Rose DeTeso sure bowled great guns with spares and strikes on spares. You just had what it took last week, Rose. All you needed was a little bit more of what you had to beat Cusi Fiore's high triple of 345. Better luck next time Rose.

We understand the Kools had a replacement that night by the name of Mary Clougherty. Too bad the Kools couldn't take her score. She also could do no wrong. She put on a mighty good show with her string of 113. That's nice bowling Mary.

I understand a few captains have already made the statement that they would like you on their team next year, permanently.

Our cellar team Springs have been performing beautifully in the past week. Again this team came up with the only 8 point total wins for the night. It will be a team to watch in the coming second half.

The Springs are definitely determined to climb to the top and stay there. Good luck girls.

We do hope Ann Gerardi enjoys that beautiful basket of fruit she won. Congratulations, Ann.

Thanks to Strike Lanes for putting that coffee machine in. The gals now can enjoy a nice hot cup of coffee while bowling.

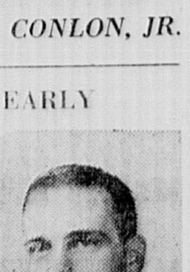
HOT SPARKS

By: BART T. CONLON, JR.

MAIL EARLY



Now everybody listen here . . . if you are mailing gifts this year, the mail bags even now are stacked, so get your presents bought and packed. You want them to arrive before the big day's here, and what is more, you'll ease thet postman's burden too, and Christmas he'll be blessing you.

Listen here! If you want the best heat at a reasonable price, be particular about the fuel oil you burn. For a clean burning, dependable oil, call B. T. Conlon Fuel Service, 27 Lake Avenue, Woburn. Phone WE 3-1720.

Merchants

Jim Callahan rolled a mighty 369 including a 151 single to lead Trefrey in an eight-point sweep over Alan Motors. This boy Callahan is real hot. He holds high average, high triple and high single.

Guerino and Carroll were the big guns for Winchester Esso as they swept eight from San-O.

Peterson went into first place with an eight-point win over Suburban as Winchester Bowladrome dropped eight to Woburn Carpet. Olsen Motors failed to show and forfeited eight points to Cradock.

Bowladrome's Jr.

Despite the bad weather we had a nice turnout of our junior bowlers last week, lots of new faces. But we missed some of the regulars. Let's have a 100% turnout this Saturday.

Eddie Loungo won bowler of the week award with 108 single. Paul Cunningham finished second with a nice 98. Better luck next week, Paul. And the mighty mite, Richie Joyce, is moving up in the standings with a neat 81.7 average. Nice bowling for a little guy. So come on, boys and girls. Let's hit those pins this Saturday and see how many records you can set.

Stavros, Gilberti Elected Sachem Grid Co-Captains

Coach Henry Knowlton announced the names of next season's football co-captains immediately following last Thursday's 20-6 win over Woburn. They are John Stavros, a back, and Bob Gilberti, a lineman. Both boys played regularly this season, and their experience should benefit the team as a whole next year. They were selected by a vote of their teammates.

Women's Coffee

It must be our coffee. These gals are starting to hit the 100 plus strings like pros. Gretta Johnson rolled a torrid 111 that was high single for the match. Rose Breen makes the nicest coffee cake, how about some more. Jo Cross has her kids popping their buttons with the scores she is turning in.

Mal Comita with high average is really being pressed by Karen O'Donnell who is only percentage points behind her. Ceil Aldo proves she is no slouch on the lanes with her 107 game. Nice bowling girls, let's really knock 'em over Wednesday and fill up the "100" club.

John L. Curtis of 5 Myrtle Street; Ilga Gailitis of 104 Wendell Street, and Joyce K. Sugarman of 35 Thornberry Road, are among the record enrollment of 3,350 full-time students at the University of Bridgeport from 35 states and 27 foreign countries is reported by President Henry W. Littlefield for the 1963-64 academic year. In addition some 3,700 students are enrolled on a part-time basis in Evening Division classes.

Stephen L. Powers of 37 Pond Street, is a member of the Northeastern University hockey team which has begun a 25-game season schedule. Sixteen returning lettermen and the addition of nine sophomores from last year's successful freshman team give Coach Jimmy Bell reason to believe that this could well be one of Northeastern's finest hockey teams.

Richard Rowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Rowe, 91 Highland Avenue, was awarded a varsity letter in football at the annual Vermont Academy Fall Sports Award banquet held at the school in Saxton's River, Vermont, on November 26.

Miss Susan Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Carter of 185 Forest Street, has recently been elected assistant program chairman of the Rally Day Shows at Smith College in Northampton. There are three Rally Day Shows, each written directed and produced by each of the three upper classes. The performances will be in February.

Miss Jeanne Marie Grant, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. Morton Grant, 7 Pierrepont Road, will begin her Christmas vacation from Centenary College for Women on Wednesday, December 18, and return to the campus January 6. Miss Grant is a freshman at Centenary.

John Brenner, 107 Cross Street, is a member of the Northeastern University basketball team which has opened a 23-game schedule with hopes of retaining the New England small college regional crown it won last season and earning a trip to the national NCAA finals at Evansville, Indiana, at the close of the season.

Ten Students Study at New Mass. Bay College

Ten Winchester students are enrolled at the new 1961 Massachusetts Bay Community College at 27 Garrison Street in Boston. They are: Joseph T. Curran of 36 Tufts Road, a business transfer, Marie E. Lyons of 33 Grayson Road, secretarial course, Joseph M. Mawn of 51 Forest Street, a business transfer, Jeffrey M. Mayo of 29 Grayson Road, general liberal arts, Philip B. McCutcheon of 27 Lloyd Street, general business administration, Laurall A. Mian of 18 Chestnut Street, liberal arts, George P. Muraco of 40 Nathaniel Road, general liberal arts, Pauline M. Riley of 161 Swanton Street, secretarial, Jane F. Smith of 49 Salem Street, liberal arts, and Linda White of 3 Fletcher Street, liberal arts.

Massachusetts Bay Community College is a two-year co-educational public college for commuting students of the greater Boston and suburban areas. It was created for the purpose of providing two years of liberal arts and business administration education for students who plan to enter four-year institutions for their last two years of college. It also provides general, semi-professional and technical education for students who do not intend to go further than the first two years of college. The college awards associate of art and associate of science degrees.

Music Hath Charms, Much Else Besides

As William Congreve wrote in 1697, "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, to soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak." He wasn't far wrong.

Today the noble art is being used in some unlikely places—in the barnyard and the dentist's office, the factory and the operating room, the National Geographic Society says.

In McKeesport, Pennsylvania, dairy men piped music into a barn to lull somnolent cows into yielding more milk. The experiment rated mention in the British House of Lords, whose members learned that cows prefer the Blue Danube Waltz to noisy jazz.

Patients who arrive at their dentists' offices with frazzled nerves and sagging courage calmly submit to the whirring drill after exposure to the languid strains of a Chopin nocturne.

Hens Lay More

Some poultrymen report their hens lay more eggs under the influence of music.

And in a Phoenix, Arizona, hospital, obstetricians have been experimenting with music as a substitute for anesthetics on the theory that music "brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies," as Tennyson wrote in "The Lotos-Eaters."

Music therapy is also used in hospitals in the treatment of mental patients.

In southern India, a botanist has claimed that music makes plants grow faster and yield bigger crops. The notion, received by other scientists with frank skeptism, is not new in India. The puranic scripture Bhagavata describes the deity Krishna as having made flowers bloom when he played his flute in the gardens of Brindaban.

Powerful Sounds

Music's next-door neighbor in the sonic spectrum—the higher range of frequencies called "ultrasonic"—has produced some of the most dramatic examples of the hidden power of sound waves.

Ultrasonic waves, just beyond man's hearing range, have been used to wash clothes, repair teeth, measure the fat on a living hog's back, test the tenderness of beef-on-hoof, guide torpedoes, measure ocean depths, find fish, and even to ease a presidential backache.

This latter application occurred in 1961. When President John F. Kennedy suffered a strained back, doctors used ultrasonic radiation to relax the muscles and reduce pain.

In February, 1963, botanists at Utah State University said they had used sound waves to create living viruses from plant substances.

And those softened rocks and bent oaks Congreve spoke about?

Ultrasonic "knives" can cut through sapphire, one of the hardest of minerals; and ultrasonic energy, the Oregon Forest Research Center reported, can change the form of wood products.

Motorists Urged To Check Autos For Wintertime

The month of May is national vehicle safety check month, but this is December. Why, then, should Police Chief Joseph J. Derro take his valuable time to discuss the need for a vehicle safety-check at this time?

"Spring and winter safety-checks are for different, but mutually supporting purposes," he explained. "The spring check is to detect defects that may have developed during a difficult winter, and to correct them in preparation for the summer driving season. The winter check is to make sure our cars can carry us safely through this season. Both are involved in our town's safety record, not to mention the convenience and safety of the driver and his family."

The normal car-winterizing precautions are vital to the life of the car and its ability to perform efficiently in cold weather, Chief Derro points out. Adding to this a thorough check of all car equipment affecting safety is vital to the lives of the people who will be using the car.

What does a winter safety-check involve? The answer is found in the very nature of winter weather and its demands on cars and drivers.

For one thing, much winter driving is done after dark. This means lights must be checked, not once, but constantly.

Snow tires and tire chains help keep traffic moving smoothly in snowy weather. This equipment is equally importnat, perhaps more so, in accident prevention.

Braking efficiency and skid prevention depend on adequate surface traction. National Safety Council tests have shown that reinforced tire chains provide the best possible traction on loosely packed snow, as well as on glare ice. A winter safety-check is incomplete if this is forgotten.

Chief Derro said he agrees with most traffic safety experts, that escaping exhaust fumes play a much larger role in traffic accident occurrence than previously realized. Detection and replacement of leaky mufflers and exhaust pipes are not the least of a driver's responsibilities to himself and his passengers.

Seat belts, useful the year around and highly recommended by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, are particularly helpful in wintertime, when property damage accidents increase, since they minimize the injury factor in unavoidable mishaps. Their ability to hold the driver in a stable position may actually enable him to avoid accidents which otherwise might occur on slippery streets.

"It's our Town's safety record, but your life is involved," says the chief, urging everyone to give attention to vehicle condition as it affects personal safety.

Living With Your Heart

"Living With Your Heart" is a community service of the Massachusetts Heart Association

A review of 500 patients undergoing surgery for narrowed aorta at Chldren's Hospital Medical Center over a 15-year period has shown the operation carried "a very low risk" in patients of suitable age and without other complications.

Dr. Robert E. Gross, past president of the Massachusetts Heart Association and world-famed surgical pioneer, and Dr. Samuel R. Schuster issued the report.

"On the basis of our experience, operating on patients through a span from infancy up into the sixth decade, we believe the optimum time is in the range of 8-to-10 years up to 18-to-20 years," the researchers declared.

Successful surgery is performed for the affliction—medically termed coarctation of the aorta—above and below those ages too, it was pointed out.

Coarctation of the great artery leading to the heart may leave the artery's pinched section as narrow as a pencil, rather than the normal width of a garden hose, if the patient lives to adulthood.

Blood pressure builds to a high pitch, up to the narrowed part of the aorta, then drops drastically on the other side. Little blood is available to feed the lower part of the body and patients often have disproportionately large upper bodies. Physicians diagnose the condition in part by noting exceptionally high blood pressure in the arms and low pressure in the lower body.

Without surgery—a procedure first done in the United States by Dr. Gross in 1946—few patients live past their thirties and some research has indicated that only one-tenth of such patients live more than 50 years.

Success of the operation over a 15-year period was demonstrated in the review by figures showing an overall mortality rate of 4.1 per cent. Excluding those with deaths largely attributable to associated heart conditions, the rate stood at 2.1 per cent. Further excluding those dying with problems traceable to extremes of age (at either end of the scale) the rate was only 1.6 per cent.

Operating techniques vary with the patient. Wherever possible, it has been found best to cut out the narrowed artery and then to stretch and carefully rejoin the two ends. This is most easily accomplished while the patient is young enough to retain elasticity in the arteries.

When this is not feasible, vessel segments from an artery bank are grafted on, mostly in older subjects.

"Of 70 patients with homografts," the surgeons said, "only one died after leaving the hospital". In 34 more in whom longterm follow-up x-ray studies were available, none suffered swelling and 12 underwent some degree of calcification.

Patients in the older age groups, despite their tendency to artery degeneration and aneurysms, generally respond well to this operation. In the series it was found that 45 patients with a total of 57 aneurysms profited from the operation.

After such surgery, dramatic relief from high blood pressure occurs. The study showed that of 151 patients with preoperative heart enlargement—a left ventricular condition brought by the hard labor of pumping against heavy pressure—67 per cent returned to normal size; 13 per cent improved; 17 per cent underwent no change; and the condition worsened in one per cent. In most cases where the heart did not diminish, patients were 30 or over.

Of 115 patients in whom abnormal electrocardiograms were found before the operation, 69 per cent returned to normal; 7 per cent improved; 17 per cent had no change; 7 per cent deteriorated. The latter group were the older patients.

Research in Dr. Gross' laboratory has been aided by the Massachusetts Heart Fund over a period of years.

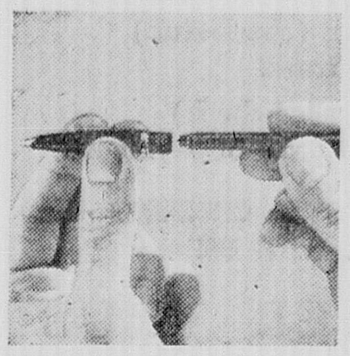
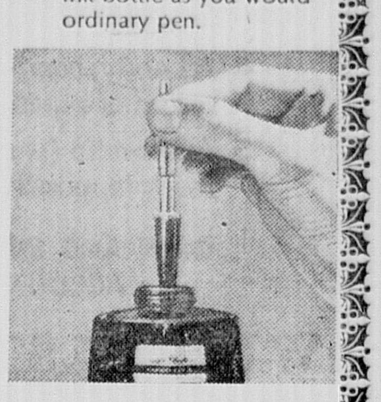
New kind of pen for people who are always running out of ink

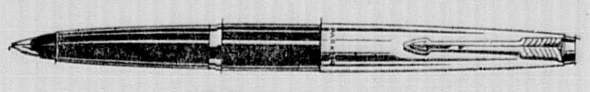
1. Slip in giant size Quink cartridge and write up to 10,000 words.



2. Insert converter. Fill from ink bottle as you would ordinary pen.

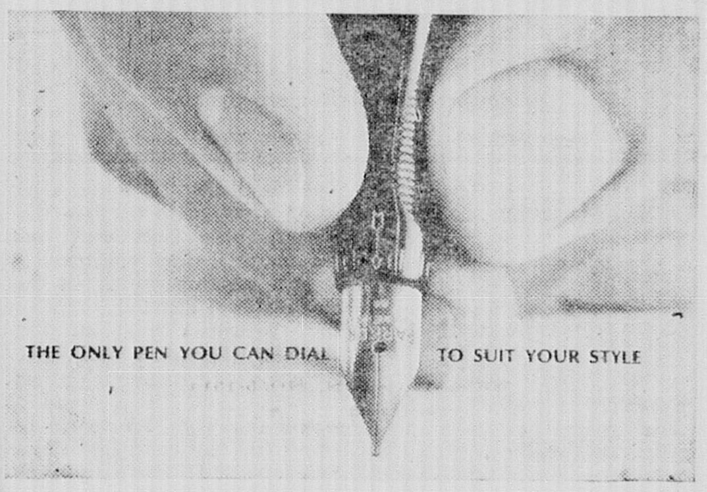


This pen doesn't leave you with a single excuse for not writing with a fountain pen. It won't let you run out of ink. Load it with a leakproof cartridge or fill it from an ink bottle. Choice of seven solid 14K gold points. And the Parker 45 "convertible" costs only $5.



The new Parker 45 "convertible"

ENTIRELY NEW IDEA IN FOUNTAIN PENS



You can dial the point to fit your writing angle

The New VP* adjusts to you: Pick it up and your fingertips automatically slip into a comfortable position, thanks to the gently contoured grip. Dial the big, solid 14K gold point until the tip touches the paper at just the angle you want. Then you can write with more ease and comfort than you ever thought possible. The VP gives you a choice of 15 instantly replaceable points, from a needle point to an extra-broad executive. Stop in for a free booklet "How to Pick the Right Point for a VP."

New Parker VP* (VERY PERSONAL) $10

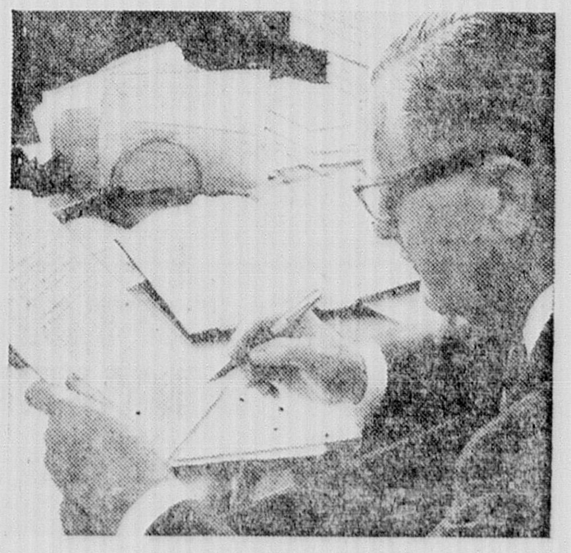
Give the pen that does the writer proud



Here's the perfect gift for people who take pride in their handwriting. A Parker 61 does far more than merely make marks on paper. It captures the personality of the writer, responds to his every touch.

Fills itself by capillary action — even makes its own ink out of water. Proved leakproof, even in a jet at 40,000 feet. A really thoughtful gift. $15 to $150.

Chief Derro Tells Of Winter Hazards In Driving Autos

Chief of Police Joseph J. Derro, who worries about next month's traffic safety record like the rest of us worry about next month's budget, today explained a unique characteristic of winter driving hazards.

"It's clear to most drivers",Chief Derro began, "that winter driving involves many of the same danger factors that are with us the year around—such as, other drivers missing their signals, kids running into the street, jay-walking pedestrians and the like.

"What we may forget is that winter weather can rob us of our best means of coping with such hazards."

The chief pointed out that a driver defends himself by keeping a sharp lookout and, when danger looms, depending upon his brakes for a sure, safe stop.

"Both of these vital defenses against accidents—looking and stopping—can be rendered ineffective by the twin winter hazards of sharply lowered visibility and reduced road traction," he explained.

"Lowered visibility results from darkness, falling snow, frost or snow that has not been carefully cleared from car windows. This makes it entirely possible that we won't see trouble as soon as we should. And then what happens? A fast stop may be out of the question—no matter how good our brakes are—if the roadway is glazed by ice or packed snow."

Even if a driver is moving at a limit—say 20 miles an hour—it will take some 60 feet to bring his car to a stop on loosely packed snow and close to 200 feet on glare ice, the chief warned. "This fact has been clearly demonstrated in scientific tests by the Committee on Winter Driving Hazards of the National Safety Council and it has the endorsement of the International Association of Chiefs of Police," he said.

"These two terrible hazards—poor visibility and poor traction—are going to have a lot to say about our safety record in the months ahead," Chief Derro predicted. "Drivers who have accidents may talk about 'bad luck'—but accidents aren't caused by bad luck as often as they are by taking chances. The dangers of winter driving could be pretty well neutralized by guarding our two best defenses: our ability to see and our ability to stop."

The means by which winter safety capability can be maintained are neither new or difficult, the chief observed. For seeing they include adequate defrosting equipent, a few minutes of scraping windows clear of snow and ice, effective windshield wipers, and properly aimed lights. For reasonably quick stopping they include balanced brakes, good tires, and reinforced tire chains.

"We mention these things because they can contribute so much to a good winter safety record," the chief said, "but I also want to point out that the men of this department have a personal interest in this. When they're out directing traffic on a wintry night, it means a lot to them that drivers can see them in plenty of time to stop safely."

Bruce Mandeville Receives Honor From Air Force

Sergeant Bruce Mandeville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mandeville, of 6 Skillings Road, was honored by his Bombardment Wing of the U. S. Air Force recently.

A letter to his parents from the commanding officer, Colonel Van R. Parker, notified them that he had been selected Boom Operator of the Month, an accomplishment "particularly noteworthy due to the severe competition among the crew of the 904th Air Refueling Squadron."

"I share your pride in his achievement," said Col. Parker, "Upon such individual ability and effort depend the continuing effectiveness of the United Sates Air Force."

All About Wines At Infant Saviour Party on Tuesday

At the regular meeting of the Guild of the Infant Saviour on next Tuesday at 2 o'clock in the K. of C. Hall, Mr. Francis McGarrahan of Winchester will show a movie and give a lecture on the ancient art of wine making.

The pictures will include the Widdmer Orchards at Naples, New York, where all the grapes for the various kinds of wine are produced, how the wine is processed, aged, and made ready for the table on the most festive occasions. Recipes and suggestions will be distributed in literature form with information about the various kinds of wine to use with meat and fish.

Refreshments will be served and there will be group singing of Christmas carols in keeping with the season.

Mrs. Lester Killian and Mrs. Francis McGarrahan are the co-chairmen for this meeting, assisted by a large committee.

Christmas Seal Appeal Gets Memorial Funds

After the initial shock of the tragic events of Dallas the paralysis that seized the entire population has been shaken off and the return to the cares of everyday business has been tempered with a greater degree of sympathy for aiding the less fortunate. The current Christmas Seal Campaign of The Middlesex TB Association suffered a complete drop in the mail response the first week but the recent mail has contained many letters sending funds in memory of President Kennedy. The connection between President Kennedy and the Christmas Seals has been a close one. As one of his last acts on October 13, in a posed photograph at the White House, he launched the current Christmas Seal appeal in company with Ann Landers, the columnist, and Peter Janss, president of NTA. Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy served as 1962 National Chairman of the Christmas Seal drive, one of the few charitable appeals which she personally sponsored.

"Dear Friend," a Malden woman wrote, "I am sending this contribution to Christmas Seals in memory of our beloved President Kennedy. I hope that your work will build good will and reduce hate in this country."

Another 77 year old woman who sent her "widow's mite" of one dollar commented, "I am getting old and going to die soon. I am sorry I had to live to see our young president killed. I have only my social security but I am sending this dollar in his memory." The letter was postmarked Chelmsford, Massachusetts.

Memorial testimonials are welcomed by the Christmas Seal organization. They will be noted and marked just as the donor wishes them to be. Send your letter response today to the 57th Christmas Seal Campaign to fight tuberculosis and respiratory diseases, Box 265, Woburn, Massachusetts.

We have a complete selection of artists' oil colors in tubes, also jars of linseed oil and turpentine. All at the Winchester Star.

State Employment Division Changes Boston Location

The Boston Professional Employment Office, operated by the Massachusetts State Employment Service has moved to new and enlarged quarters.

The Professional-Technical-Managerial Office and Professional Nurses' Registry has moved from their location at 11 Beacon Street to the new Park Square Building, 31 St. James Avenue, Boston. The opening of the new location provides four separate employment offices serving the placement needs of employers and job seekers.

The other two offices at 253 and 255 Huntington Avenue handle service and industrial occupations respectively.

Senior Forum

Reverend Samuel N. Slie, Congregational staff minister with the New England Christian movement will be the speaker at the Senior Forum Chapel Service this Sunday at 9:15. He will ask the question "What is Life's Greatest Gift"?

A graduate of Springfield College and Yale Divinity School, Mr. Slie has spent several summers in Italy with work camp groups sponsored by the Friend's Service Committee.

As staff representative on the Student Christian Movement he has had a great deal of experience with young people and is well liked by them.

On Sunday evening at 7:00 p.m. in Chidley Hall the Dramatics Committee under the direction of Mrs. James F. Jefferson, the Adult adviser, will present a play "Christmas at Home" for members, parents and friends. Taking part in the play are: Juliet Foskett, Judy Wells, Janet Willis, Russell Willis, Craig Nickerson, Christine Cooper and Richard Penner.

Debbie Barone and Stephen Emery are the chairmen of this committee.

Winter Courses At Cambridge Adult Center

Many new courses will be offered beginning January 6, including stimulating discussion groups on The Dynamics of War and Peace, the Anthropology of Human Relations, and the Origins of the Cold War. In the art and craft areas a new Puppet Workshop will offer practical experience in making and manipulating puppets, and Book Design and Illustration will introduce class members to the skills of book layout, type and organization.

Popular courses in painting, crewel, sewing, modeling, drawing and many more subjects will be offered again, for beginning and more advanced students. Call KI 7-6789 for a free booklet describing the courses.

Mail Early For Christmas

Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun offered these helpful hints today on how to mail your Christmas cards and gifts to insure prompt and safe delivery before December 25th.

If you use the new five cent Christmas Tree stamps on your Christmas cards, they will be sorted and delivered first and, if you include your return address with your ZIP Code number on each card envelope, they will be forwarded in the event of a change of address, or if they are undeliverable, they will be returned to you for correction of your mailing list. Also, remember you can write personal messages only on Christmas cards sent by First Class mail. Nothing but your signature is authorized on cards sent at the unsealed, Third Class rate.

The Postmaster warns against careless packing of your precious Christmas gifts. He says it is unbelievable how some people fail to use strong cartons, heavy wrapping paper and sturdy cord when packing their precious gifts for mailing. He requests that you take special care in packing breakable gifts—mark the cartons, "Fragile", "Handle With Care" and be sure to put an extra label carrying the recipient's and your name and address inside of every package.

The Postmaster also said, "By giving special attention to your Christmas mailings right now, by being sure that your mailing lists are up-to-date and by planning your mailings so that you send out your cards and packages in groups, rather than all at one time, you'll be certain that all your Christmas greetings and gift packages reach their destinations before Christmas.

The Postmaster asks the cooperation of all business firms to delay the mailing of circulars and catalogs until after December 25, to keep the mails clear for the Christmas rush.

Beginning December 9, service windows at the Post Office will be open daily from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday December 14, from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday December 15, from 12 noon to 5 p.m.; Saturday December 21, from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

If you use Christmas stickers or seals, put them on the back of your Christmas cards and packages so that they will not conflict with the address on the front. Make sure that correct postage is firmly affixed to each card and package. When mailing gifts, it's a good idea to place a piece of transparent cellophane tape over the address portion of the label to prevent defacing it in transit.

Keep in mind that parcel post size and weight limitations vary according to destination, so be sure to ask about them when you go to the Post Office to buy stamps.

The Postmaster reminds us that we can make it a merrier Christmas for everybody if we will try to get all of our Christmas presents mailed before December 10. Christmas cards for out of town delivery should be sent before December 15, and those for local addresses should be mailed at least a week before Christmas.

The Postmaster also said he is most appreciative of the interest and cooperation shown by the mailing public so far, and reminds us that "Do it now" is the slogan from here on in. Don't put off your Christmas mailings while you still have time because this means that dreaded pile-ups will occur at the Post Office, causing unavoidable slowdowns in deliveries as the holiday approaches.

REMEMBER THE ROTARY AUCTION. It's time to help us fill-up THE BARN. Just call the NEW AUCTION NUMBER PA 9-4108, anytime, day or night.

Meat-Eating Vegetables

Most all of us have read at some time or another a science-fiction novel about a party going to some distant planet and being captured by an enormous carnivorous plant.

While no carnivorous plants are known to reach a size large enough to be capable of devouring a human being, there are numerous small plants which actually lure, trap and digest tiny insects. All the carnivorous plants known to man, with the exception of a few small species, are indigenous exclusively to a stretch of North Carolina coast. They have been known since the early 1800's.

The Venus Fly Trap, Dionaea muscipula, is the most widely known meat eating plant. It has "leaves" which snap shut upon the intrusion of a fly, ant, beetle, or some such small insect.

The traps are dime-sized ovals which are hinged on one side; the opposite edge has a row of curved "hairs" which mesh like a row of gears when the trap closes. What makes the traps snap closed is one the many mysteries of science. There are four hairs on each side of the trap which, when touched, cause the trap to close. How the plant interprets this stimulus and causes the subsequent reaction is unknown; the question is made even more intriguing since plants do not, of course, have either nervous or musculatory systems.

Many physiologists have offered explanations of this phenomenon. Some contend that the release of osmotic fluid along the leaf's midrib causes the closure. Others are sure that the reaction is due to the fact that tension is present within the leaf since cells do not grow at a uniform rate; when this tension is released, the trap is sprung.

Whatever the reaction is, botanists have noted that a tiny electrical disturbance accompanies each closing of a trap. Another accepted fact is that the plants "know" whether an insect has been caught, or if a hair has been triggered by a toothpick. If a toothpick was used, the trap closes slowly and reopens shortly; let a thrashing insect enter, however, and the trap springs shut with lightning speed and remains closed.

Another characteristic of the D. muscipula which is evn more mysterious is the fact that these plants have cells which produce meat-digesting enzymes. After the traps close, these enzymes, along with bacteria, start decomposing whatever has been caught. The plant then absorbs the nutrients and proteins.

Should a piece of glass, sand or other inorganic matter be placed in a trap, it would be expelled quickly.

Still another great mystery of this plant's life is why, out of all the millions of square miles on earth, is it growing only in one secluded part of the North Carolina coast? The plants are understandably protected under North Carolina law. They are, however, exported if they are to be used for "bona fide scientific and-or educational purposes."

The plants are reproduced by means of small, black, egg-shaped seeds. (D. muscipula seldom blooms in captivity.) A dicotyledon is formed and in 50 to 60 days the plants have traps resembling small tooth-brushes. Shortly after, full-grown fly traps are open for business.

The Venus Fly Traps are not by far the only carnivorous plants known. Another one is called the sundew, (Drosera rotundiflora.)

This is one of the most wonderously magnificent plants in the world. It is literally living fly-paper, a two inch main stem is topped by a jelly-bean size capsule which bears hundreds of tentacles which are tipped by a drop of glistening viscous digestive enzyme.

When a fly, which is attracted by some unknown plant produced aroma, lights on the tip of a tentacle, it becomes entangled in the sticky fluid. Slowly, the other tentacles begin a sinister bending-in motion around the fly. After a short time, all the tentacles are cupped about the fly, exerting vise-like pressure.

After a few days, the fly has been digested and the tentacles will resume their original position, waiting for another victim.

Another carnivorous plant is the pitcher-plant, (Sarracenia purpurea.) This plant is composed of secondary leaves and one big tea-cup like structure which holds thick black digestive fluid. Here the capturing process is passive, as opposed to the Fly Trap's active maneuvers. A strong aroma lures the insects to the lip of the cup-like structure. Spiny bristles are found here, stronger and more dense away from the pool than near it. The bug naturally takes the supposed "easy way" out, the way which causes it to fall into the deadly pool.

Student Wins Military Honors

Dudley H. Willis, of 30 Rangeley Road, a senior at Norwich University has been named a Distinguished Military Student under the university's ROTC program, it was announced today by Col. Hugh R. O'Farrell, professor of military science.

DUDLEY H. WILLIS

The designation entitles a cadet to apply for a commission in the regular Army, to be effective upon his graduation. It is reserved for cadets who stand in the upper half of their classes academically, and in the upper third in their military studies. They must also display qualities of leadership.

Dudley, who holds the rank of Cadet First Lieutenant in the regimental organization of the corps of cadets, is vice president of the Honor Tank Platoon. A Dean's List student, he is a liberal arts major in government at the military college. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Willis.

Film Program At the Library

On Friday night, December 6, the Library will present "The Adventures of Georgio" which are the adventures every schoolboy dreams of at one time or another. Georgio daydreams in class until his teacher is completely exasperated and tells him so. Suddenly he leaps from his desk and runs away—and sees the world—quite a bit of it from his point of view—before something happens which sends him back to the schoolroom, happy to be there.

"Panama Canal" takes a huge freighter safely through the lovely waterway between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. The intricate mechanism and timetables necessary to handle the constant flows of traffic both ways is shown and the tremendous responsibility of the pilot emphasized.

"The Rabbit That Runs On Snowshoes" couldn't run at all if he didn't have snowshoes—in the winter at least.

The program starts at 7:30 Friday night and will be repeated at 10:15 Saturday morning for school children. Tickets will be available at 10 a.m. in the Boys and Girls Room.

Receipts At WHS Play Night Sent To Dallas Widow

Postponed from Friday night, November 22, to Tuesday night, November 26, the annual One Act Play Night put on by the High School dramatic group, Curtain and Cue, saw still another response on the part of the students to the mood of the week. The organization voted to send a portion of the receipts of the house to the widow of the Dallas police officer slain in pursuit of the President's alleged assassin.

The sophomore presentation, a light comedy called "Antic Spring" took first place in the close traditional contest which was judged by Miss Constance Trickett, dean of girls, Mrs. Blanche Roberts and John Deans of the student body. They won the Marion Bailey trophy by their results and also took honors for best directing, done by Patty Overacker and Ellen Becker.

Its cast included Bill Chase, Lynn Billman, Jane Lynch, David Choate, Bill Jonah and Leslie Wild.

The drama "Two Crooks and a Lady", put on by the sophomore class won second honors, directed by Polly Farnam and Margie Hickey. Playing in this were Ronny Macdonald, Sherry Jellison, Kathy Urmson, Irene Lynch, Bob Letty, and Scott Wallace.

Directors Marcia Kimball and Peggy Hoffman took the seniors through another sentimental comedy, "The Wedding", with Doug Cann, Chuck Quinn, Sue Tully, Peter Fisher, Betsy McCreery and Juliet Foskett acting.

The acting awards went this fall to two sophomores and two seniors, Jane Lynch and Bill Chase, Doug Cann and Chuck Quinn, respectively.

The audience was treated also to a series of entertaining variety numbers, put on under the direction of Julie Knight during the judges' consultation time.

On the Thanksgiving program received in the Lynch Junior High School classrooms through the public address system last Wednesday, Gardner W. Handy, principal of the Lynch Junior High School, took the occasion to remind the students of the wisdom of our forefathers in establishing a governmental structure which could withstand the tragic disaster which befell the nation.

Ninth grade members conducted the brief exercises. James Mumma introduced the program, David Goldin led the salute to the flag and Mary Power read the Thanksgiving Proclamation.

In addition a portion of Senator Mike Mansfield's tribute to President Kennedy was read by Edward Downing; and the eighth grade music class, under the direction of Mrs. Caryl Carle, sang two verses of "America".

Winchester High School Class Of 1963

PUTS STUDY WAY OUT AHEAD

The annual follow-up summary report of the whereabouts of the Winchester High School class of 1963 is published today and this year puts the number attending four-year-colleges up over the fifty per cent point. It is 50.9 as against 45.6 in 1962, or a larger-than five-point rise.

A second statistic with a real jump is that recording those students in this category who are studying at colleges outside of New England: this year 40%, the highest ever on record.

The total graduating last June, according to the guidance office survey, was 294, 48 more than in 1962. Of these some 149 are in four-year colleges, 25 in junior colleges, 32 in technical and other schools and 30 taking post-graduate work here or in preparatory schools. This brings to 79.2 percent the number who are furthering their education full time.

Eighteen young men (9 over last year) went into the armed services. Forty young men and women, or 13.4 percent, the lowest percent recorded in recent survey years, went to work. In both these categories many are doing part-time study, five in the work category are officially recorded this way.

The class lost one member by death, Michael McAdams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McAdams, of Highland Avenue, who was killed in an automobile accident here this August.

This list has been compiled by a card survey and the high school guidance office (729-4488) will be glad to hear from any reader able to make a correction. The breakdown of students and what they are doing this year follows.

News From Marycliff Acad.

After competing for positions as Marycliff Cheerleaders, twelve girls were chosen as a result of special tryouts. Danielle McLane was chosen captain. Other cheerleaders include Mary Clair, Kathy Bubser, Dianne Bouley, Christine McBain and Lois Nunsisto, seniors; Susan Luick and Rosemary Burke, juniors; and Leslie Carter, a sophomore. The alternates are Carolyn Cataldo and Jean Cavegnero. This year the squad will cheer in new blue and white uniforms.

Live Better Electrically Program

According to the Live Better Electrically Program of the Edison Electric Institute, reports from homemakers who have flameless electric heat indicate that the average weekly time spent in dusting is cut from 12 hours to four. This is an indication, says the Institute of the cleanliness of flameless electric heat.

The same report states that in households where there is electric heat, women declare they find their curtains and draperies stay fresh for longer periods and that walls and ceilings have to be refinished far less frequently.

While the woman of the house puts great emphasis on the cleanliness feature of flameless electric heat, the Institute reports that men tend to be equally impressed with the lower maintenance cost involved. Properly installed, says a spokesman for the Live Better Electrically program, flameless electric heat will last the life of the building and rarely, if ever, needs servicing. "With no moving parts, nothing but instant-response electrical energy, there is nothing to wear out," is the way one executive put it.

Of universal interest, according to the Institute, is the feature of individual thermostats in each room. This makes for greater efficiency inasmuch as unused rooms can be kept at a lower temperature with consequent elimination of heating waste. On the positive side is the fact that bathrooms and nurseries can be kept at higher temperatures while adult sleeping areas and living quarters can be kept at more moderate levels.

Finally, in commenting on the growing popularity of flameless electric heat, the Institute spokesman pointed out that there is a further advantage in that there are no heat losses up the chimney. While many homes with electric heat do have chimneys, they serve no functional purpose inasmuch as flameless electric heat is "comfort by wire" and needs no flue of any kind.

"The fireplace has finally come into its own as a piece of decoration," according to the Electric Institute.

Parkhurst School Reports on Teas For Teachers

Teas are a nice way to convey gratitude to teachers, and the Parkhurst parents are grateful to all mothers who make it possible. Many of these affairs have taken place recently.

Miss Jacqueline Quinn, second grade teacher, was the guest of honor at the home of Mrs. Edward Cincotta, with Mrs. Richard Ocherbloom as hostess, and Mrs. Alvin Malthaner and Mrs. William Meahl poured.

Mrs. Joseph Cincotta and the mothers of fourth graders honored Miss Betty May Gardner, while Mrs. Anthony Martignette and Mrs. Albert Mayer poured.

Mrs. Edward Duffy, Jr. opened her home to honor Mrs. Helen Mallion, first grade teacher, with Mrs. Thomas Raphael and Mrs. Rodger Davis pouring.

Mrs. John Hansen and Mrs. John Sutherland were co-hostesses at a tea for Miss Mary Cullen and the mothers of both morning and afternoon kindergarten sessions. Mrs Hansen's home was the setting, and the pourers were Mrs. Lewis Franklin and Mrs. Michael Curtis.

Mrs. Albert Moulton and Mrs. J. P. Strain entertained Mrs. Ruby Wiggett and Mrs. Ruth Graham at the home of Mrs. Moulton. The third grade teachers and mothers were served by Mrs. Anthony Catalano and Mrs. Thomas Gouzoule.

Everyone was delighted to have Miss Paula Caffrey, acting principal, and Parkhurst Parents' Association president, Mrs. Frederick Lindberg present at each tea.

Applicants Sought For C. G. O.C.S.

College graduates and college seniors graduating in January 1964 may apply for the Coast Guard Officer Candidate School class starting February 9, 1964.

Upon completion of 17 weeks training, graduates will be commissioned Ensign in the U. S. Coast Guard Reserve. Those who qualify may fulfiill their military obligation through this program.

The Coast Guard Officer Candidate School is at the Reserve Training Center in historic Yorktown, Virginia, on the York River.

Toys for Tots

The start of the annual Toys for Tots campaign, sponsored nationwide by the Marine Corps Reserve, was postponed by the tragic death of President Kennedy, but is now in full swing. Opening ceremonies, originally scheduled to be held at South Station on November 25, by Registrar of Motor Vehicles James R. Lawton, were cancelled and will not be rescheduled.

The 1st Battalion, 25th Marines, Boston's unit of the organized Marine Corps Reserve, has set a minimum goal of 7000 toys this year. Last year 4400 toys were collected and distributed in this area. Since the beginning of the program nationally in 1947, more than 33 million toys have been collected and distributed by the Marines.

Boston citizens desiring to insure a merry Christmas for some needy child are asked to leave a new or slightly used toy at one of the following locations:

South Station (7:30-9:45 a.m., 3:30-6:00 p.m. weekdays)

Marine Corps Reserve Training Center, 495 Summer Street, Boston

Fore River Shipyard, Quincy (Mr. Flynn, GR 2-3200, Ext. 427)

St. Ann's Parish Hall, 243 Neponset Avenue, Dorchester.

If wrapped, toys should be marked with the age of the child for which the toy is intended and whether it is for a boy or a girl.

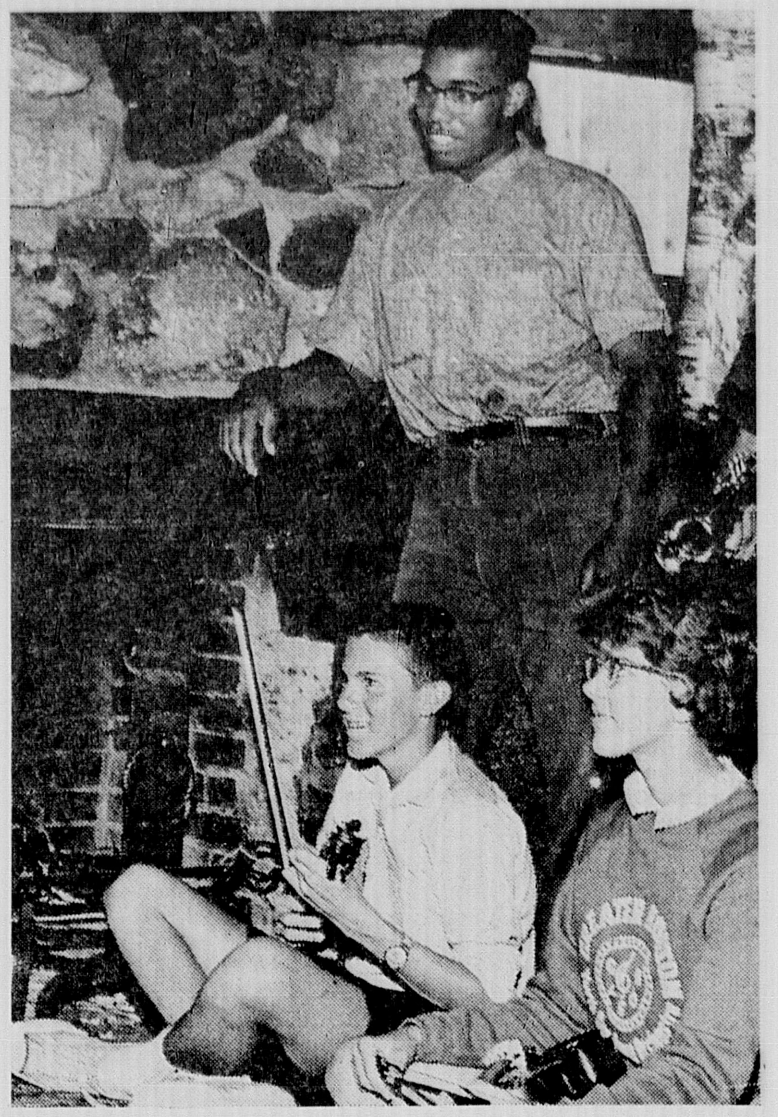
The Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra Opens Its 1963-64 Season



MUSICIANS' FIRESIDE CHAT: Teenagers in the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra take a break during a workshop at Boston University's Sargent Camp to chat with their conductor. Seated are Winchester High School students Robert Wilson, violin, and Brenda Baker, viola. Standing is Gregory Alexander of Medford, who plays the string bass. Not shown is Lance Grenzeback, who plays the French horn.

The 1963-64 performing season of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra will begin Saturday, December 28, with an informal concert and Alumni Day celebration at Boston University.

The teen symphony, made up of 114 junior and senior high school players from some 50 Boston suburbs and towns, will also give an open rehearsal at Boston University's Sargent Gymnasium on January 5; and will perform major concerts at Lowell on February 15, and at Concord, New Hampshire on April 18 and 19.

The annual Jordan Hall Concert of the orchestra will be on Sunday, April 26. Additional performances are to be announced, according to GBYSO Conductor Marvin Rabin, associate professor of music at the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts.

The Symphony will also be heard on radio this season, in a 13-program series to be aired by WXHR (90.9 on the FM dial) on alternate Tuesdays from 9 to 10 p.m. This series, which will be sponsored by the gas utilities industry, starts January 7, 1964, and runs through June 23.

Founded in 1958 under Professor Rabin's direction, the nonprofit Youth Symphony is a joint project of the Greater Boston junior and senior high school music directors, the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts, and a community-wide board of directors.

In its short history, the Orchestra's high point was a concert on the White House lawn on April 16, 1962, for the late President and Mrs. John F. Kennedy. The Orchestra traveled to Washington and New York, that Holy Week, with the support of local Greater Boston contributors, to honor the first family and later to salute UNESCO with a concert for U. N. guests at Carnegie Hall.

The President's address in praise of the youngsters, and the community's increased awareness of the Orchestra created by that trip, were a turning point in the fledgling symphony's development.

This year, the number of 12 to 18-year-olds applying for admission to the orchestra increased so markedly that a "sister orchestra" was formed especially for the younger players in seventh through tenth grades. The 90-member Junior Youth Symphony will have a separate performance schedule of its own, under the leadership of Dr. Artin Arslanian of Watertown, associate professor at the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts.

Both symphonies' members are chosen by a strict audition system, with the approval of each student's school music director required. Before the start of the season each year, they attend workshops such as the recent week-long study session at Boston University's Sargent Camp in Peterborough, New Hampshire. At the workshops, visiting coaches from musical organizations all over the country join the regular staff of Boston University faculty members and graduate students who coach at the weekly Saturday rehearsals throughout the year.

The youngsters have their own governing council with some unusual rules such as the "challenge" system. Any member who feels his playing is better than that of a colleague in a higher chair can challenge his colleague to compete with him before judges, and the better performer wins the higher position. This allows for individual progress by the youngsters to be recognized throughout the year, Professor Rabin points out.

In addition to performing in the Youth Symphony, each youngster must continue to play in his own school band or orchestra, Professor Rabin added, so that the players' schools are not drained of their best talent, but in fact gain from the wider experience of these players.

The Youth Symphony's chief goal is to stimulate interest in music throughout the Greater Boston schools, and to assist the communities through its free concerts and benefits which help buy instruments or provide scholarships. Public, private and parochial schools alike are participants in the Youth Symphony.

Another major goal is to encourage the writing and performance of new music, such as the compositions commissioned from time to time by the GBYSO. This system not only gives young American composers a hearing, Professor Rabin said, but widens the musical world of the performers and their audiences.

As a nonprofit institution, the Youth Symphony receives its support from a variety of sources, including public donations as well as the donation of services and facilities of Boston University.

Winchester players include: Brenda Baker, viola, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James G. Baker of 7 Grove Street; Lance R. Grenzeback, French horn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Grenzeback of 16 Mason Street; Robert Wilson, violin, son of Dr. and Mrs. William L. Wilson of 8 Oneida Road.

Administrations Of 200 Schools Meet in Boston

The New England Council for the Advancement of School Administration will hold its annual meeting today, at the George Sherman Union of Boston University. More than 200 participants, including school principals, superintendents, school committee members, legislators, representatives of state departments of education, and college and university personnel concerned with the training of school administrators, are expected to attend.

At the morning session reports were presented on the internship program, in which prospective school administrators receive on-the-job training. Former interns, supervisors, and others who have worked closely with the program, described its operation. Father Charles F. Donovan, S. J., vice president for Academic Affairs and dean of the School of Education at Boston College, presided.

The afternoon program will feature a panel discussion of Dr. James B. Conant's recent report on teacher training, and its implications for the preparation of school administrators. Scheduled panelists are: President William C. Gaige, Rhode Island College; President James Coles, Bowdoin College; James LeSure, consultant on Teacher Certification, Connecticut Department of Education; and William Robinson, Jr., commissioner of Education for Rhode Island.

NECASA, the nation's first regional program for improving the education on school superintendents and principals, was established in 1961 under the auspices of the New England Board of Higher Education in Winchester.

Peace Corps Has 6000 Assignments

The Peace Corps has announced that Saturday, December 7 is the last opportunity this year to take the Placement Test and qualify for the spring training programs. The non-competitive aptitude tests will be administered at about 860 locations (post offices and other federal buildings) in principal cities throughout the United States, beginning at 8:30 a.m.

For most applicants, the Placement Test will take about one and one-half hours. Those who claim a knowledge of Spanish or French will be asked to take an additional one-hour language achievement test.

To become a Volunteer, an applicant must not only take the test but submit a Peace Corps Questionnaire. Those who have not done so will be asked to complete one immediately after the testing. No applicant may take the test for a second time without special authority from the Peace Corps.

There are no passing or failing marks on the Placement Test. The scores are used, along with other criteria, to aid in the selection process. They help the Peace Corps to place prospective Volunteers in the most appropriate overseas assignments. The Placement Test consists of a 30-minute general aptitude test and another of the same length on modern language aptitude. (No knowledge of a foreign language is required.)

Over 6,000 new opportunities in the Peace Corps are now open in Africa, Asia and Latin America. India is asking for nurses, Thailand for English teachers, Turkey for social workers, Gabon for carpenters, Brazil wants more community development workers. Dozens of countries are asking the Peace Corps for Volunteers for hundreds of different jobs—especially in fields of engineering, agriculture, health, construction, and education.

Liberal arts college graduates, and others with no special "skills," have been found highly useful overseas in the fields of teaching and community development programs. A college education is not required. To qualify to take the Placement Test applicants must be American citizens at least 18 years old. Married couples are eligible if both qualify and have no dependents under 18.

The nearest examination center will be at Brighton High School, 25 Warren Street, Brighton, (Boston).

Week at a glance appointment books showing day and time schedules. Excellent for professional people. At the Winchester Star.

Washington School To Hold Christmas Bazaar

The George Washington School will hold a Christmas bazaar open to the public on December 5, at 3:15 p.m. in the school auditorium. "Frosty's Fair" is the theme of the bazaar and Frosty the Snowman himself will be there to greet all the children.

Mothers are welcome to come and bring their children to do their family Christmas shopping. There will be tables filled with suitable gifts for mother, father, and baby; tables of aprons, books, jewelry, international foods, Christmas decorations, white elephants, toys, and boots, shoes, and rubbers. Two gypsy fortune tellers will be open for business and refreshments will be available.

Prizes will be given to five lucky children! One prize is a set of leather hockey gloves, donated by Winchester Sport Shop. Another prize will be a boy's or girl's Timex wrist watch. Two more prizes are Dumbo, the stuffed elephant, and a Barbie doll with wardrobe and case. The Winchester Toy and Hobby Shop has donated The Gallery Water Colors and the boy or girl who wins will also receive a Japanese Paper Folding Set.

It is suggested that the children bring a shopping bag, as the variety of gifts will be tempting and priced very low.

Mrs. William Garcelon and Mrs. Paul Roche, co-chairmen of the ways and means committee have been working hard on the preparations for this event for several months. Their committee includes Mrs. Ralph Norton, Mrs. Nicholas Vallas, Mrs. George Handler, Mrs. Hubert Ferber, Mrs. Carl Basso, Mrs. Cecil Abbot, Mrs. David Edwards, Mrs. Alvaro Tirani, Mrs. Richard Lawrance, Mrs. Walter Johnson, Mrs. Samuel Jones, Mrs. William Tunnicliffe, Mrs. John Barcus, and Mrs. Elizabeth Henriques.

Franklin Flahive Installed as V.P. Of Holy Name

Franklin G. Flahive, of 995 Main Street, was installed for a two-year term as vice president of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies at its nineteenth annual Officers' Convention in the Hotel Bradford, Boston, Sunday, November 24.

The Archdiocesan Union is composed of over 375 parish Holy Name Societies in sixteen Districts throughout the Archdiocese of Boston. Enrolled membership is about 90,000 Catholic men.

Mr. Flahive was installed by Rev. Gerald B. Horgan, spiritual director of Immaculate Conception Holy Name Society, Winchester-Woburn.

Over 600 priest-spiritual directors, officers, and members, all leaders of the society, participated in the event, highlights of which included the recitation of the Rosary for President Kennedy during a procession from the hotel to Holy Trinity Church and an address by Attorney Edward B. Hanify of Belmont.

Except for prayers for the President, the installation, and the address, the business of the convention was dispensed with. Mr. Hanify had planned to speak on "The Lay Apostolate," but changed his text to meet the solemnity under which the convention was held. "The man of Massachusetts," he said, "born and bred in our midst, moving from our community to the most powerful office in this world, was a lay apostle."

Mr. Flahive, the new archdiocesan vice president has been active in Holy Name and other local parish work for many years. He is a past president of Immaculate Conception Holy Name Society, Winchester-Woburn, and has been a member of the society's Executive Board for 16 years. He was a member of the Archdiocesan Holy Name Society Choral Society while it was in existence from 1947 until 1952. He has served on the Woburn Holy Name Society District Board for three years before being appointed Archdiocesan Program chairman in 1958. He was elected for a two year term as Archdiocesan secretary in 1959 and has just completed a term as Archdiocesan treasurer.

Norwegian Glee Club At Methodist Church

The Couples Club and the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church will be entertained on Thursday evening, December 12, by the Norwegian Glee Club of Boston. This is a musical organization of some thirty male voices under the direction of Mr. William Andersen. An excellent program of Scandinavian and American songs will be presented.

This will be a joint meeting of the Couples Club and Woman's Society at the Christmas season. There will be a social period from 6:30 to 7:00 p.m. A catered dinner will be served at seven. Reservations will be necessary.

Miss Molly Hodge will conduct a devotional program prior to the Glee Club concert. It is expected that this will be one of the most delightful events of the church year.

League Meeting To Hear Talk By Dr. Palubinskas

Dr. Alice L. Palubinskas will be the guest speaker at a general meeting of the League of Women Voters, Wednesday, December 11, at the home of Mrs. John J. Mahoney, 8 Everett Avenue. She will discuss the Citizens' Advisory Committee on Secondary School-College Relations, which was set up six years ago by the Winchester School Committee to assist in keeping up with the modern trends and development in secondary education.

Dr. Palubinskas, a past chairman of this committee, is an associate professor of Psychology at Tufts University. She received her doctorate from Iowa State University.

Coffee will be served at 2:30 p.m. The meeting will begin at 3:00. Anyone interested in attending this meeting, whether or not she is a member of the League, may get further information by calling Mrs. William MacKenzie, (729-0394).

Tufts Honors Late President With New Award

Tufts University has created an annual award honoring the memory and the career of the late President, John F. Kennedy. Announcement of the establishment of the award was made by Nils Y. Wessell, president of Tufts.

Known as the John Fitzgerald Kennedy medal, the award was authorized today by special action of the Tufts board of trustees.

The medal will be given beginning in 1964 at a special convocation to an individual "who during the previous year has shown by deed an unusual degree of moral courage and high principle.' In addition, a cash award of $1000 will be made to each recipient of the medal.

According to Dr. Wessell, the award "was established in memory of an honorary son of Tufts who served the world." Dr. Wessell added that the University hoped to hold the first special convocation to award the medal in the spring of 1964.

A jury of distinguished Americans will select the winner of the award. Composition of the jury will be announced in January.

President Kennedy was awarded an honorary degree by Tufts and served as a member of the board of visitors of the Tufts' Fletcher School.

Federal Grant-In-Aid Programs– A Mixed Blessing

Federal grant-in-aid programs to State and local government, private institutions and individuals in fiscal year 1962 topped $10 billion, a $6 billion increase since 1953. This means that roughly 1/10 of the total Federal taxes collected in that year was returned directly to our local areas through some 110 grant-in-aid programs.

How much did this — our own money — cost us? Of the total 1962 Federal tax collections of $93.1 billion, Massachusetts paid in over $2.6 billion—2.86% of the total. Of the $10 billion grant-in-aid funds for that year, we received over $289 million or 2.79%. Thus on the average, Massachusetts received roughly the same percentage of return of funds from these programs as we sent to the Treasury in tax revenues.

Federal aid has become a major factor in recent years in financing a large number of our State and local government functions. This grant system dates back to the Morrill Act in 1862 which established the land grant colleges and instituted certain federally required minimum standards similar to the present grants-in-aid. Federal aid was later extended to agriculture, highways, vocational rehabilitation, forestry, and public health, to name a few. In the depression years, Federal aid was greatly expanded to meet social welfare needs.

What a contrast this is to early days of settlement in New England. In Plymouth the Pilgrims set up their government to do three things: protect from external enemies, protect from internal enemies, and collect the taxes to pay for both. Later other services were added, and in discussing all these programs it is important to remember that many State activities were the forerunners of our present Federal grants-in-aid.

There are many reasons for the initiation and growth of aid programs. First, and perhaps foremost, is the complexity of society which has come with the industrialization and urbanization of American life. Many of its problems cross geographical and State boundaries, involve the expenditure of large sums of money, and are often most pressing in areas of meager tax resources.

When a Federal aid program is established, it usually is because of the seriousness of the problem and the inability of private organizations and individuals or local authorities to cope with it. Before Federal aid programs are adopted by Congress the national character of the problem and the Federal interest and concern must be clearly evident.

The largest Federal grant programs cover highways, public assistance, unemployment insurance, public health research and services, food distribution, and education. The major increases over the past several years have gone to highways, public assistance, education programs, civil defense, distribution of surplus food through state programs, and the housing and community development programs.

The allocation of Federal funds between the states for these programs is generally set by law. These formulas, which determine how much each state will get, vary greatly from one program to the next. For example, under the interstate highway program, the Federal Government contributes 90% of the construction cost of a road designated as part of the interstate system and requires the State to put up only 10%. This high Federal contribution was proposed in order to develop an interstate system primarily for national defense purposes. Other measures of need are based on either the total population or a special part of it (such as children) combined with a measure of financial capacity of the State, usually per capita income. We find that where per capita income is used in measurement, the Massachusetts cost is higher than in some other States because our per capita income is still above average.

Massachusetts State and local governments, private institutions and individuals participate in 92 of the 110 grant-in-aid programs. In fiscal year 1962 our State and local governments were allocated over $200 million, and individuals and private institutions received an additional $89 million in Federal funds. For instance, total public assistance expenditures in Massachusetts for old age assistance, medical assistance for the aged, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled were over $171 million in 1962. Of this amount $84 million (49.2%) was Federal money and $87 million (50.8%) was non-Federal money.

Under the old age assistance program, we find that Massachusetts' share of the Federal funds distributed was 2.8% which compares favorably to our tax contribution of 2.98%. Under the Federal-aid-to-airports program, our share is 3.03%; for construction and operation of schools in Federally impacted areas, the share is 3.23%. On the other hand, we received 9.24% of the total Federal civil defense expenditure, considerably higher than our Federal tax input percentage. To take a low example, we receive only .65% of the Federal cooperative agriculture extension money.

Massachusetts ranks high in Federal funds distributed for medical and scientific research to individuals and private institutions. In 1962 our state received the largest amount for National Science Foundation research grants and fellowship awards. We were second in arthritis and metabolic disease research activities (13.8% share compared to 2.98% tax input).

Not included in any of these Federal grant-in-aid program figures, and extremely difficult to calculate, is the sizable overhead costs of our Federal Government.

The Federal grant-in-aid program has made it possible to develop many programs to meet the social and economic needs of our complex society. Although I do not think that anyone would question what these programs are trying to accomplish, in many instances where both State and Federal funds are required, the states themselves are not able or do not choose to provide their financial share. This is why our interstate highway program, for example, has proceeded more rapidly in some states than in others. In Massachusetts we have not used our full Federal allocation of funds in some programs because the full State share was not made available.

The above outlines some of the advantages and problems of Federal-State grant-in-aid programs. On the one hand they are an attempt to have the wealthy states help states which are less well-off to handle problems that are often essentially local in character. On the other hand they often bring with them Federal controls which we as independent states and citizens sometimes find burdensome. Where the Federal regulations improve the administration of a program, we are grateful, but when they interfere, we are not. I well remember when I was Governor of Massachusetts being told in one particular instance, "Do it this, way, or else you won't get the funds." I resented this, for I felt that as Governor it was my responsibility to administer the State's program and that it was basically our money coming back to us.

Whether we take the Federal money or not we still must pay the taxes which support it. This can mean that a State stretches its own budget to match a Federal program where it otherwise might spend the money on a program it considers more useful. Its alternative can be to see the allocation expire uncollected but still paid for. We cannot carry on the national defense, or the space effort, or a coordinated major research program alone, but we can and must take care of our local problems, or see control of them pass from our hands while we continue to pay for them.

Holy Name Turkey Festival

Don't forget that the St. Mary's Holy Name turkey festival is to be held on next Wednesday evening, December 11 at 8:30 at St. Mary's Hall.

The program committee under the co-chairmanship of Gregory Sacca and Leo Roche, anticipate a large audience coming to spend an evening of suspense, anxiety and satisfaction. Those who have attended before are anxiously awaiting its return and for those who have not, this should be a must!

There are to be more than one hundred and sixty items to be awarded! You could very well be the recipient of one and even more and with Christmas just around the corner it could come in handy.

The proceeds of this annual function is to raise money to assist in giving some boys and girls the opportunity to gain a college education. What better way could you help! The number of boys and girls receiving such needed aid depends on your response to this festival.

We of the committee, and Father Martin Dolphin, the spiritual director, will be looking for you and your friends and neighbors.

If you do not have tickets you may purchase them at the door for a very nominal fee and after your admittance the rest is entirely up to you. The admittance ticket may be a lucky one, so come on down and try us out. We are sure you won't regret it.

Besides co-chairmen Gregory Sacca and Leo Roche, the program committee comprises Fred Fiumara, Frank Antonuccio, John MacDonald, Frank Provinzano, Richard Hines, Vito Giarizzo, James Henry, John Looney, Bernard Delorey, Vincent Erhard, Ed Sanford, George Ross, Ernest Cantella, Hugh Fay, Robert Costello, Gene Rotondi and John Fitzgerald.

Will be seeing you at St. Mary's Hall on Wednesday, December 11 at 8:30 p.m.

Xmas Program At Fortnightly

The Fortnightly will meet Monday, December 9 in Gifford Hall, Crawford Memorial Methodist Church. Refreshments to be served at one o'clock by Mrs. John S. Ahern, the social hostess.

The president, Mrs. Herbert D. Thompson will preside at the business meeting scheduled for two o'clock. The guest of honor will be Mrs. Phillip Bellamy, eighth district director of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Harold Given will introduce the speaker, Anne Tibbetts, who will present her pictures on "Christmas Holiday Abroad."

Brass Quartette Joins Choirs For Unitarian Music

As in past years the Winchester Unitarian Church under the direction of Mary Ranton Witham will present a series of pre-service choral programs on Sundays through December. These programs are from the great Sacred Oratorios and as the season nears Christmas, carols, unusual and from many lands, are sung by the choir and the male choir.

The choir altered its previously planned program on November 24 to memorialize our late martyred President John Fitzgerald Kennedy and sang in memoria three selections from the Brahms Requiem, "Blessed They Who Mourn," "Ye Who Are Sorrowful," and "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place." The Downs Memorial Carillon was played in memoriam on Sunday, November 24, and on Monday, November 25.

On the Sundays, December 8, 15, and 22, these pre-service programs will be proceeded by a brass quartette who will play traditional carols. The members of this group are: Peter Moulton and John Burrows, trumpets; Lance Grenzeback, French horn; and Robert Eddy, trombone.

The choral and instrumental music to be played on December 8 begins at 10:30 a.m. with the carillon playing "Joy to the World," "Gloria in Excelsis" and "Good Christian Men Rejoice." At 10:40 the brass quartette will play "O Come All Ye Faithful," "The First Noel" and the choir will sing from Handel's "Messiah," "And the Glory of the Lord," "For Unto Us a Child Is Born" and "Comfort Ye," with William Jeffrey, soloist. The male choir will do "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" and the folk song, "Cradle Song of the Shepherds."

The first anthem will be "Gesu Bambino," the second, "Christus Hodie Natus Est" and the postlude will be the "Hallelujah Chorus" from the "Messiah."

The regular monthly meeting was held on Monday evening and Venerable Bob Fiore had the pleasure of initiating seven new members. Santo DiPietro, Angelo Mastiorillo, Jaspar Cammarata, Gerald Esposito, Armand Tano, Richard Lowe and Ugo Macchia were heartily welcomed and were sworn in.

The social night went off with a bang last Saturday and chairman Dom Provinzano announced that the next one will be on Saturday, December 21, a change from the usual last Saturday of the month.

Chairman Art Dunbar has announced that the annual children's Christmas party, sponsored by the lodge, will be held on Sunday, December 22 at 2:00 p.m. at the club hall on Swanton Street. Members are urged to register their youngsters (under 10 yrs.) who are to receive gifts from Santa. Make these registrations with Art Dunbar, Frank Dattilo, Nick Ronzio, Joe Paonessa, Pat Bruno and John Paonessa.

The program and entertainment committee have made plans for the lodge's New Year's eve party. The fee is extremely nominal and dancing will take place from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Deadline for tickets is December 15 and you are urged to call on Randy Kazazian, Joe Paonessa, Carl Bertolucci, Frank Provinzano, Mel Fiore, Greg Sacca, Bob Fiore, Frank Antonuccio or Carl Bertolucci.

Financial secretary Frank Dattilo reminds all that dues, are due, and that he is anxious to hear from a certain few.

Chairmen of the Blood Donor program, Richard Penta and Tony Melaragni have arranged for an annual blood drive on Monday, January 20 at the Swanton Street club house. The hours are between 1 and 7 p.m. and if you aren't sure whether you can give this life-preserving fluid, the medical corps on hand will help you decide. We had an excellent showing last year so let's make this even bigger. Everyone and anyone may give!

The sports committee under chairman Dick Tofuri are going full steam ahead in making plans for the annual sports night which will be held on Sunday, January 19. Awards will be presented to members of the champion softball team and the crowned champions of the lodge's golf league. The bowling banquet will be held at a later date.

The lodge's Boy Scout troop has climbed to a membership of 52 and is led by Bob Fiore, Norman Doucette, Randy Kazazian, Mel Fiore, Bill Maggio and Tony DeLuca.

There are important dates in this column, so cut it out and use it for future reference.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
p	1 S	p	4 NT
p	5 D	p	6 H

Our bidding was designed to give away as little information as possible on the way to the best ultimate contract (6 NT by North has no chance against East's fairly obvious diamond lead). Looking at the cards, one would be inclined to say "good board," since the contract can neither be set nor make an overtrick, and since anyone playing it in either spades or clubs would be in for some unpleasant surprises.

Our unpleasant surprise, as it turned out, was that electronic brain Johnson put his computer to work and decided to bid 7 diamonds, noting that down 7 tricks doubled (1,300 points) would be better for his side than letting us make a vulnerable slam (1,430 points).

One might grumble bitterly to the effect that East, holding the king on the "safe side" of North's spade bid and inferring - also from the bidding - that West must have an ace, should have reasonable hopes of setting the six heart bid. One NS, in fact was actually doubled in 6 H (which naturally made and produced a clear top).

Peace Corps Reappraisal

With the first two-year tour of duty drawing to a close for more than 700 Peace Corps Volunteers, the House Foreign Affairs Commitee has just completed a review of the Corps' activities to date and its prospects for the future.

Last week, by an overwhelming bi-partisan vote, the House approved a Peace Corps budget which will enable the United States to field more than 11,000 Volunteers in the less developed countries. Many members remarked during the debate on the House floor that their initial skepticism regarding the Peace Corps has changed to wholehearted support as they have watched the Corps in action for the last two years.

Peace Corps Volunteers now serve in forty-six countries in Africa, Latin America, the Far East, and the Near East and South Asia. The approval and praise which have greeted Peace Corps efforts has mounted steadily. Perhaps the most moving citation the Volunteers have received came from the Philippine Government when it awarded the Corps the Magsaysay Award—often referred to as the Asian Nobel Prize. The citation read in part: "In reaffirming the essential community of interest of all ordinary people, regardless of creed or nationality, the Peace Corps Volunteers belong to that small but growing fraternity who by their individual efforts do make a difference." This confirmation of the value of the traditional American reliance on individual effort has produced countless concrete benefits for the people of the host countries.

Progress Through Cooperation

Peace Corps Volunteers in Tanganyika, for example, helped build a network of farm-to-market roads, mapped 7,500 miles of land for mineral survey and helped construct harbors, bridges and drainage systems. The only trained psychiatric nurse in Pakistan is a Peace Corps Volunteer, who has asked to extend her two-year tour of duty at a hospital in Lahore. Community development workers in Venezuela are helping underprivileged children to raise their sights and aspire to education and a better life. In Thailand, laboratory technicians provide the skills necessary to proper medical diagnoses in 15 proverbial hospitals. These are just a few of the difficult assignments carried out by American Volunteers of all ages and skills.

Efficient Administration

An economy-minded Congress complimented the Peace Corps on its efficient handling of funds. Last year, the Corps returned a surplus to the Treasury. In addition, the agency has lowered its administrative costs at the same time as it has expanded its services to Volunteers in the field. The legislation approved by the House provides increased funds for language training, and encourages a program of vocational counselling for returning Volunteers. The valuable experience gained in the Peace Corps is now being applied to tasks in the State Department, the United States Information Agency, private foundations, and many underprivileged areas of our own country.

International Impact

The Peace Corps idea has caught on. All over the world, nations are developing or considering the formation of their own Corps of Volunteers. The amendments to the Peace Corps Act permit the United States to encourage and assist other countries in establishing programs through which their citizens can volunteer to help meet the needs of less developed countries. Congressional support for the Peace Corps after two years of experience reflects once again the value and effectiveness of people-to-people programs in our total foreign policy effort.

Baptist Hospital Re-Elects Three Here to Board

Edward V. French of 2 Ledgewood Road, Cyril S. Hart of 5 Myopia Hill Road and J. Irving Rawding of 29 Hutchinson Road, were re-elected to the governing corporation of the New England Baptist Hospital, at its 70th annual dinner meeting last night, held at the hospital, Parker Hill, Boston.

They heard Stanley M. Lane of Wellesley, who was re-elected president, report that the hospital served 7,118 patients during the year including those coming from 36 foreign countries.

NE Manufacturers' Capital Outlays Is $664 Million

New England manufacturers now expect they will have spent $666,000,000 for new plant and equipment during 1963, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

This is an increase of 5.5 percent over the amount spent last year, the bank added, and represents a slight upward revision of last spring's estimate.

The report said that replacement and modernization of existing facilities will continue to dominate capital spending plans.

The bank study, based on a recent survey of 209 regional manufacturing firms accounting for 12 percent of the region's manufacturing employment, noted that durable goods manufacturers have increased their 1963 capital spending plans by 3 percent, and now expect to spend 5 percent more than last year.

The nondurable goods group, lowering their earlier plans a little, now expect 1963 outlays to be 6 percent above 1962 levels.

New plant expenditures are expected to be 15 percent below the amount spent in 1962. The small upward revision in spending plans is entirely accounted for by additional outlays for machinery and equipment, the bank said.

Tentative plans for 1964 now indicate that capital spending will be at a level 8.5 percent lower than in 1963, although this is subject to considerable revision. Machinery and equipment outlays will be maintained near 1963 levels in both the durable and non-durable sectors, the study showed, while plant outlays are expected to be severely reduced. Total plant spending in 1964, as now foreseen, is estimated at more than a third below 1963, with durable goods industries cutting back by more than a fourth and nondurables by more than half.

Carol Singing On the Common

Once again this year on Christmas Eve, commencing at 7 o'clock, The Fortnightly Woman's Club will sponsor its annual carol sing on the Common. This is the 38th year that the Fortnightly has sponsored this carol singing.

Mary Ranton Witham, organist and choir director at the Unitarian Church will direct the carol singing accompanied by a brass ensemble.

If you haven't participated in a Carol Sing on the Common, this would be a good year to begin a custom we predict you will find rewarding enough to continue from year to year.

Whole families have enjoyed being together at the lighted tree and singing the old familiar carols with all their tradition and appeal.

Gathering on the historic Common, singing the old songs, rubbing elbows with friends, old and new, what better way is there to start the Christmas holidays. Try it! You will be glad you did!

Second Year's Program Active For Young Adults

Early in the spring of 1962 a group of single young adults in the Winchester area met and formed the Christian Crossroads Club, an organization formed for the purpose of offering opportunities to serve and to exchange views and ideas through a variety of programs, projects, and social activities.

Its aim is to promote Christian unity by encouraging members to participate actively while combining their interests and efforts for a better understanding of the world around us. Although the Club has found a very comfortable home at the First Baptist Church, its membership is non-denominational.

The Club is governed by a group of officers elected for a one-year term. The present officers are: Alan Murphy of Lexington, president; Carol Richburg of Winchester, secretary; Carolyn Otis of Winchester, treasurer; Carol Santurjian of Belmont, refreshment chairman; Barbara Croft of Winchester, publicity chairman; James Lang of Winchester, guest greeter; and Pat Hogue, formerly of Iowa, advisor.

The Sunday evening programs of the Club are varied continuously. They have included speakers on Massachusetts government, religious drama, Communist Party U.S.A., Project Hope, and a series on preparation for marriage. Future programs will include the Restoration of Williamsburg, How to Study the Bible, the life of a surgeon during the Civil War, and Great Religions of the World. A social event is planned for each month. Coming up is a Christmas card cutting party, a progressive dinner, and a dance party.

The Club meets every second and fourth Sunday evening of the month at 8 p.m. in the social hall of the First Baptist Church located at the corner of Mt. Vernon and Washington Streets, Winchester. All single young adults in and around Winchester are urged to join in Sunday evenings of food, fun, and fellowship.

Red Cross First Aid Course Ends, Another Planned

Eleven local residents recently completed a ten hour Red Cross Standard First Aid course under the instructorship of Gerald Y. Hills and assisted by Mrs. Robert W. Sproul.

Receiving their official Red Cross certificates for their hours of study and practical application of first aid techniques were Mrs. Lorraine Bingel, Mrs. Susan R. Breckenridge, Mrs. Harriet Carter (Woburn), Mrs. Barbara Keyes, Mr. Edward McDavitt, Mr. Stanley Roberts, Mrs. Hazel von Rosenvinge, Mrs. Joan M. Stevenson, Mr. John A. Stevenson, Mrs. Shirley A. Tamulynas (Burlington), and Mrs. Margaret M. Wood.

The Winchester Red Cross plans to offer an Advanced First Aid course sometime in the spring of next year, if interest in the course warrants it being given.

Local Educators Hear Galbraith, Keppel at NEACS

Mother Elizabeth Farragher, R.C.E., Marycliff Academy, and W. Howard Niblock, principal of the High School, will represent their schools at the 78th annual meeting of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to be held tomorrow at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, Boston.

Dana M. Cotton, of 49 Yale Street, secretary of the Harvard School of Education, is secretary-treasurer of the group.

In addition, Don A. Orton, of 6 Wincrest Drive, president of Lesley College, and former residents John U. Monro, dean of Harvard College, and Leonard C. Mead, vice-prefect of Tufts University, are among the educators from all over the area representing some 800 colleges and public, private and parochial schools at the meeting.

Francis Keppel, U. S. Education Commissioner, John Kenneth Galbraith, Harvard economist and former ambassador to India and Hodding Carter, publisher, will all address the group.

"Is a Growing Emphasis on Intellectual Competence Obscuring the Development of Social Conscience?" will be the subject of a discussion led by John S. Dickey, president of Dartmouth College, and William C. Fels, president of Bennington College.

Winchester College Club

The Art Study Group of the Winchester College Club will visit the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln on Friday morning, December 13, at 10:30.

On display is one of New England's finest private collections of American paintings, that of William H. Lane of Leominster. This collection includes paintings by most of the best-known American artists of the late 19th and 20th centuries.

The museum has also borrowed 32 prints from the Wiggin Collection of the Boston Public Library, representing art of the depression years. The familiar names of artists were listed in the November 21 issue of the Winchester Star. A member of the museum staff will discuss the pictures, the artists and their place and importance in American Art.

The DeCordova Museum is located west of Lincoln Center, above Sandy Pond. The signs from Lincoln are easy to follow and the roads are very well sanded. If any one wishes transportation, call Mrs. Waldo Lyon, PA 9-2246. Guests are welcome to join the group.

"God the Only Cause and Creator" is the subject of this Sunday's Bible Lesson to be read at all Christian Science church services.

God's government of the universe and all mankind will be emphasized in many of the readings, including this Bible verse: "For the kingdom is the Lord's: and he is the governor among the nations" (Psalms 22:28).

A corresponding passage from the Christian Science textbook reads: "When man is governed by God, the ever-present Mind who understands all things, man knows that with God all things are possible" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 180).

A CHANCE TO HELP

Many elderly and infirm persons, as well as those with small children and limited means, need help at Christmas if this holiday is to be a happy occasion in accordance with the American tradition.

To help out our less fortunate Winchester friends during the holiday season, gifts of money, food and clothing are earnestly solicited.

Gifts may be sent to the Winchester Community Relief Committee.

Jehovah's Witness Group Introduces A New Minister

Robert S. Jones, presiding minister of the Wilmington Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, which serves the Winchester area, announced today that Mr. M. Krzyzanowski has been appointed as Circuit Servant to the local congregation by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society at Brooklyn, New York, World Headquarters for Jehovah's Witnesses.

Mr. Krzyzanowski will serve as a traveling minister to several congregations in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and parts of Maine, where he will aid local ministers more fully to equip themselves for the ministry, including the house-to-house preaching which Jehovah's Witnesses do in obedience to the example set in the Scriptures, in the Book of Acts 20:20. "Preach publicly and from house to house."

Mr. Krzyzanowski will be with the Wilmington Congregation from December 3 to December 8. The schedule for meetings to be held at Kingdom Hall, Bridge Lane, Wilmington, began this Tuesday. The meeting was followed by Mr. Krzyzanowski's first address to the congregation. On Saturday, December 7 at 8 p.m., there will be a talk and discussion on the subject, "New Things Learned", led by Mr. Krzyzanowski.

The climax of the week's activities will be on Sunday, December 8 at 3 p.m. when a Bible lecture entitled, "Building a Happy Human Family" will be given by Mr. Krzyzanowski. This is a special week of activity for the local congregation and all people of good will are invited to attend.

Secretary Wirtz Deplores Quotas, "Special Care"

Washington, D. C.—Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, addressing the Washington Urban League's Equal Opportunity Day observance, said in part:

"My thinking today is particularly of equal opportunity in the field of employment. This is partly because of the nature of my own responsibilities, and partly because I think the equal right to work is perhaps closest to the surface, if not the heart, of a great many of today's long overdue current demands. Perhaps this is because equality in employment presents some of the hardest problems which lie ahead.

"I mention only a few of the key factors here.

"There will be loss, not gain, from any person's demanding or receiving a job for which he is not qualified.

"Honest and sincere men reach different conclusions about whether previous discrimination warrants preference now, to "even things up" My own strongly held view is that preference could be justified only on an assumption that this is a matter of competition between two sides. It isn't, and there is great importance in avoiding and eliminating any mistaken grouping along color lines. The victims of preference would be individual human beings, and more likely than not today, persons who are themselves opposed to discrimination.

"To think in terms of 'quotas' is again to think in terms of two groups, which is the thing to be avoided. I believe strongly in the necessity of a Federal fair employment practices act, but surely such a law must be written in terms of the absolute of equality, with no exceptions of any kind.

"To believe in equality of opportunity except as it increases competition for one's own job is selfish hypocrisy. Discrimination is no less ugly for its being inspired by self-interest, entirely unrelated to racial prejudice.

"Nor can it be questioned that 'more than equality' is not only justified but is required so far as preparation for opportunity is concerned. There is no unfair hurting of someone else if preference in education is accorded those who have been previously disadvantaged. Here there is only the necessary compensation for the ravages of a century of unfairness."

Mineral Club To Hear Dr. Marvin

The Winchester Children's Mineral Club will have as its speaker Dr. Ursula Marvin of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, Cambridge on Wednesday evening, December 11, at 7:00 p.m., in the Rich Room of the Winchester Public Library. Dr. Marvin, formerly of the faculty of Tufts University's Mineralogy Department, will discuss meteorites. The public is invited.

The public is also reminded that an outstanding figure in geology, Father James W. Skeehan, S.J., of Boston College, will speak to the Winchester Children's Mineral Club on Wednesday, January 8.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

One of America's largest retail and mail order chains made an interesting discovery. They found that people really appreciate high-quality goods, unless subject to sales pressure based on price alone. The average price of carpet sold in stores where its salesmen talked directly with the prospects was about $6.25 per square yard. But the average price of carpet sold through its mail order department was $11.50 per square yard. The salesmen evidently undersold their prospects by emphasizing price.

There's an old saying "You get what you pay for." This holds true with Insurance, as well as carpeting. In our highly competitive business, no one can consistently sell the SAME QUALITY product below the price offered by others. Obviously something must be sacrificed. In the insurance field, usually it's the advice and help which only an INDEPENDENT local agent can give. Don't let discussions of price alone blind you from seeing this fundamental economic truth: "If you pay less, you get less."

The chain store company proved that when people understand the difference in quality, they will pay what it costs to get it. We feel this is true in Insurance too.

Let us explain the "quality difference"—the advantages of a local independent insurance agent to represent you.

N. E. Council Elects Hennessey Vice-President

Thomas M. Hennessey, of 37 Cabot Street, vice president of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, was elected to be vice president of the New England Council at the annual meeting of that group held last week in Boston.

THOMAS M. HENNESSEY

The New England Council, a nonprofit organization, has been in operation for 39 years. It is made up of industrial, business and governmental leaders of the region, and nas a total membership of over 2100.

Dedicated to the economic development of New England, it serves the area through the concerted efforts of its membership, all leaders in their fields. Serving, for instance, on its active and influential Transportation Committee are Herbert E. Bixler, of 31 Fells Road, from the Systems Analysis and Research Corporation, and Robert M. Edgar, of 20 Stowell Road, vice president of the Middlesex County National Bank of Everett and committee chairman.

Mr. Hennessey is a graduate of Harvard (1923). He is a director of the Boston YMCA; a former chairman of the Greater Boston USO campaign; and a former director and vice president of the Winchester Hospital. He is also a former director of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce (chairman of the business and industrial commission).

About Your Social Security

Students, housewives and others planning to work part-time for the holiday season are reminded by the Social Security Administration that you should bring your social security card with you when applying for employment. Then, be sure your employer copies your number correctly. Failure to do this may cause you and your family to lose important benefits.

If you have never had a social security number or have lost your card, you may obtain one by contacting the social security office at 625 Mt. Auburn Street, Cambridge, telephone 491-0700.

Trophy Trout

A 16 pound, 12 ounce brown trout has become the top entry to date in that category of the Massachusetts Freshwater Sportfishing Awards Program.

Mr. Aloysius Stachelek, of 597 Concord Street, Framingham, proud captor of the trophy trout, brought the fish to the Westboro Field Headquarters of the division recently where it was officially weighed and measured.

The fish was 33 inches long and had a girth of 20¼ inches. An advocate of light tackle, Mr. Stachelek reported that he took the fish from Ashland Reservoir, Ashland, with four-pound test spinning line!

Unitarian Women Plan a Special Xmas Program

On Tuesday afternoon, December 10 at two o'clock, members and friends of the Unitarian Alliance will gather in the church auditorium for a special program of Christmas music and dance.

Mary Ranton Witham on the organ and Mary Jane Anderson with the harp will give an unusual program of Christmas music. Dr. Storer will then speak of the Sacred Dance as one of the earliest forms of worship, and of its use and value today in Christian churches.

The members of the Motion Choir, whose director is Mrs. Virginia Huffine, will give their own interpretations of their favorite Christmas carols. The whole program promises to be one of beauty and inspiration. Come and bring your friends. Mrs. Robert Eddy and her committee will serve Christmas tea in the Alliance Room. There will also be a Christmas sale.

Wedgemere Solution May Be In The Wind; Zoning To Be Issue

A full-scale confrontation between the Town and the owners of the Wedgemere Railroad Station took place at the regular Selectmen's meeting in the Town Hall Monday night in an attempt to resolve the long-standing unkempt and lack of maintenance conditions at the depot.

Representing the Town were several concerned boards: the Selectmen, the Planning Board, the Board of Health, and the town counsel. The Boston and Maine Railroad's legal department was also in attendance, as was the present owner of the site, Construction Machinery Corporation.

The meeting of the groups came about as a result of the Board of Health's issuance of an abatement order on Tuesday, November 19, which legally forced compliance by the owner(s) with its earlier directives to have the "health nuisance" there cleaned up. All sides agreed that a mutual meeting might help solve the general problem of the nuisance.

The Board of Health informed the Selectmen that the abatement order had been complied with. "Although the major things requested were done," said Richard Norris, chairman of the Board of Health, "they were done poorly." He qualified his remark by saying that while the health nuisances that formed the basis for the abatement were corrected the station is still in a somewhat messy condition.

The Board of Health had issued abatement orders to both the B&M and Edward F. Conners of 2A Fernway, who is the officer of the Construction Machinery Corporation which purchased the property from the railroad. Neil Holland, general counsel for the B and M, said the railroad left maintenance of the depot up to the purchaser and that the railroad was not responsible for the continuance of the conditions there. Vincent Clarke, Winchester town counsel, agreed and said the liability belonged to Mr. Conners.

Mr. Conners said it cost him about $1500 a year to maintain the depot, and that widespread and recurrent vandalism made it, practic-

LOCAL BUSINESSMEN USING THE EARLY MORNING COMMUTER TRAINS may find the scheduled service greatly reduced and eventually curtailed if the Boston and Maine wins its petition to stop passenger service. If the State or Federal Government doesn't subsidize the money-losing train service, hundreds of businessmen who go between Winchester and Boston every day may have to go back to the inconvenience of car pools or taking buses.

Many Local Commuters Affected If The Railroad Stops Passenger Line

As many astute observers forecasted, the Boston and Maine Railroad finally this week announced that at the conclusion of its contract with the Mass Transportation Commission on January 4, 1964, the Boston and Maine will petition the State Department of Public Utilities for permission to cease its unprofitable passenger line services.

But a follow-up announcement by the B and M and the MTC on Tuesday, notified the thousands of commuters in northern Greater Boston that the B and M will extend their present schedule another 90 days, until the end of March, for the convenience of the passengers and to enable the MTC to try and work some arrangement out with the Railroad, the communities, the Legislature, and all other parties interested in keeping the railroad commuter service running.

After the B and M petitions the D.P.U. for permission to stop passenger service, the D.P.U. has 120 days to consider the proposal. During that time the D.P.U. will hold hearings on the matter, with cities and towns serviced by the line invited to attend. Winchester would probably be represented by the Board of Selectmen and the Winchester Transportation Committee, which was established at the last annual Town Meeting to study local transportation needs and services, and to consider methods of coping with just such a contingency as has now arisen.

The D.P.U., according to informed sources, is likely to allow the B and M to discontinue its passenger service because it is a money losing liability on the Railroad. To force the Railroad to continue its passenger service might jeopardize its very solvency, and a defunct railroad would greatly hurt the Massachusetts and New England economy. During the past decade, with the tremendous increase in truck and air freighting, the Railroad's freight profits have been steadily declining—to the point now where they are near the break-even level. Thus, a money losing venture such as expensive passenger services, is a handicap to the financial operation of the Railroad.

During this time when the D.P.U. would be studying the petition, the B and M would continue its passenger service on its previous, much reduced, 1962 passenger schedules.

If the Railroad is unable to obtain the D.P.U.'s permission, it would then most likely petition the Federal Interstate Commerce Commission. Here again, the I.C.C.'s policies tend to indicate that it would prefer granting the Railroad its petition on the grounds that the region would suffer more by the loss of the Railroad's freighting operations due to a bankruptcy forced on it by a regulatory agency's not allowing it to drop another service which is a large financial drain, than compelling the Railroad to continue its passenger services until it did go bankrupt. The I.C.C. would enter the case on the grounds that the B and M serves not only the New England states, but also serves as a major freight carrier between Boston and Montreal.

The current rash of proposed railroad mergers across the country are a result of declining profits due to losses in passenger opera-

Local Post Office Girds for Heavy Christmas Mailing

The Winchester Post Office staff, headed by Thomas J. Gilgun, postmaster, Alfred Barnard, assistant postmaster, Carl Morse, superintendent of mails and Coleman Foley, carrier foreman, is bucking the pressure of the holiday mails, already about five or six per cent over last year.

To handle the volume, the Post Office has announced the following schedule for pre-Christmas window hours: Today, tomorrow and next week—Monday through Friday—the Post Office will be open from 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturdays, December 14 and 21, the Post Office will open at 7:30 and be open until 5. On Sunday, December 15, and possibly (but not yet scheduled) the following Sunday, the hours will be 12 noon until 5 p.m,

The new mail fusing system, in its third year of use, has resulted in there being fewer extra Christmas time employees to carry the heavier-than-ever-before volume of mail. About 22 temporary sorters and carriers will go on duty next Monday, December 16; but their job is better organized thanks to a card and slot system which facilitates and speeds the process.

Christmas Shoppers Teem In Center Area

The Winchester Center began picking up in pedestrian and vehicular traffic this week as early-bird Christmas shoppers started coming out in force to patronize their local businesses and undertake the large job of fulfilling Christmas gift list orders.

This week's upsurge of activity in the Square stands in sharp contrast to last week's quieter business and social climate, following a near doldrum state two week's ago after the assassination and funeral of the late President Kennedy.

But now that the period of mourning is nearing its end, Christmas conscious shoppers are turning out in large numbers to prepare for the season's gift-giving holiday. Similarly, all the churches are finishing their preparations for special Christmas services, music, programs, and Christmas bazaars or fairs.

All local business establishments have long since been ready to handle a bigger-than-ever Christmas shopping crowd. Several stores are literally overstocked with surpluses in the event some items prove more popular than anticipated...for this is not the time of year to be caught without a size or a model or a kind of item that shoppers want, because it would be well nigh impossible to receive goods from suppliers during this hectic buying month in time for Christmas.

Generally speaking, almost all the stores in the Center are open many more hours during the weeks of this month to handle all the town's customers, and even those who come here from out-of-town to do their shopping. Many are open in the evenings until 8, 8:30, or 9 o'clock for the convenience of those who have to do their shopping after work or after household chores are done.

As an added convenience and in the light of a public service, each year at this time the Winchester Merchants Association, an association of local businessmen which represents some 40 establishments

WHS Won't Go On Double Session; But Needs Space

The Winchester School Committee, in a letter prepared and distributed to the parents of students in grades seven through twelve in answer to a number of queries from citizens disturbed by rumors of the possibility of double sessions in the High School due to heavy enrollments and limited building space, announced last week that there will be no double sessions in the High School.

"At worst," said the report signed by Dr. Richard M. Alt, chairman of the School Committee, "if enrollments should exceed forecasts or if planned changes in the use of rooms should not prove feasible, a staggered schedule might be adopted. Such a schedule would mean that a proportion of the students would enter and leave school an hour ahead of the majority. This would not shorten the school day, nor would it impose the educational losses which result from double sessions."

The notice did go on to say, however, that future crowding at the High School "can be relieved only by building more space." The Permanent Building Committee and the School Committee are cooperating in the planning of additional facilities to maintain high standards of education without overcrowding, the School Committee said, and added that "These facilities should be ready for use not later than September, 1966."

The 1963 annual Town Meeting appropriated $2,500 for the Permanent Building Committee to study the possibility of alterations, expansion or new building to solve the problem of overcrowding at the High School.

Increased Senior High enrollment this year led many parents to ask how pupils will be housed next fall and in the period until additional facilities are available.

According to the school committee, "The educational capacity of the present Senior High building is about 990; current enrollment is 1,094. Forecasts for the next few years are 1,139 in 1964, 1,080 in

Christmas Music, Art, Dance In The Schools

The season of Christmas gives special focus to the creative art and music work in the schools in town, reflecting every related tradition and bringing to the forefront many forms of music and even more of the modern art media.

At this time of year corridors and opening exercises in the elementary schools vibrate with the enthusiasm that is of the season and of the age.

Commencing with the familiar "Christmas at WHS" in the High School auditorium on the evening of December 14 and concluding with the Friday morning Christmas assembly on December 20 at the Lynch School, the semi-public special school programs highlight the homecoming holiday in still another way.

At 8 p.m. this Saturday, the High School curtain will go up on the 90 voice, red robed Mixed Glee Club to open this always moving event. The Girls' Glee Club, 70 voices; the 30 piece orchestra; Girls' Double Sextette (12); Boys' Ensemble (11) and brass choir will also appear during the evening, all under the direction of music director, Wendell S. Withington. They will present music old and new including works of Purcell, Saint-Saens, Bortniansky and carols of many lands.

A substantive part of the same night's program will be the Curtain and Cue annual one-act play, this year under the direction of Miss Patricia Brenner of the faculty. A cast of 12 will put on Thornton Wilder's "The Long Christmas Dinner."

On Tuesday, December 17, at 2 p.m., about 90 children in the 4th and 5th grades at the Mystic School will present a play with musical accompaniment telling of a selfish little princess who learns through "The Christmas Angel" that it is more rewarding to give than to receive. A 70 voice chorus

Petition Reducing Powers Of Council Signed By 125,000

Phase 1 of the citizens initiative petition drive to curb powers of the Executive Council drastically was completed sucessfully last week with the filing of an unprecedented 125,407 valid signatures of registered voters with the Secretary of State.

A minimum of 63,273 certified signatures was required to put the petition before the 1964 Legislature, with not more than 25 percent from any one county. All the signatures had to be certified first by local registrars of voters.

Representatives of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations and other sponsors filed the completed petition forms with the Elections Division three hours before the deadline.

Veteran Election Division officials at the State House said the filing of 125,407 signatures was almost certainly a record for the Commonwealth.

Ronald C. MacKenzie, general chairman of the drive, said in a statement:

"Diverse but civic-minded organizations worked hard and harmoni-

An Old Landmark Of Town History Leaves the Scene

Another landmark of olden times was lost to progress last Thursday when the Asa Locke farm house, barn and other buildings were demolished on Ridge Street. The former ten-room dwelling was a 147 year old structure. It had been the home of John Irwin and family in recent years before his death. They were one of the last families to farm in this town and it is now being broken up for house lots.

A giant power shovel owned by Amico & Co. of Waltham, smashed all the buildings down in a few hours. Friday, the huge piles of broken lumber were set on fire and destroyed.

Asa Locke was one of our most respected citizens during the early days of this town. He was a Civil War veteran and was a member of the second Board of Selectmen after the town was founded. His wife was a teacher in the district school which stood in the 1850's at the corner of High and Ridge Streets.

All eight of his children are now dead. There are four living grandchildren with only one living in town, former Selectman Marshall W. Symmes. Asa Locke's picture hung in the Selectmen's office until recently when the office was redecorated.

Local Travel Agency Moves To New Office

Winchester has received the town's first local travel agency very enthusiastically in its first two years of operation—so well, in fact, that the Kirsten Travel Agency had to move this fall from its 29 Thompson Street location to new and much larger quarters at 34 Church Street.

The Kirsten Travel Agency, which opened its Winchester office in April of 1961, is a complete travel service agency business, making all types of transportation and lodging bookings, and offering travel counselling and itinerary planning services. The agency is a member of the American Society of Travel Agents, a professional association which subscribes to the highest of travel business standards.

The new Church Street office is four times larger than the agency's previous location. Very simple and modern, it has a spacious main front office where Mr. and Mrs Kirsten and three other counsellors work. There is also a private counselling office with maps on the walls. A stereo audio system provides pleasant music for those who enter to browse, make bookings, or plan itineraries. Colorful posters depict far-away places along the panelled walls, and there are racks of brochures and other travel literature around the room. The agency's office also has two large display windows which will be decorated with travel ideas and items to go along with the more popular excursions of the various seasons.

Although the Kirsten Travel Agency has been in Winchester for only two and one-half years, Mark Kirsten has had over 12 years experience in the travel business. Before coming to Winchester, he supervised travel arrangements with the University Travel Company in Cambridge for 10 years.

A native of Europe and a graduate of the Sorbonne in sociology, Mr. Kirsten knows the Continent intimately and is fluent in most of the major European languages. Mr. Kirsten and his wife, Ilona, who also works at the agency, feel that in European travel they are particularly qualified to provide the highest degree of personalized service, including advice on what to see, what to look for, what to do, and, what is sometimes just as important, what to avoid! But the Kirstens have also travelled ex-

Two Youths Rescued On Winter Pond Ice

A potential drowning tragedy was averted at big Winter Pond Saturday morning when an 11-year-old youth who had been skating by himself and who had fallen through the thin ice was rescued from deep water by members of the Winchester Police Department.

A second youth, Paul Soucek, 15, of 12 Ravine Road, also plunged through the ice when he attempted to help the younger Peter Richardson of 17 Cabot Street out of his predicament by extending a hockey stick to him after seeing his plight.

At approximately 8:20 a.m. police were notified of the situation by a Pond Street resident. Officers James Cogan and Douglas Martell were dispatched to the scene, followed by Alfred Poole with the ambulance. Police then called the Fire Department for assistance, and Firefighters Gary Nelson, John Zaffina, and David Dalton rushed to big Winter with the Rescue Truck and a ladder truck carrying a lifeboat.

Police parked the patrol car on Woodside Road, and, seeing the two youths in the water about 100 yards from shore in deep water, the two officers dashed to a point of land behind 18 Dartmouth Street. When Officer Martell started to go out onto the ice he fell through, the two decided to try and use a boat behind 16 Dartmouth Street, but this was filled with ice and water and couldn't be moved. Officer Poole also tried to reach the boys from the roadside shore, but fell through into the icy water himself.

Officer Cogan then borrowed a hockey stick from a boy watching on the shore and started crawling out onto the ice, followed by Officer Martell.

By this time Paul Soucek had managed to climb up out of the water and onto the ice, and headed for the shore.

Officer Cogan, by distributing his weight over a larger area of ice than if he had been standing, was able to reach near where Peter Richardson was struggling to get out of the water without falling in himself.

He extended the hockey stick to Peter Richardson, and with the help of Officer Martell pulling on Officer Cogan's feet, the two were able to haul the youngster out of the water and across the ice.

seated on the floor below the stage will sing background music which will include "Jesu Bambino" and "Angels, We Have Heard On High." Teachers Eileen Hartwell, Julia Pomeroy, Joyce Regan and Patricia Stevens will direct.

A tremendous hand done background mural featuring seven-foot angels ringing bells will distinguish the production of "The Bells of Christmas" to be given at the Noonan School on Wednesday, December 17, at 1:30 p.m. Christmas tableaux with music will be done by grades one through five depicting the use of the bells and the sixth grade will conclude the program with a nativity scene for which its chorus will sing carols including "Lo, How a Rose." All teachers and students are preparing this.

The story of the "Great Walled Country" will be seen and heard at Washington School on Wednesday also at 2 p.m. The charming legend of little Inga, a lass of an imaginary northland near the home of Father Christmas who shows the way of grace and giving to the high and mighty of her land is to be presented. Backgrounds will include the Top Shop of Father Christmas and a lovely Christmas tree scene. The traditional music, done by the sixth grade, will be augmented by a newly introduced African Noel, a piquant Liberian Folk Song. The program is in the hands of teachers Ruth E. Graham and Phiyllis Roberts.

On Thursday at 1:30 at Parkhurst, "The Image of Christmas," by Karin Asbrand, will be presented to the school and guests by the first and second grades, directed by their teachers, Jeannette Eaton Helen Maillon, Jacqueline Quinn and Constance Savard. "Silver Bells" and "Oh Christmas Tree" will be among the songs to be heard accenting the nine tableaux of living pictures of Christmas in the school auditorium.

Next Thursday at 2 p.m. the two sixth grades at the Lincoln School will present "There Was One Who Gave a Lamb," about the little boy who by giving to the Christ child his dearest possession, a lamb, showed the way to the many other wayfarers who could not find him for their own self-centered blindness. It will be directed by teachers Barbara Nicholson and Mary Norris and will be highlighted by the school's instrumentalists playing under John R. Woodworth, music supervisor, playing numbers including the "Cantique de Noel."

All the Wyman School children will take some part when that school presents "The Joys of Christmas," a tableau built around the simple and social pleasures associated with the day - the hanging of holly wreaths, tree ornaments, the lighting of candles and the wrapping and hiding of gifts for loved ones. This is to be given on Friday morning at 10:45 in the auditorium.

On the same day and at the same time the approximately 100 children at the Vinson - Owen School will perform an adaptation of the play "The Bird's Christmas Carol, by Kate D. Williams, under the direction of Mrs. Dorothy Hammond. There will also be verse choirs and choral speaking at this all-school event. And in addition, at Vinson-Owen, each class presenting a play to its neighboring class, which means about 16 more classroom productions.

All the music in the elementary schools is being prepared under the direction of Jeanne Loudon and Natalie Bellows, assisted by the respective class teachers. Art supervisors Virginia Diegleman and Gail Murphy are hard at work supervising the art work which in each class gives frame and setting for the presentations.

The McCall School's "Peace On Earth" is the only presentation to bring the dance form onto the stage at this time. The program is not yet scheduled as of today. In addition to interpretive dance it will feature the orchestra, under John Woodworth; choral singing, under Elaine Grillo; violin and flute solos, choral readings, duets, and brass quartets, with about 200 students participating and the whole school joining in the finale, "O Come All Ye Faithful." The art work here is being directed by Mrs. Frances Houghton.

On the last morning before vacation, Friday, December 20, the Lynch School cafetorium will be the festive setting for its in-school assembly featuring the choral and orchestral groups under Mrs. Caryl Carle and John Woodworth, respectively. A special dramatic skit is being prepared by the Dramatic Club, under Miss Bonnie Levine al-Club, under Miss Bonnie Levine, and art work is directed by Mrs. Helena Hatchell. All singing groups in all grades are practicing special numbers for this, including the French carol, "Pattapan" by the grade seven singers. The orchestral numbers will include "Greensleeves" and "Christmas March."

Christmas vacation commences on Friday noon for all schools and classes in all schools reconvene on Thursday morning, January 2.

State Officers Coming to DAR Chapter Here

The Committee of Safety Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold a meeting on Monday, December 16, at the home of Mrs. Everett F. Kidder, 38 Wildwood Street. Dessert will be served at 1:30 p.m., and a short business meeting wil be held at 2 p.m.

Miss Gertrude A. MacPeak, state regent, and other state officers will be guests of the chapter at this meeting. Christmas will be observed in appropriate fashion including a reception to those state officers attending. A presentation of a sum of money will be made to Miss MacPeak. It is for the reproduction of a room in the Hancock Clark House of Lexington in the association's famous building in Washington.

Lt. P. E. Franson Is Graduated At Monmouth

Lieut. Paul E. Franson of 216 Pond Street was recently graduated from the U. S. Army Signal School at Fort Monmouth after 11 weeks intensive training as a radio officer.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Franson, he was graduated from Northeastern University in 1962, previously attending Winchester High School. He is married to the former Mona Rai Higgins of Babson Park.

A yearly average of 1,500 commissioned officers are graduated from the Signal School's Department of Command Communications, where the emphasis is chiefly upon the design and rapid alteration of battlefield communication systems to meet the requirements of fast-moving combat situations.

Word was received in Winchester yesterday of the sudden death of Sumner T. McCall in Williamsville, Vermont.

Tree Talk

More and more home owners are gathering Christmas trees from foundation plantings and shrubs around the house and garden.

If done wisely and in moderation, Yuletime pruning and snipping of trees and shrubs will greatly improve their appearance.

Dr. Edward J. Duda, director of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratories, suggests starting with correct tools: a sharp knife or sniptype shears, a pair of gloves and pieces of foil to wrap around ends of sticky branches. Cuts should be clean and sharp. Prune when the temperature is above 40 degrees; the wood then will not be brittle.

Keep in mind the contour and symmetry of tree or shrub. Occasionally step back or walk around the tree to view what you have done. Never slash ruthlessly. Snip instead. Cut a branch at a slant to a bud, twig or leaf. Never cut beyond green needles.

Elongated branches may be removed. The removal of every third branch of a pine, spruce or hemlock that has not been pruned for some time may promote better growth. Generally, cutting back a branch 6 to 8 inches will not be missed on firethorn, rhodedendron or yew. Spruces and firs should be cut back in moderation. Holly pruned at Christmas will fill in nicely next year.

Prudent pruning of andromeda, azalea, laurel, euonymus, cotoneaster, cedar and boxwood will yield a surprising amount of greenery. Boxwood, however, should be very lightly snipped. Removal of oldest and largest stems of leucothoe promotes spring growth.

Don't remove all greens for Yule. Leave some to decorate the house all winter long.

Story of The Christmas Card

The Winchester post office will handle more Christmas cards this year than ever before, Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun predicted today while reflecting on the history of the Yule greeting card.

The local post office can not maintain a count on Christmas cards because there's no way of telling which letter envelopes contain cards, but the greeting card industry estimates several billion will be mailed this year during the holiday season.

Based on research by the national Greeting Card Association, the Postmaster gave this account of the background and development of the cards:

"Today, the greeting card industry estimates six billion greeting cards for all occasions are mailed annually in the United States. Statistically, this is estimated at about 110 Christmas cards per family on the average each year.

"We often think of the custom of sending cards as modern, but the origins of the greeting card can be traced back thousands of years.

"The earliest known holiday greeting was printed from a crude woodcut about 1450 in Germany. It shows the Christ Child standing in the bow of an ancient galley manned by angels, with the Holy Mother seated by the mast.

"History reveals people have always had a desire to communicate on a sentimental and emotional basis. For example, the ancient Egyptians conveyed greetings with papyrus scrolls.

"In the Dark Ages, the exchange of symbols, gloves, garters and bows, was regarded as a form of sentimental communication.

"The modern custom of sending greeting cards can be traced back through the centuries to the Chinese who celebrated the advent of the New Year with messages of good will.

"The first-known published Christmas card made its appearance in London, England in 1843. It was designed by John Calcott Horsley, British painter and illustrator of the period.

"In 1846, one thousand copies were lithographed, hand-colored and sold by an art shop.

"It is surprising how similar this first card more than a century ago was to many today. Small panels to the left and right show the charitable acts of 'clothing the poor' and 'feeding the hungry,' always connected with the Christmas season.

"The date of the first American Christmas card is not known, but an American authority on greeting cards. Ernest Dudley Chase of Boston, found what he believed to be the first.

"Authorities say there can be no question but what his discovery, a card which extends 'A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year' from 'Pease's Great Variety Store' is a very early card. Mr. Chase believes it to be the earliest known American card."

Noting that he occasionally hears grumbles that Christmas cards are just "a troublesome new-fangled custom," the Postmaster added, "We can see that sending cards is a very old and honored tradition.

"Actually, I believe most of the complaining comes largely from those who wait until the last minute to get the cards and then try to remember the names and addresses of those to whom they should send them. Sending cards can be a pleasure after a little preparation, having a good mailing list and mailing promptly with ZIP Code on every card."

Traffic Safety

Experienced owners of cars and trucks in this part of the country know there are good reasons for "winterizing" their vehicles every fall, and many of them have already done so.

They see this annual ritual, which involves little expense and only minor, temporary inconvenience for what it is: the best possible insurance against big repair bills and much inconvenience later on.

Chief of Police Joseph J. Derro also has good reasons for reminding Winchester drivers not to delay this necessary seasonal precaution.

"This is the time of year when our traffic department prepares for the big job of keeping traffic moving safely and efficiently during the winter," he said. "This job requires thorough planning on our part—not only to satisfy busy citizens whose time is valuable, but to keep life-arteries open in the event of an emergency.

"The department will do its part, but everyone who drives shares the responsibility."

Winter traffic is something like a chain that is no stronger than its weakest link, he explained. The police department knows from past experience that the breakdown of a single vehicle at a crucial point can seriously delay and obstruct vital traffic. Avoiding such occurrences depends almost entirely upon individual responsibility and initiative.

That's why the chief sees it as part of his duty to remind local car and truck owners to make sure their vehicles are winter-ready.

"We don't have to be professional long-range weather forecasters to know that the outlook is for cold temperatures and occasional difficult driving conditions," the chief commented. "And most of us are familiar with the steps that should be taken to protect our cars. The danger isn't ignorance; it's procrastination."

Providing a partial check list, Chief Derro mentioned the following items among those to be considered right along with the obvious steps of putting anti freeze in the radiator and substituting winter-grade lubricants:

(1) An engine tune-up including inspection of the generator as well as the entire electrical system, to assure easier starting and prevent stalling in traffic.

(2) Battery replacement, if there is any hint that the old one could give out at an embarrassing moment, necessitating towing or pushing.

(3) Replacements of treadless tires, or better yet, equipping rear wheels with snow tires—for added confidence and performance on snow-covered streets.

(4) Tire chains—to make sure they are ready so that in serious snow and ice conditions your car won't be the one that stops and blocks traffic.

(5) Windshield wiper inspection, both for wiper blades condition and adequate wiper arm pressure (one ounce per inch of blade length).

(6) Heater and defroster system should be checked for peak performance.

(7) Brakes should be inspected to be sure they are working properly—an uneven or "grabbing" brake can throw you into a dangerous skid.

"No one can say he is ready for winter until his car is ready for winter," the chief advised.

John D. Stevens Retires From High School Staff

The School Committee has accepted with regret the resignation and retirement of John D. Stevens of 6 Oneida Road, from his position as guidance counselor in the High School for reasons of ill health.

Mr. Stevens, who joined the Winchester faculty in 1936, has been on leave of absence in the Prince Edward Island Hospital, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, since September 1.

Known to a great many former students through his long service as a teacher of English at the High School, Mr. Stevens also served as assistant principal for many years and as acting principal in 1956. In addition, he was faculty advisor for many extra-curricular activities allied with the teaching of English and was a coach in football and hockey.

Upon notice of his official retirement, the High School faculty last week sent Henry Fitts on a flight to Canada as their emmissary. Mr. Fitts took to Mr. Stevens the myriad good thoughts and warm wishes of his associates. He also carried some gift remembrances from Winchester.

Haiti, at the height of its prosperity in the 18th century, provided Europe with all its sugar and Louis XV's France with half its national revenue, the National Geographic Society says. Now beset by strife stemming from poverty and dictatorships, Haiti has the lowest gross national product per person in the Americas.

Although it straddles the Equator, Ecuador can be chilly. Its climate changes by the mile, from the hot coast to snow bound Andean peaks, the National Geographic says. The country has many active volcanoes, including 19,347 foot Cotopaxi, one of the world's highest.

Cub Pack 506 Opens New Den, Makes Awards

Cub Pack 506 of the Mystic School held its monthly pack meeting on Friday evening, December 6, in the Unitarian Church Hall.

Cubmaster Bob Bigelow began the meeting at 7 p.m. Then the Pledge of Allegiance was led by Ralph Tullberg and the Boy Scout Pledge by Geoffrey Rivinius.

Assistant Cubmaster Jim Blackham presented the Inspection awards to Dens 2 and 6. Attendance awards were made to Dens 2, 4, 5, 6 and 7; and achievement awards were then made to Dens 2 and 5 by the cubmaster.

Following this committeeman Dr. Capobianco made the exhibit awards to Dens 2 and 6, and the badge awards were made by Dr. Reynolds to the following boys:

In Den 2—Lion Badge with gold and silver arrow points to Bill Blackham. In Den 3—Bear Badge to Peter Niles, and gold arrow points on Bear Badge to Geoffrey Rivinius. In Den 4—Wolf Badges with gold arrow points to Tom Busby, Lee Pollachi and Peter Reynolds; Wolf Badges to Dennis Marasca, Robert Thoms and Scott Knopf.

In Den 5—Gold and silver arrow points on Wolf Badge to George Goolkasian and Charles Potts; gold arrow points on Wolf Badge to John Farrell, Richard Greuter, David Simone and Eric Strout. In Den 6—Wolf Badge and gold arrow point to John Piantedosi; Wolf Badge to David Frongillo, Carmen Fucillo and Robert Vercollone; gold arrow point on Wolf Badge to Alan Greene, and silver arrow point on Wolf Badge to David Mucci.

A new Den 7 was added to the pack. As there is no pack in the Washington School the following boys formed the new den: Douglas Bryant, Robert Carroll, Richard DeBourke, Peter Ferber, Douglas Fritch, Craig Nichols and Douglas Weeks. The new den mother will be Mrs. Donald Fritch, and Mr. Hugh Ferber has been added to the committee. The parents of these boys presented them with Bobcat pins.

Den 2 presented a skit entitled "The Best Christmas Ever," which was enjoyed by all.

The meeting closed with the singing of Christmas Carols.

Cuba's flag was designed by a Cuban patriot living in a New York rooming house more than a century ago. It flew for the first time on May 11, 1850, from a New York building, and was first raised as Cuba's official emblem above Havana's Morro Castle on May 20, 1902.

Careful Driving In Winter Snow Is Safety Factor

One snowfall doesn't make a winter, but the first snowfall of the winter sets the stage.

Children were thrilled by last week's first snow of the season. Grown-ups probably viewed it with was in the minds of many when mixed emotions. Chief of Police Joseph Derro probably spoke what he said, "It's only the beginning."

"I personally don't mind a change of season," was the chief's comment, "but I hate to think of the rash of traffic accidents that seems to hit us during most early-winter snowfalls. It seems that it takes drivers a certain amount of time to adjust to driving in snow, no matter how many warnings we try to give them.

"Fortunately, many of these skidding accidents aren't serious in terms of deaths or injuries. They're an awful nuisance, though—an expense, an inconvenience, and an embarrassment to the people involved. And make no mistake about it, the next one could be serious—if not fatal."

To some, the chief hopes, the first snowfall of the season was a practical reminder to get the family car equipped completely for the winter ahead. Heaters, defrosters, exhaust systems, windshield wipers tires and tire chains should be checked to be sure they're in tip-top condition. To all it should be a reminder to heed the annual warning of the International Association of Chiefs of Police—drive a little slower, and with a little more caution.

"One thing is the same," Chief Derro said. "We still have to watch for the youngsters. Last month they were on bikes. Now they'll be on sleds. But we'll still have to be alert for them when we drive."

Children And Fire

"Don't give fires a place to start" is a piece of advice often heard but too little heeded. The results of this heedlessness are starkly outlined in the annual fire records of the United States.

In this country, about 1,500 homes are destroyed or damaged by fire each day, in many instances with tragic loss of life. Fire strikes nearly 450 industrial and commercial places each day, and in addition to the waste of physical resources, there are incalculable costs in temporary or permanent loss of jobs and frequent business failures.

We have an unfortunate habit of dismissing most fires as "accidents", a sort of visitation of bad luck which somehow was unavoidable. But how unavoidable—or unpredictable—is the fire started by a carelessly discarded cigarette, or overloaded and defective electric wiring, or poorly maintained heating and cooking equipment? Yet, as shown by National Fire Protection Association studies, these and similar, uncomplicated causes are responsible for the great majority of fires.

We need to acknowledge the fact that fires are not only wasteful but avoidable, then go on to reform the habits and remove the hazards which cause them. When each of us as an individual has done this, we will no longer risk our lives, jobs and possessions to the destructive forces of fire.

Art Association Enjoys Artist At Work Here

The Winchester Art Association here enjoyed a meeting of outstanding interest and inspiration on Tuesday, December 3 when Tomie DePaola so aptly charmed his audience with a lively creation of a large and handsome collage.

The collage along with other examples of Mr. DePaola's work form a noteworthy December exhibit at the library. Of special interest in the exhibit is a collection of his Christmas card designs. These are on sale at the Botolph Group.

Mr. DePaola is a young designer and liturgical muralist of increasing reknown who also heads the art department at Newton College of the Sacred Heart. He opened his talk with a brief history of his art education. Then with the help of Mia Greggs whom he described as an invaluable aide and the backbone of the Botolph Group on Newbury Street, he attached a very large white paper to the wall. From a beautiful assortment of colored papers, glazed, metallic and tissue, he proceeded to create a collage, abstracting the timely symbol of the Christ Child.

After the demonstration and discussion, Mr. and Mrs. William Cusack held a well attended open house at their attractive home on Lakeview Road where it was pleasant to chat with the artist over a cup of coffee.

Mrs. Sidney M. Stewart was in charge of the program and we are grateful to her for such fine arrangements.

Secretary Urges Jobless Youths Emergency Aids

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, speaking before the National Conference on Youth Employment, called for "stern emergency measures" to eliminate youth unemployment.

"There won't be full employment of youth," the Secretary said, "until the educational system, like the ecomomy, is operating at full capacity. In the meantime there is the hard fact to be faced that there are today several million young Americans who have left the schools, not to return, and that they are not equipped to make a living which will satisfy them or keep them and their families independent.

"Think what would happen in this country if we declared war on ignorance—by elevating the standards of teachers to the levels the importance of their job demands, by paying them the salaries which the required skills would warrant, by cutting the students-to-teachers ratio to the point good sense would require, by building the schoolrooms which are needed, and by giving every child in the country the educational opportunity from first grade through college which a few have today.

"Education would become our largest economic enterprise, as it ought to be. This would, in itself, create full employment. It would wipe out ignorance. It would virtually end the intolerance and bigotry of racial and religious discrimination. It would give young Americans the skills they need in an automated work force, and the broader knowledge a working majority of people must have if a government by the people is to make sense in a world where most of nature's forces are now being brought within human control."

Commenting on legislation he deems necessary, Mr. Wirtz stated:

"The single most important youth employment measure before the country today is the tax bill. It will mean, the Council of Economic Advisers estimates, between two and three million jobs. A good many of those jobs will mean the difference between boys staying on street corners and their going to work.

"You are here to promote the passage of the Youth Employment Act. I consider the adoption of this Act essential to the meeting of the situation we presently face.

"The Manpower Development and Training Act gives skills training to tens of thousands of youth, and so is an integral part of our national commitment. But more and different kinds of training are needed than can now be offered in this program. Many young people are not now ready to learn advanced skills; they are rejected from such training. Some have not applied for it, or completed it, for lack of money to sustain themselves.

"For these reasons we have proposed that MDTA be amended to young boys and girls while giving them a second chance to learn to read, write, and figure."

New Laws For Criminals: Tightening Social Rule

Attorney General Edward Brooke has proposed four important bills which should be enacted into law for the protection of the Commonwealth and its citizens.

One bill proposes that persons convicted of a crime should be disqualified from holding public office. This is an important measure, for although some persons may argue that anyone who has been convicted of a crime and has made his restitution to the State should not thereafter be penalized again; nevertheless, the public interest should not be jeopardized by being placed in the hands of someone who, although he has paid for his crime, already has committed a crime against the State.

A second bill proposes that certain briberies and related acts be adjudged as felonies. The importance of this bill is self-evident, for if it is not a serious crime for public employees to accept bribes, what is to deter them from that action? Certainly social ethics is not enough, for we have even seen one of our local citizens who works at the state level proven guilty of this, among other crimes, this year.

A third bill proposes that a public employee be dismissed for refusing to testify before a grand jury. This bill enters the realm of the Constitutional rights of an individual to protect himself from "self-incrimination." Nevertheless, if a public employee refuses to testify before a grand jury, there must be some reason, and public employees are supposed to be above and beyond any possible reproach for their actions. Therefore, a refusal to testify before a grand jury is practically tantamount to the public employee's admitting questionable circumstances or actions, and should not be allowed to continue in his post where the public has faith in his devotion to the public interest above his own.

Finally, the fourth and probably the most important bill proposes that police officers be allowed to apprehend and detain a person up to two hours without placing him under arrest or filing charges. There are no such provisions for detention under existing law, and any officer that attempts to detain an individual now without warranted authority could face illegal arrest proceedings.

This bill would permit a police officer to stop a person and demand his name, address, business abroad, and where he is going. If the officer suspects he is about to or already has committed a crime, he can detain him for further investigation for a period of two hours without arresting him or filing charges.

Present law permits unlimited detention of persons found abroad at night without sufficient reason, but this bill would set a two-hour limit, and allow daytime detention. While such a law would undoubtedly aid police in curbing crimes, nevertheless the potential dangers available in the misuse of a law which could infringe an innocent individual's protected rights of freedom of movement are great. This law, while a good one in many ways, could in practice turn out to be a bad law because of its very broad power of detention, even though for a "brief" two hours.

Federal Aid To Higher Education A Landmark In Domestic Legislation

One of the Kennedy Administration's most important pieces of domestic legislation finally was passed this week when Congress provided $1.2 billion in construction funds for the nation's colleges and set up the first Federal aid program in history to help in their expansion.

The problem of college classroom space is now most acute across the nation, and these overdue funds, the center of two strong controversies—the giving of public funds to religious educational institutions, and the giving of federal aid to private colleges that have been generally considered entirely free of federal influence—can now be used to help colleges meet their growing enrollment demands.

The second of the two controversies named is already almost a purely hypothetical or academic problem, for most of the nation's colleges do in fact receive federal grants to administrate scholarships or loans to deserving students, or grants for scientific research such as at MIT and Harvard.

The first controversy, however, is far from resolved in many circles. As far as the Supreme Court is concerned, according to past decisions such as the ban on school prayers, it most likely will declare as unconstitutional any case brought before it questioning the constitutionality of federal money being spent to aid religious educational institutions on the grounds that the State would be helping to "establish a religion."

But Congress refused to delay the vast aid to colleges any longer merely to debate on the church-state issue. All of the nation's 2100 public and private colleges are eligible for grants and loans under the new program. Undergraduate grants are to be distributed by the states for specific projects such as classrooms, laboratories or libraries. Graduate loans and grants will be administered from Washington.

While the bill is a good one in its aims and purposes, and will help colleges now when they desperately need help, it nevertheless cannot be overlooked that the lawmakers did in fact abrogate their responsibility in fixing the scope of its coverage. By leaving the church-state issue to the Supreme Court to handle, the Congress bypassed its responsibility to set the necessary limitations which would insure the continued separation of church and state as guaranteed under the Constitution, and particularly where it applies in the field of education—one of the most important areas where the State should not interfere with its tremendous influence.

No Double Session Stand

The subject of double sessions in schools is always a volatile issue in any town, and probably nowhere is it as likely to be as controversial and disturbing a matter as it could be in Winchester—which prides itself on having a quality school system with no effort or money spared to make it one of the best.

Therefore, it is interesting to note the letter being sent out to the parents of students in grades seven through twelve this week by the School Committee on this delicate subject.

The School Committee, after answering a number of queries from concerned parents who said they had heard rumors that the committee was going to have to institute double sessions next year at the high school due to high enrollments and the limited building space available, finally, and wisely, determined that the best way to handle the snowballing situation was to take the bull by the horns and publicly refute the rumor.

It is not entirely unusual for town boards and committees to overlook rumors as being unimportant, though when asked directly they will answer fairly. But in this case the School Committee felt that the worried parents of high school students had a right to know what the facts of the matter are, and what developments are expected. Thus, in a carefully worded letter to the parents, the School Committee explained the situation as they see it.

The report to the parents literally promised there would be no double sessions next year in any event; and that if overcrowding far exceeded present forecasts, the committee would institute minor adjustments such as partitioning larger rooms into more classrooms, and converting other space into classrooms, or, if necessary, adopt a slightly staggered schedule whereby a proportion of the students would enter and leave school an hour ahead of the majority—which would not shorten the school day, nor impose the educational losses which result from double sessions.

The straightforward manner in which the School Committee refutes this rumor is to be commended. The committee could have said simply that there would be no double sessions and let the matter drop. Instead, the committee gave all the important background information that the parents needed to fully understand the problem confronting the committee and outlined what the committee's solution would be.

Also, the School Committee did not hesitate to inform the parents that "future crowding at the high school can be relieved only by building more space," and that the committee, along with the Permanent Building Committee, was already at work evaluating the necessary alterations, addition, or new building that would be needed by the fall of 1966.

In soliciting the understanding and backing of the parents over both the no-double-session issue and the need for additional building space in the future, the School Committee psychologically relieved many parents, politically prepared them for the building task that lies ahead, and adroitly stilled a disquiteing educational controversy that was building up within the community.

No Cheerleaders For This WHS Team

THE FIVE HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS who last week competed for the school in the Northern Sector Greater Boston Mathematics League meet held here were Brian Kincaid and Bill Hopkins, at the board; and Nancy Beckley, Brenda Baker and Craig Nickerson at the table. Most of the competition is individual, but they are shown here at work on the one "team" question of the meet, last week, in geometry.

WHS Math Team Takes Second In Sectional Meet

The High School mathematics team took second place in the eight school northern sector Greater Boston Mathematics League meet held last Wednesday at Winchester High School.

They were topped by Arlington, which scored an 84 to the home team's 80. Haverhill was third with 79, and in finishing order the other schools were St. Mary's Girls, St. Mary's Boys (both Lynn), Revere, Medford, and Malden.

Computing and figuring for WHS in this meet were seniors Brian Kincaid and Bill Hopkins, juniors Brenda Baker and Craig Nickerson, and sophomore Nancy Beckley. Two participants from each school worked on the problems in the five categories of arithmetic, algebra I, geometry, algebra II and trigonometry. All participated in the team question, which was for this meet a geometry problem.

The team problem was solved correctly by the top three teams, winning for each 15 points. The margin of win for Arlington accrued from the math categories of arithmetic and algebra I. They earned 14 points in arithmetic to Winchester's 12, and 13 in algebra to the home team's 10.

Two more sectional meets remain before the League playoff in the early spring.

For the forty students and about twenty faculty advisors and correctors who convened for this cerebral competition refreshments were served throughout the afternoon by student council members. Some also served as ushers, escorting the teams to their rooms of combat. Among them were Ebet Keresztes, Gail Murphy, Betsy Callaham, Joan Sheppard, John McKenna and Lee Sullivan.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

John F. Kennedy Memorial Center

Proposals introduced last week in Congress to rename the proposed National Cultural Center the John F. Kennedy Memorial Center have stimulated new interest in this project.

The idea for a national center for the performing arts on the banks of the Potomac has only in the last few years had a prospect of becoming reality. It is hard to believe that we are the only major world power without a national center of this kind. Those of us who have long enjoyed the cultural riches of the Massachusetts area cannot appreciate the unfulfilled desires of many Americans who never have an opportunity to attend a symphony concert, a new play, or a poetry reading. Although Washington has a magnificent National Art Gallery, our Nation's Capital does not have a hall suitable for varied performances of music, theater and ballet.

A national cultural center was first endorsed by President Eisenhower in 1958. In that year Congress voted to provide for a Board of Trustees and a National Advisory Council on the Arts which would raise funds for the construction of a Center. President Kennedy declared his support in 1961 and was an active and vigorous campaigner for funds. Mrs. Kennedy lent her support as well and serves as honorary co-chairman of the Center.

Of the $30 million estimated total cost, $13 million has been raised in cash and pledges. The Ford Foundation generously contributed $5 million and the Rockfeller Foundation $1 million. The Italian Government donated more than $1 million worth of Italian marble for the building.

Center officials are hopeful that the concentrated appeal for funds soon to be conducted will put the Center over the $30 million goal. Additional funds would be used to sponsor festivals of the performing arts and conduct competitions among young performers.

President Kennedy's interest in the Center and his own devotion to the quality of the performing arts in America led to the suggestion that the Center be rededicated as the major monument to his memory. Last week, with the approval of the family of President Kennedy and the support of the trustees of the Center and the White House, I joined with four of my colleagues to introduce legislation to this effect. The House Public Works Committee will hold hearings this week and Congress is expected to act promptly on the proposal.

In the course of history nations have been judged as much by the quality of their arts and the support they receive as by the prosperity of their economies and the strength of their defenses. In our haste to settle the United States, develop our industry and maintain our world position, we have often tended to neglect our artists and performers. The creation of a John F. Kennedy Memorial Center will provide the arts with new dignity and encourage our youth to pursue their talents with the expectation that they will receive the respect which should properly be reserved for the arts.

Toys for Tots

The 1963 Toys for Tots Cavalcade with Miss Jean of the "Romper Room School" in conjunction with the United States Marine Corps Reserve will be held this year on Saturday, the 14th of December. Lieutenant Governor Billotti, the honorary state chairman, will start the "Cavalcade" at 11:00 a.m. at the Child World Store in Quincy. Miss Jean will be at the Child World Stores on Route 1 Dedham from 12:30 p.m. till 1:30 p.m. and at the Fellsway Shopping Plaza at Medford from 2:00 p.m. till 3:00 p.m. and at Vinnin Square at Swampscott from 3:30 p.m. till 4:30 p.m.

Christmas is a happy time, but not for those children whose parents are unable to provide for them the shiny, bright toys so beloved to a child's heart. This is an excellent opportunity for your children to meet Miss Jean as she accepts your toys and also help another child have a Merry Christmas.

NEW ENGLAND

by Arthur Griffin

John Steinbeck, on a trip across America, was struck by the colors of a New Hampshire autumn and asked a native whether having this color display every year led one eventually to ignore the beauty. "It is a glory," she said, "and can't be remembered, so that it always comes as a surprise."

Arthur Griffin's unique book with its superb photography helps one to remember during other seasons just how the different seasons appear throughout the New England countryside. Dogwood in Connecticut and the patches of snow still on the Vermont hillsides as sugaring-off takes place in spring, vie with sunset from Nantucket Island after Labor Day and the Martha Mary Chapel in Sudbury surrounded with snow.

Mr. Griffin was Life's first photographer in New England and now free-lances for practically every leading national magazine. He received the Lithographers and Printers National Association award for this book and has been honored by having New England selected by the English-Speaking Union for inclusion in its overseas exhibit of "American Ambassadors." I always enjoy the sight of his Tyrolean hat waiting in the check-out line at a local supermarket framed by his photographs displayed on the walls. Just another of Winchester's quietly famous citizens who has to eat like the rest of us!

But this is more than a book of photographs beautiful as they are. Each picture was sent to a New Englander of note who was asked to compose a selection so that Robert Frost, Thornton Burgess, Norman Rockwell, and Haydn Pearson find themselves rubbing literary elbows with such artistic companions as Margaret Bourke-White, All Capp, and Mary Ellen Chase.

In all there are 44 pictures and 48 essays with short biographies of the authors. These are arranged by the four seasons. Chosing a sample is impossible because each selection is individual. There is some history, some sociology, some poetry, some reminiscence, some humor, some pathos, and deep feeling for the region both in words and pictures.

What a superb Christmas gift for someone who loves this part of the country but has relocated elsewhere. Floridians delighted at the lack of snow shoveling, could not but be transported by the view of Mount Mansfield seen across snow-covered fields with a red farmhouse adding its authentic touch.

Mr. Kirsten says the most travelled-to-places among Winchester's winter travelers are Caribbean cruises to the West Indies, ski trips to Aspen and Europe, and flights to Florida's sunshine and to Mexico. ally speaking, impossible for him to consider keeping it up. He said, however, that he had in the past week seen that the broken windows were taken out, glass swept up, and windowless frames boarded up. He mentioned that in earlier attempts to make money there by charging car parking fees to pay for maintenance and protection, he had been stifled by the town.

Joseph Gray, chairman of the Planning Board, said if no other solution availed itself to the situation, the Planning Board would consider supporting a zoning change before the Town Meeting to have that part of the residential area changed to either a professional or business zone.

Mr. Conners said that would please him, because then he could make some money on the property through leasing it out as office space. "I paid for a dead horse," he said, and "anything the town could do to help would be better than nothing."

The question arose whether or not a zoning change for the purpose of using the depot for business or medical offices might not be called spot zoning. Spot zoning is the indiscriminate changing of zones to suit particular needs or conditions after a regular zoning plan has been established and followed by a town.

Mr. Gray said he did not believe the Planning Board would call such a change spot zoning. He said it would not be spot zoning because the property stands beside the railroad now, and the railroad is a commercial enterprise. Also, the depot had been used as a business by the railroad — selling tickets, picking up baggage, etc. It had been a non-conforming use within the zoning regulations, i.e., it had been doing business there before the town was zone mapped, and therefore was permitted to continue in that capacity, although it would not be allowed to increase its business beyond that non-conforming use without a zoning change.

Mr. Gray said that the railroad's recent announcement that it might discontinue passenger service could change the character of its enterprise insofar as it affected and did business in Winchester. This, he noted, might make the entire discussion moot. However, on the other hand, as a freight carrier through Winchester (both interstate and international, since trains using the local tracks frequently go all the way up to Montreal), it might still be considered a business.

Selectman John Sexton asked whether or not if the town acquired the property it could then use it in any way it wanted to, even beyond the zoning limitations. Mr. Gray said yes, it could to a degree, but only when the use would be a public use, such as a playground.

Mr. Gray reminded the group that a zoning change would require a two-thirds majority vote of the Town Meeting, and then another vote would be necessary to establish a particular zone change on the map. He noted that the townspeople are not inclined to make changes in zoning, and least especially in the case from a residential to a business or (new) professional district. He added that probably the only political force capable of swinging the town to agree to such a change would be "the unlikely but awesome unanimity of the town's boards on the matter."

Selectman John Lyman, acting chairman, said the property was an eyesore and somehow it has to be looked after.

Mr. Grey asked Mr. Conners if he would be willing to go before the Planning Board next Monday night to discuss possible ways a zoning change could help improve the property. Mr. Conners agreed, and the groups dismissed on the note that Mr. Conners and the Planning Board would attempt to work out a solution that would, with Town Meeting approval, keep the Wedgemere Depot from deteriorating any further, and possibly upgrade its appearance.

Double Session

1965, 1,094 in 1966, and 1,132 in 1967. The School Committee believes these projections, barring major departures from past trends, area a reliable basis for planning the use of school facilities."

"It is evident that the High School is overcrowded. And it is going to be more so next year. Thereafter, in 1965 and 1966, enrollments should slack off a bit before increasing again in 1967," said the School Committee.

How is the School Committee able to meet this pressure of numbers? Although there are this year some hundred students in excess of the designed educational capacity of the building, the School Department has been able to add more than 135 pupil stations by converting former shop space to classrooms, by partitioning large rooms into more classrooms, etc. These temporary expedients have actually dropped average academic class size from last year's average. The crowding which is so much in evidence affects corridors, cafeteria, study halls, and all areas not planned as classrooms. It has not been allowed to affect the educational program.

The School Committee believes that further minor adjustments can be made for another year or so, just as they have been for the past few years.

ously to fuse citizen energy into this one initiative petition to bring about a specific governmental reform. I commend them all most highly.

"The signatures of these registered voters from every corner of the State represent a clear mandate to the Legislature to deflate the power-swollen Executive Council.

"The citizens have paid dearly for numerous breakdowns in orderly government brought about by the Executive Council, an obsolete but disruptive hangover from Colonial days.

"It has grown to be a supercheck on the governor's power never intended by our founding fathers nor consistent with modern government practice. The council has a record of active interference with the Executive Branch—through delay or refusal to confirm appointments or gubernatorial requests for Supreme Court advisory opinions."

The petition would remove most of the statutory powers acquired by the council over the last 175 years. Specifically, it eliminates council power over more than 900 appointments, removals and salaries within the Executive Branch and within county government, except for members of five boards with quasi-judicial functions.

Council powers to vote on State contracts, leasing of property by the State, on sales of State land and over miscellaneous Executive Branch administrative decisions would be removed too.

Untouched would be the constitutional powers of the council involving pardons and judges.

The Legislature must vote on the petition by May 6, 1964. If it rejects the petition, the sponsors plan to gather another 11,000 certified signatures to put the issue before all the voters in the Fall 1964 State election.

"We sincerely hope this will not be necessary," commented MacKenzie. "It is perfectly clear that our citizens are tired of the wheeling and dealing by the Executive Council over the years. The Legislature will earn a prompt vote of thanks from the petition sponsors and the voters at large by voting favorably on this important matter."

Mr. MacKenzie paid tribute to the hundreds of volunteer, unpaid workers who did the vital doorbell ringing needed to collect the many thousands of signatures.

"Without question, their inspired dedication to this task reflects a serious intent to have a direct hand in improving the Massachusetts governmental process."

He also praised the news media for explaining the drive to the voters and for supporting it editorially.

The campaign, which took months of planning and organization, began officially on August 7 when the Attorney General certified the petition. The signatures drive itself began September 11, under the direction of Mr. MacKenzie and a steering committee comprising members of the three principal sponsors.

Other co-operating organizations included the Massachusetts Council of Churches, the Committee of Democrats, Americans for Democratic Action, American Veterans Committee, Massachusetts Citizens Committee, Massachusetts Congregational Christian Conference Social Action Committee and Massachusetts Council of Young Republican Clubs.

Individual endorsers of the drive include Governor Peabody, Dean Erwin Griswold of Harvard Law School and Dean Robert F. Drinan, S. J., dean of Boston College Law School.

tions. The B and M had been losing approximately $3 million a year on its passenger service until the MTC experimental project this year subsidized the Railroad with $1,370,250. The B and M, the Boston and Albany and the New Haven have considered consolidation to economize freighting operations for several years.

Rep. Harrison Chadwick of Winchester has already filed a bill (House Bill No. 2387) for next year's Legislative session to establish a northern suburbs transportation district for the purpose of securing a public transportation system between Boston and the cities and towns now served by the B and M if the Railroad ceases its passenger service.

Rep. Chadwick calls the bill a stop-gap measure which could either fill in any gap in service until State or Federal grants could subsidize the B and M to return its service, or else assume the operation of that service permanently through a contract with the B and M to use its tracks and trains.

The bill, which was originally filed in 1962 and passed by the House Committee on Transportation, was one which was later used as a basis in the formation of the Mass Transportation Commission. Now, Rep. Chadwick says, if the B and M discontinues, this bill may have to be considered as a possible solution. He added that the big drawback to the bill is that each city and town served by such a district would have to pay for the service out of local taxes, and it would be far more costly to the people of this area than it would if the State or Federal Government decided to subsidize the Railroad—guaranteeing it reimbursement for any losses suffered through public transportation.

Rep. Chadwick further pointed out that if the passenger service stops, the State would be hard put to build enough super highways to handle the increase in auto and bus traffic in and out of Boston. In addition, he said, there is also the problem of growing resistance to building highways through congested areas because of the great amount of property condemnations needed.

Rep. Chadwick said he believed the State would eventually be forced into accepting the role of operating all major public transportation facilities in the Greater Boston area.

Meanwhile, in Washington, D.C., Congressman Brad Morse and Senator Edward Kennedy have promised thorough investigations into what can be done to prevent the dropping of the commuter service, and to do all in their power at the federal level to insure that the commuters continue to have effective service.

How to Decorate An Outdoor Yule Tree

Stringing Christmas lights on an outdoor tree calls for caution. Use electrical fixtures designed for outdoor use, says Roy C. Beckwith of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratories.

Bulbs of 15 wattage are sufficient. Never let bulbs touch needles. Otherwise needles of yew, chamaecyparis, pine, fir and spruce may be scorched. Brown areas will show up in the trees next spring. Avoid lights on boxwood.

Periodically check the position of the lights. Winds may shift them. Hang sockets downward to keep out snow and water. And if possible keep the lights high enough, beyond the reach of little children.

Democratic Town Committee Reports Washington Visits

The Democratic State Committee in a communication dated December 3 and addressed to all city and town chairmen, has advised them "to postpone all formal activities until the first of January in observance of the 30-day mourning period for our late beloved President." Consequently, there will be no meeting of the local committee until January.

The chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, on behalf of the group, wishes to thank Frances Ehrgott of 20 Cedar Street, who is, and has been for some time, on tour in Europe where she and a girl friend have already visited several countries. Frances' letter from Italy was a real gem. It gave us a first-hand insight into the deep emotions of the Italian people as they sorrowed and prayed with us in our country at the tragic loss of our gallant young President. Frances is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Ehrgott of 20 Cedar Street.

Some of our fine Democratic citizens went to Washington to pay honor to our late President. Among them were Bob Sullivan, one of our popular firemen, his wife, Teresa, and Mrs. Beverly Nash and her sister, Brenda Murphy. Bobby told how they waited in line for seven and one-half hours before their turn came to pass the casket in the Capitol Rotunda. Then, going out and down the steps, they walked the long distance to the White House and stood in line until the funeral cortege had passed on its way to St. Matthew's Cathedral. Footsore and weary, but deeply impressed at the solemn processional and the great number of world personages, they drove back to Winchester, arriving at 2:30 the next morning.

Another communication from Gerard Doherty, our very efficient State Committee chairman, says, "In view of the heavy program planned for late winter and spring, this is a good opportunity to make sure registration and publicity chairmen have been appointed in your area." In reply we say, "They have, Gerry, several weeks ago."

The firefighters wrapped Paul Soucek in a blanket and took him to his home. The police officers took Peter Richardson to the home at 16 Dartmouth Street and wrapped him in a blanket and called his parents.

Later on that day, at about 4 p.m. police received a call that three youths were out on Big Winter Pond in a boat and were apparently in trouble. Members of the Police and Fire Department again responded. They found the youths trying to break the ice in front of the boat with their hockey sticks to get back to shore,

When the youths got to shore police discovered that they were Harris Richardson, Jr., 15, Peter Lanigan, 10, of 55 Wedgemere Avenue, and George Whitten, 14, of 4 Dartmouth Street. They had gone out on the pond to retrieve the hockey gloves and stick that had been left there earlier in the day.

District Deputy Visits Winchester Lodge of Elks

The annual visitation of the district deputy grand exalted ruler took place at the Elks Home on Elmwood Avenue last Sunday, December 8. District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler William P. Daley, P.E.R. and secretary of Woburn Lodge, brought a message to the members and visiting brothers from other lodges from G.E.R. Dunn. Accompanying the district deputy was a suite of officers and his Grand Exalted Esquire, Charles M. Duran, P.E.R. of Woburn Lodge and himself a past district deputy. He did a splendid job conducting the duties of his office.

In connection with the visitation the following were initiated as members of Winchester Lodge: Roger D. Whittemore, 32 Sargent Road, Elliot Walters, 17 Squanto Road, and Charles L. McGinnis of Burlington.

There was a large delegation from Woburn, including many P.E.R.'s and delegations from other neighboring lodges to the north of Boston. Before the visitation there was a fine social hour during which the members and brothers from other lodges had a chance to socialize. An excellent supper, prepared by Bob Scholl, followed the visitation.

The members of Winchester Lodge are reminded that the homecoming of the district deputy and his suite will take place this coming Sunday at 3 p.m. at Woburn Lodge. Winchester brothers have also been invited to the party preceding the homecoming, which will take place this Saturday night at the Woburn Lodge quarters. There will be dancing and refreshments.

There will be a children's Christmas party at the Elks Home Sunday between 2:30 and 6:30 for members' children up to twelve years of age. Please notify the steward or any of the officers of the names, ages, and sex of the children you intend to bring so that appropriate gifts may be obtained. Francis Curtin, chairman of the Youth Activities Committee, is running this affair, so one may be assured it will be very well handled.

Mrs. Roberts Is Appointed New Assistant Librarian

Leila-Jane Roberts has been appointed assistant librarian of the Winchester Public Library as of December 1, according to an announcement by the trustees of the library.

MRS. LEILA-JANE ROBERTS

Mrs. Roberts started working at the library in July of 1957, and in December was appointed general professional assistant in charge of the circulation department. In November of 1959 she was made the acting young adults and circulation librarian, and in April, 1960, was appointed young adults librarian and head of circulation.

Born in Syracuse, New York, Mrs. Roberts, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. B. Roberts, who were Winchester residents for 20 years, attended Winchester schools from third grade through high school, where she was active as editor of the Red & Black and the student handbook. She received her B.A. degree from Oberlin College in Ohio.

Mrs. Roberts taught for four years at the Northfield School for Girls before coming to Winchester to teach in the high school from 1954 to 1956. She did graduate studies at Boston University and the Breadloaf School of English at Middlebury College. She also took library courses through the Massachusetts Division of Public Libraries of the Mass. Dept. of Education, and passed the examination for the Certificate of Librarianship in November, 1959.

Mrs. Roberts' professional affiliations include membership on the executive board of the Round Table of Librarians for Young Adults, and the nominating committee for the Young Adults Services Division of the American Library Association.

Mrs. Roberts, who worked summers during her college career for the Boston Filter Company's service department, explains that the business experience has been an invaluable aid in helping her run the library's circulation department. She has always been interested in books and people, and she says she finds her work in the library a stimulating way to grow in knowledge in both. She also frequently contributes reviews to the Book Reviews column from the library which appears weekly on the editorial page of the Winchester Star.

The wife of Russell D. Roberts, general sales manager of Travel Service Bureau in Needham, she resides at 44 Dunster Lane. They have one daughter, who is in the seventh grade at Lynch Junior High School.

Singing, Music Mark Gala Town Hall Xmas Fling

With community singing sparking the gathering and the annual early appearance of Santa Claus gladdening their hearts, the large "Town Hall Family Group" thoroughly enjoyed their holiday season get-together last Friday evening.

About thirty gathered for the dinner and fun at the Hayes Steak House in Billerica, and dancing to the Hayes orchestra was interspersed with group singing after dinner.

Police Chief Joseph Derro served as Santa Claus and distributed the gifts from the Christmas grab bag. The special door prize was won by Town Clerk Elsie Nelson with Fire Chief Frank Amico drawing the lucky number.

This year's committee included employees on the ground floor of the Town Hall, with Margaret Granfield as chairman, assisted by Frank Muraco and Anthony Barbaro.

here in town, publishes in circular form a map showing the many parking areas in the Center area which allow ample parking for leisurely shopping.

The larger parking areas are: (1) opposite the Town Hall and adjacent to Mt. Vernon Street and Skillings By-pass, which can accomodate 120 cars; (2) behind the Town Hall, which can park 40 cars; (3)in front of the Winchester Railroad Station and beside the overpass, for about 40 cars; (4) beside the overpass and along the Common, which can hold about 24 cars; beside the overpass and along Shore Road, accommodating about 60 cars; (5) off Shore Road and behind Converse Market, for about 24 cars; and (6) behind the Police and Fire Stations, which can accommodate about 42 cars.

Of course there are many other places where cars can be stopped, as beside meters which still have several minutes left before expiring to a violation, and many shoppers take advantage of this time to quickly pick up a single item here and there.

Nevertheless, speaking of time, there are only twelve more shopping days before Christmas Day ...when Santa Claus leaves off bags and bags of gifts for the kiddies and the whole family!

Messiah At Epiphany On This Sunday

In keeping with the coming of Christmas, a presentation of Handel's "Messiah" will be given this Sunday afternoon at 3:15 p.m., at the Church of the Epiphany. The Glee Clubs of Wheelock College and M. I. T. will combine to sing the special music featuring excerpts from parts I and II of the oratorio.

Solo parts will be sung by Dana Sealey of Wheelock, soprano from Deerfield, Mass.; Linda Cochran of Wheelock, alto, from Hamden, Conn.; James Hsu of M.I.T., tenor from Norfolk, Va.; and Stanley Gambrill of M.I.T., bass from Baltimore, Md. Orchestra music will be played by members of the Cambridge Festival Orchestra.

Dr. Leo Collins, organist and choir director at the Epiphany, who is also professor of music at Wheelock, will play the organ. Klaus Liepmann, director of the M.I.T. Glee Club, will conduct this repeat performance which was first presented last Sunday at Kresge Auditorium.

Everyone is invited to hear this youthful and enthusiastic presentation of Handel's Christmas oratoria. Admission is free. A silver offering will be taken to help defray expenses.

Winton Club Cabaret "Extra!" Gets Under Way

Mrs. Henry K. Porter of 9 Lawson Road in Winchester is chairman of the 1964 Winton Club Cabaret. Her committee is hard at work in spite of the fast approaching St. Nick, and the Cabaret, entitled "EXTRA!", promises to be the best show yet. The format of the show is based on the hustle, bustle and excitement of putting a newspaper to press. Some old favorites and many new faces and ideas promise to make the 1964 Cabaret the high spot of the winter season.

MRS. HENRY K. PORTER

Perhaps the best news concerning the show is that Dottie and Bob Canessa will be back to direct it. The last show which they directed for us was in 1961. They bring their warmth, inspiration and personal talent to make this an experience that is not only fun for the cast, but always produces a lively and well executed show.

The first important date to mark is Sunday, January 5, 1964 at 7:30 p.m. at the Masonic Hall in Winchester. This is "Tryout Night" for talent for the show. Come down and bring your friends. Everyone is welcome, and if you have never been a part of a musical production you'll never know what fun you have missed until you get in step with the music and join your friends and neighbors in Winchester's only musical production.

Jimmy Mosher and his orchestra will again provide the music for the Cabaret—and those who have been in previous Cabaret performances know how much it means to have Jimmy in the pit adding his talent and encouragement to each act.

Mark the dates: Wednesday, January 29, Thursday, January 30 (Theatre Night). Friday, January 31, Saturday, February 1, Cabaret performances, all at the Winchester Town Hall.

Double Sextette From WHS to Sing For Crittentons

On Friday, December 13th, Mrs. Don S. Greer will open her home to the members and friends of the Winchester Circle of the Florence Crittenton League. The members of the Junior Circle will have a few of their colorful mittens and children's gifts on sale and the Seniors will have a few food items left from the area bazaar of a week ago.

Petit Dejeuner will be served at one o'clock by Mrs. Curtis Ware and her committee. After a brief business meeting Mrs. William Sheets, president of the Florence Crittenton League of Boston will discuss the growth and scope of the National League.

The afternoon will then be turned over to Mr. Wendell S. Withington, music supervisor of the Winchester Schools. He will present "The Double Sextette" from the high school. These young women need no introduction to the people of Winchester. Their rendition of Christmas songs old and new promise a delightful close to a pleasant afternoon.

Coward Shoe, Inc., Profit Sharing Brings Bonus

Herbert Smith, manager of the Coward Shoe branch store at 552 Main Street, has announced that the three staff members at his store are among the approximately 1800 national Coward employees who will receive a profit-sharing bonus from the corporation's plan.

The Coward Shoe, Inc., is an affiliate of Lane Bryant, Inc. It operates 103 stores and specialty shops throughout the country. The bonus totals $200,000 this year, as compared with $180,000 in 1962.

Lane Bryant distributes the bonus solely on the basis of length of service with the company. Each employee with more than one year of service is given one unit and an additional ten per cent for each successive full year of service.

The profit-sharing bonus which originated in 1941, is only one segment of Lane Bryant's extensive Employee Security Program. Associated with Mr. Smith at the local store are Mrs. Robert Colclough, assistant, and Ronald Papile, salesman. The store has enjoyed seven years in Winchester square.

Testimonial For Lt. Ed O'Connell On January 16

A testimonial dinner for retired Police Lieutenant Edward W. O'Connell of Winchester will be held at the Hillview Country Club on Thursday evening, January 16, 1964.

Lieutenant O'Connell recently retired after over 41 years of service on the Winchester Police Department.

Eddie is one of the best-known police officers in this area and highly regarded. The testimonial dinner is expected to be sold out, so any friend of his wishing to be present is urged to obtain tickets without delay.

Girl Scouts Hold Rededication

The Girl Scouts of Cadette Troop 491 welcomed their mothers and ladies from the Home for the Aged to a tea and re-dedication ceremony at Lynch Junior High School recently. Sandwiches, cookies, tea and punch were served by the girls from tables which were attractively decorated by the girls themselves.

At the re-dedication ceremony the guests joined in the Pledge of Allegiance and the singing of "America" and the girls rededicated themselves to Girl Scouting by repeating the promise and laws with a new understanding.

At the court of awards, Mrs. Dennis Heindel, troop leader, awarded badges which had been earned during the past year. Membership stars were given to show one more year of membership in Girl Scouting. Sharon Gerould received her first class badge. Mary Sennott was invested as a new Cadette Girl Scout. The following girls, helped by Mrs. John McLean, assistant leader, took part in the ceremony; Mary Ann Brennan, Nancy Bryan, Sharon Butterworth, Regina Cancelliere, Sharon Gerould, Kathy Heindel, Betty Mae Irwin, Cheryl Kendig, Debbie McLean, Susan Pazolt, Marie Petralia, Cindy Rand and Mary Sennott.

Miss Mary Lou O'Donnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. William O'Donnell of 35 Washington Street, was news editor of the sophomore issue of Tatler, campus newspaper at the College of New Rochelle, which was published this week. She also holds membership in the debating club and the glee club. Miss O'Donnell is a graduate of Winchester High School where she was co-manager of WHS radio station.

Sachems Edge Stoneham 2-1 In Middlesex League Opener

First period goals by forward Barry Johnson and defenseman Bevan O'Callaghan, coming in quick succession after a deflection shot by Frank Seabury had put Stoneham ahead in the opening minutes, turned out to be the deciding margin last Friday night at the North Shore Sports Center, Lynn.

Although Winchester kept the pressure on Spartan goalie Ed Geragosian in the second period, forcing him to make nine saves, they couldn't quite get an insurance goal and had to hold on for a decisive, if not spectacular 2-1 win.

Sachem sophomore goalie Larry Kelly had to spell senior Jerry Hills in the first period when the latter became involved in a mild but unusual misconduct penalty. After the referee skated by and ordered Hills to ignore a broken stick near the net, Jerry innocently but promptly tossed it aside—and it cost him. Kelly, however, filled in for an impressive tenure, and made three important saves.

SACHEM BLUE LINES

Melrose spotted Reading a first period goal before they erupted for five in the next two periods. Football fans might recognize the names of Raiders Dick Verge, Bob Queeney and Jack Turco who have donned skates and provide Melrose with typical potency . . .The Sachems traveled to Framingham last Saturday night where they defeated Newton South 8-0 in a two (fifteen-minute) period exhibition. Forwards George Murphy (5 goals), Barry Johnson (2), and Dave Rowe (1) contributed the scoring punch . . . In the same contest wing Paul Soucek had three assists and Murphy one . . . On Monday afternoon the Sachems tangled with powerhouse New Prep of Cambridge at the Boston Skating Club in another exhibition. Although they came out on the lower end of a 6-1 count, the score is in many ways misleading . . . The Sachems held their own for the better part of two periods, then wearied in the face of New Prep's over-all depth . . . Coach Owen Hughes' boys had previously trimmed both the Harvard and MIT freshmen . . . Hughes is a former B C standout . . . George Murphy scored the lone Sachem goal midway through the first period, giving Winchester a temporary 1-0 lead . . . Forward Ed Cutting again aggravated his injured knee in the Stoneham game and saw no action . . . St. John's of Danvers (another prep school), Winchester's opponent this Friday night, tied Dedham 1-1 last Saturday.

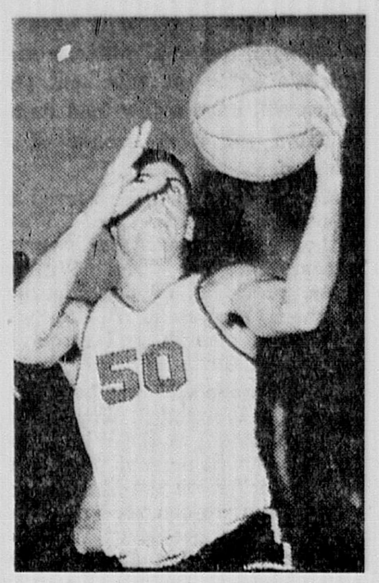
Sachems Down Stubborn Watertown, 59-54

The Winchester High School basketball team started its season last Friday night at the High School with a win over Watertown 59-54. Captain Victor Pappadinis and Pete Fahey led the scoring for Winchester with 16 points each.



SENIOR PETE FAHEY comes down with rebound against Watertown. Fahey shared high scoring honors with Sachem Vic Papadinis. Both boys contributed sixteen points.

In the final quarter with one minute left when Winchester led by one point, Ray Rigney was fouled twice intentionally. He scored all four free throws securing the win. Bob Branley the football team quarterback with only three days of practice with the team, scored seven points.

Al Gallagher paced Watertown with twenty points of which eight were made in the last quarter.

The Junior Varsity team also started their season well with a 51-40 win over the Watertown JV's.

Steve Kajander led the scoring with sixteen points which were all made in the first quarter. Steve Fahey made ten points and Porter Mulford scored six.

Open Track Meet In South Boston

The 19th Annual Indoor First Naval District NEAAU Interscholastic open and novice college club, armed forces track meet, sanctioned by the High School Principals' Athletic Association and the Mass. Department of Education will be held at the Navy Recreation Bldg. 42 (Murry Hall), South Boston, Thursday afternoon, December 26, at 1:00 p.m.

Captain Charles Marinke, USN, commanding officer of the Boston Naval Station, will be host to about 3000 youngsters from all sections of the country. During the past 18 years over 38,000 athletes have competed in this meet.

High School novice events will be: 60-440-880 and one mile run. Special 60 yard dash for 7-8th grades, and special 9th grade 60 yard sprint will be held at 12:30 p.m. The Jack Ryder trophy will be awarded to the outstanding novice. A novice is one who hasn't won a 1-2-3 prize in a state or interscholastic AAU meet.

Open AAU club servicemen and college scholastic events are: 60-440-880 mile run. Admiral Wallace M. Beakley, USN Commandant of the 1st Naval District will award the Admiral's Trophy to the outstanding athlete in the open events. The press, TV and radio experts will select the two winners. There also will be a special 60 yard dash and one-mile run for servicemen, and special 50 yard dash for girls in the Armed Forces. All athletes in Open AAU events must register with Alex Houston, Sec. NEAAU, 150 Causeway Street, Boston.

Entries close with Captain Ralph H. Colson, USNA, Ret., 25 Holmfield Avenue, Mattapan 26, Mass., on Friday midnight, December 13. All schoolboys must have entries signed by their coaches, manager or principal.

1964 Water Ski Nationals To Be Held in Bay State

Massachusetts will see the outstanding water skiers of the nation during the next boating season in the Bay State.

State Director Wilton Vaugh of the Division of Motorboats has received notification that the American Water Ski Association is accepting his invitation to hold the 1964 National Championship in Massachusetts. The Bay State outbid Minnesota and Florida which put up a series of attractive invitations to the Site Selection Committee.

The Championships will be sponsored by the Nipmuc Ski Club and the Webster-Dudley Chamber of Commerce as well as by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The exact date of the Championship Tournament is yet to be determined by the Site Committee but it is certain that it will be held either the third or fourth week in August.

The water ski Slalom, tricks and jumps will be held on Webster Lake. This is the famous lake that is called by the Indians, Lake Chargoggagoggmanchauggagoggchaubunagungamaugg.

The lake covers 1,188 acres and is large enough for 40,000 persons a day to witness the races. It has parking space for upward of 8,000 motor vehicles.

The races will be televised on a national hook-up.

The number of entries will be limited to 250 contestants but they are expected to bring along at least 20,000 persons from all parts of the country.

The action of the Massachusetts Division of Motorboats in bringing the Water Ski Championships here is considered an outstanding accomplishment. It follows the Division's action last year in bringing the National Stock Outboard Races to the Charles River which attracted more than 100,000 spectators.

Cutting, Lawson On Middlesex Star Unit

Victor Lawson, rugged guard, and Ed Cutting, fleet-footed halfback on this year's Winchester High School football team, were chosen for the honorary first team of the league by the league coaches at their recent supper meeting at the Colonial Country Club in Lynnfield.

Both boys were outstanding during the season just past and Cutting had a particularly fine game against Woburn on Thanksgiving, scoring three touchdowns and being selected the outstanding back in the game for Winchester.

Lawson was especially strong on defense and often broke through to nail runners for substantial losses. He was an especially durable player, being seldom removed from the lineup because of injury.

Anatomy Of An Undefeated Season

In the midst of complaints and rumblings of discontent, Winchester High's sophomore squad emerged unscathed this season. They played seven games, and won seven. No opponent scored more than one touchdown against them. Coach George Watson lists the following players as those who saw the most action: LE, John Dolan; LT, Rich Rogers; LG, John Kimball; C, Gordon Sewell, Mike Cosgrove; RG, Larry Kelly, Ken Branley; RT, Bill Shields; RE, John Doherty, Peter Mawn; QB, Whit Gay; LHB, Ed Cushman, John Collins; FB, Pete Blaisdell, Dave Rowe; RHB, John Duffy.

Here is the season, exactly as it was drawn up by a consensus of coach and players:

Belmont (28-0): Dave Rowe passed for one score, ran back a punt for another; did the kicking and directed the offense. Kelly outstanding lineman. Rowe and Kelly promoted to varsity; not to play with sophs until Woburn game.

Lexington (16-8): Pete Blaisdell and John Duffy ran very well and were strong defensively.

Stoneham (8-6): Had great difficulty containing the Stoneham offense. Gay made key interceptions. Blaisdell scored on 70-yard sweep late in fourth period. Ed Cushman plunged for the extra points.

Melrose (12-0): Duffy's running and pass receiving and good defensive line play did it. Whit Gay again helped out with interceptions. Team made few mistakes—not a single penalty against us.

Wakefield (14-6): Scored on long runs by Cushman and Collins. Extra points by Bill Shields who recovered fumble in end zone. Game ended with Wakefield deep in our territory. Again only one or two penalties.

Woburn (14-6): Game played after long layoff because of bad weather. Both teams ragged. We had several touchdowns called back. Blaisdell ran very well. Defense and offense hit especially hard; several Woburn players shaken up. Rowe and Kelly returned to help in the victory. Rowe ran kickoff back for touchdown after Woburn had closed gap to 8-6.

Reading (12-6): Again game played after a week of bad weather. Not sharp. John Duffy ran openinig kickoff for touchdown; he later intercepted a pass to set up the second score by Whit Gay on a quarterback sneak. Dolan played well on defense.

Season-Long Standouts were John Kimball at offensive guard and linebacker; Larry Kelly for the games he played (Belmont, Woburn and Reading); Peter Mawn, a small end who was especially effective at rushing the passer; Whit Gay, who was converted to quarterback this year and did a good job; and, finally, an over-all plug for the line—both offense and defense.

VIC LAWSON

Vic Lawson and Ed Cutting, recently selected to the Middlesex League's all-star first team, were also generally named for honorable mention on most of the all-scholastic teams. Both boys are highly competitive athletes; also play hockey and baseball together, and hope to further their education next year . . . Lawson, team captain in hockey, is a steady, persistent defenseman; the kind of player who adds that certain grain of maturity to a squad . . . Coach Frank Finigan is looking for a season to better his 8-5-1 record of last year. Melrose will be the team to beat. The league favorites clash on Monday, December 30 at 6:20 p.m. . . . "They like to see us at the North Shore Sports Center in Lynn," says Frank. "Melrose is first in drawing fans and we're second. Winchester is especially appreciated because we attract a good number of adult fans" . . . Concord-Carlisle is a new Middlesex League entry this year, making a total of nine teams. They feature two freshmen, including both goalies.

Sachem Wrestling Coach this year is Gene Bouley, a Brown alumnus who gets the most out of his charges. Exclaimed grid co-captain-elect John Stavros after a 45-minute workout: "Boy, this is harder than football." Then he promptly went and talked to trainer Lou Goddu . . . A Fall Sports Banquet will be held on Wednesday, December 18 at 5:30 p.m. at Winchester High School for the issuance of letters and the award of the Doc Hindes Trophy . . . Melrose Tackle Art Stratton, everybody's all-scholastic this season, remembers a tackle he made on Mike Bellino three years ago to preserve a 24-22 win as the highlight of his young career . . . Five members of the Sons of Italy made the trip down to Philadelphia last week to see the annual Army-Navy spectacular. They were: Gaspar Galuffo, Dom Provinzano, Boss Dattilo, Dick Tofuri and Dom Galello.

MISS DEB

Q. I overheard a couple of the girls talking after gym class and they said I'm a "poor sport." Frankly, the problem is that I'm good at sports and I always win. Do I have to try to lose to win friends?

A. You don't have to be a loser to be a good sport. By all means play the game as well as you can. But, if and when you win — don't crow. Just glow modestly. Your score for bragging would be zero.

Q. My grades are generally above average, but I have one subject — algebra — that's big trouble and a big bore. How can you study a subject you just plain don't like?

A. Chances are the reason you don't like algebra is that you don't understand it. Try talking your problem over with your teacher — or schedule a session with a classmate who rates "A's" in the subject. Once you've done this, try this three-point plan for attacking a problem subject: 1. Budget your time; 2. Shorten your study sessions; 3. Find a quiet atmosphere. Put yourself on a regular study schedule with short (but frequent!) study sessions. If you study in a quiet place, such as your room or the library, you'll find it easier to keep your attention on the books. Once your algebra grade average begins to climb, we bet your interest will too.

Q. I've read articles which give the correct hair style for oval faces, heart-shaped, triangle, etc., etc., etc. How can I tell for sure which shape I have? My mirror just doesn't give me a definite answer.

A. Agreed, when you've looked at the same face in the mirror for umpteen years, it's hard to be objective. But here's a tissue trick that may solve your problem. It takes two to do it — you and a friend. Cut single Kleenex tissues into ovals, circles, triangles, rectangles, squares and hearts. Cut them just a bit smaller than your face. Pin your hair back, and hold each cut tissue up against your face. Your friend can tell which of these shapes fits you. Incidentally, the face-shape test makes great fun at a party.

Q. What is the flower etiquette for a prom corsage? I'm never sure how to wear it.

A. Flowers are worn the way they grow — petals up. You can pin your corsage on either shoulder, but for dancing, flowers stay fresh longer when pinned to the right shoulder. If your dress is strapless, pin flowers at your waist (right side again) or to your purse.

Army Offers "Good Deal"

Tired of this hot-again-cold-again weather? Want to escape to warmer climates for the rest of the winter? Well, then, Sergeant Fred T. Nixon's the man you want to see.

According to the sergeant, all young men enlisting during the rest of the month of December will be sent to Fort Jackson, South Carolina for their basic training. Enlistees usually go to Fort Dix, New Jersey, and will probably be sent there again starting on January 1st, he said, but all December enlistees will go to the "Sunny South.

This special opportunity does not affect any of the usual "options" available to enlistees. In fact, Sergeant Nixon says, there are probably a few more schools and special assignments open now than during most of the year: "We still offer—and guarantee before enlistment—your choice of up to a hundred career fields, schools, and/or assignment to Europe, Alaska, Hawaii, or the Far East."

If you're interested in getting that "Carolina tan" along with the chance to serve your country in a field of your choice, contact Sergeant Nixon at 49 High Street, Medford or call him at EX 6-5777.

REMEMBER THE ROTARY AUCTION. It's time to help us fill-up THE BARN. Just call the NEW AUCTION NUMBER PA 9-4108, anytime, day or night. tf

The Dade Safari

Last week-end was the occasion of the annual safari to the summer home of Mr. Ernest B. Dade, in Guilford on Lake Winnipesaukee in New Hampshire.

Among those who attended, "Al" Elliott, "Nick" Fitzgerald, "Charlie" Murphy and Mr. Dade there was but one thing on which all were agreed. It was cold! As a matter of fact it was so cold that the intrepid hunters spent their entire time in indoor sports, Mr. Elliott having appeared with a round deck of cards, claiming he had never had a "a square deal" since he had been playing cards at Dade's.

There was the usual cheap talk about the culinary efforts of the group, not a little of which was directed at the eggs, which were prepared for consumption by Mr. Fitzgerald. In extenuation of his lack of success Mr. Fitzgerald could only point out that a cursory glance at the plates around the board of a morning showed no eggs apparent, and the "proof of the pudding" Mr. Fitzgerald claimed is definitely in "the eating."

There is really little to report in connection with the safari! Mr. Dade acquired no more fish, either mounted or otherwise, and Mr. Murphy let the bear alone that has been bothering him these many years. "Murph" will always claim he could get the bear if the latter would only wait while he "got a rock" to plug at him.

Evidently the wild life of the district did not take the hunters too seriously since there were deer tracks all around the Dade cottage in the morning, mostly around the room in which Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Murphy were sleeping soundly on twin beds with electric blankets.

All the safarists agree on one thing, Mr. Dade is a very Class A host, and knows exactly what is due the likes of the group that spent the last week-end at his cottage.

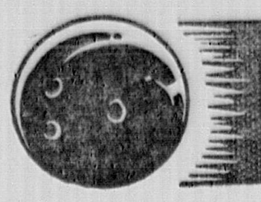
WHS Six Meets St. John's Prep Friday at 9

Two straight wins safely tucked under its belt already, the Winchester band of Indians will meet St. John's Prep of Danvers in a hockey exhibition Friday night at the Sports Center in Lynn at 9 o'clock.

Thus Winchester fills in an off week in which it drew the bye in the Middlesex Hockey League. In that competition, the Indians opened last week by edging rugged Stoneham 2-1.

St. John's Prep holds a 1-1 tie with Dedham, recorded in last Saturday night's North Shore Jamboree.

Friday night's action opens with Woburn meeting Swampscott at 7 and Malden Catholic facing Salem at 8 in two North Shore League games.



BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

Last week's games brought the close of the first half of the schedule and gaining championship roll-off positions, which will be held later, were Moose Bellino's Notre Dame team, Navy led by Ritchie Riga and Bates captained by Bob Fiore. On Tuesday of this week the last half of the schedule got underway and results will be forwarded in this column next week.

Notre Dame was on top throughout the first half with tremendous bowling displayed by Capt. Moose Bellino. The pressure was off the last time out because Moose hit for mere strings of 99-86-103. He finished second for average with 115.5, holds the record for high single of 164 and his team had the high single record of 575.

Bates split with N.D. last week at 4-4 which dropped them from second to third place and a playoff position. Capt. Bob Fiore was top performer for Bates with 100-107-97.

Navy was in third place a week ago and climbed one notch to second after whipping Army by an 8-0 score. The loss dropped Army from fourth to sixth. Going strong for the victors were Capt. Ritchie Riga who hit for 115-137-110 and was top bowler for the first half of the schedule finishing with a high average of 118.1 and this last time out he received assistance from Frank Provinzano who had 90-117-102. Army's big guns were provided by Capt. Choppers Gangi 106-117-92 and Correction Fiore 102-106-98.

Boston College took Harvard 8-0 to move from sixth to fourth while Harvard went from ninth to eleventh. Capt. Tony Saraco led his group with 113-98-107 and close behind was Andy Buzzotta with 106-106-93. Hokie Procopio came through for Harvard with strings of 95-105-103 but more help was needed.

Last place Alabama pulled a surprise by taking fifth place Yale 6-2. Having a big hand in the win were Jay Cammarata 119-122-123, Bill Maggio 114-108-100 and Capt. Dick Tofuri 107-110-103. The only 300 bowler for Yale was Capt. Richie Bucci with 108-107-96.

Next to last place Penn also did well in defeating seventh place California 6-2. Penn's 300 hitters were Paul Amico 96-111-102 and Carl Bertolucci 93-119-95.

Eighth place Georgetown dropped a 2-6 decision to Holy Cross who moved from eleventh to tenth spot. Having good aim for the victors were Capt. Muskie Tofuri 108-116-112 and Jake Ciarcia 104-115-91. Hitting the magic mark for Georgetown were Tony Chefalo 114-90-105 and Capt. Joe Marrone 107-107-92.

Maryland had some good bowling to hold twelfth place when Jim Faietta hit for 112-121-109, Tony Bavuso 112-126-94, and Gaspar Lentine 90-104-112. Top rollers for St. Mary's were Capt John Mangano 109-106-105 and Rudy Fiore 104-116-98.

Bring on that second half!

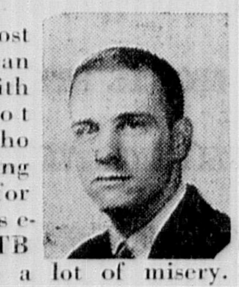
CHRISTMAS SEALS



While most of us can breathe with ease, not those who have a lung disease, for emphysema and TB can cause a lot of misery. Much has been done . . . there's more to learn . . . let's make it everyone's concern. Research, X-rays and treatment will go on if you help pay the bill.

S.O.I. Women

Unhappiness and happiness certainly prevailed last week at Strike Lanes. Newports' upset was Kools gain and again we view Kools in first place and just one week to the end of the first half.

I observed Rose Fiore's tears when teammate Joann Mistretta missed a beautiful spare. Your reporter asked why and found out that at that time every pin was needed so the Kools could get back on top. They made it. Good luck to all concerned.

There seemed to be a bit of noise at alleys 1 and 2. It was the Winstons' team trying to cheer their captain Ginger Maggio on to 300 or over. Nice try Ginger, you were only short four pins.

Ginger is always in there pitching. With your determination you will make it too, Ginger. With all due respect I say good luck, worthy venerable.

K. of C.

Only two more weeks are left to complete the first half of the K. of C. schedule. The Rams have a commanding lead for the top spot but second place is still up for grabs.

The Eagles, Bears, Giants, Colts and Packers all have a mathematical chance to finish runner-up. Top three teams automatically qualify for the year-end roll-offs.

Last Thursday, Gunner Lynch gave the first public performance of his "Chinese Movement." This proved to be so entertaining that Joe probably will repeat it in the future if given the proper stimulation. John Mulrenan appears to have recovered from the vicious attack he endured a few weeks ago. The anti-rabies shot he took probably saved his life.

Boob Fiore rolled a 336 last week while Joe Grunt came up with 326 to maintain their places in the top 10.

Larry Cullen paced Peterson with an 8-point win over San-O with his 342 triple. Al Latorella's 335 for the losers was in vain. Win. Esso swept 6 points from Trefrey, Alan Motors and Woburn Carpet split 4-4. Jimmy Fantozzi's 340 wasn't enough as Cradock, paced by Fred's 371, took 6 points from Suburban. YOUR Pharmacist SPEAKS

By: Fred McCormack

Our looking into the subjects of disease and medicine brings to mind a whimsically philosophical bit as follows:

You have two chances—one of getting a germ and one of not. And if you get the germ—you have two chances, one of getting the disease and one of not. And if you get the disease—you have two chances, one of dying and one of not. And if you die, you still have two chances.

There is no chance, however, that you will receive anything but friendly, courteous service at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY. Scholarship Gifts Reported Tuesday By Foundation

"The goal of the Winchester Scholarship Foundation nearly became a reality in 1963," reported Otto E. Schaefer, Scholarship Committee chairman, at the 17th annaul meeting of the Foundation Tuesday evening, December 10 at Winchester High School.

Acting as general chairman in the absence of Neil H. Borden who is presently abroad, Mr. Schaefer conducted the business meeting and gave a detailed report which revealed that 32 Winchester High School graduates were aided financially to further their education through the Foundation's work in 1963.

Further aid totalling $5450 from Foundation Funds was also granted High School graduates who have completed one or more years of higher education: William Maselunas (M.I.T.); Robert Carroll (Boston College); John Heaton (Tufts); Virginia Lawton (College of New Rochelle); Robert Lindsey (New York University); David Lundin (Tufts); Joan McNally (Chandler) Ellen McNally (University of Massachusetts); Carol McKenna (University of Massachusetts); Jane Manley (Boston University); Marie Enright (Massachusetts College of Art); Nancy Brown (Plymouth Teachers College); Carole Lawson (Colby Junior College) and Edward Niblock (Harvard). Without this further assistance these students would have found it very difficult to continue their education, those attending the meeting were told.

Mr. Schaefer explained that the Scholarship Committee of the Foundation in cooperation with the School Committee also makes recommendations for recipients of the Jere Downs scholarships and the Philip J. Blank Scholarship. In this way duplication of effort is eliminated and every qualified high school graduate who needs financial assistance is certain to receive it. These awards amounted to $3750

The meeting heard the financial statement of the Foundation submitted by Charles W. Butler, treasurer and the finance committee of Levon K. Bookakian, chairman pertaining to the public solicitation of funds for the scholarship Foundation. Then the meeting heard the report of the nominating committee.

Mrs. Ralph T. Jope presented the following slate of officers for 1964: Neil H. Borden, general chairman; Charles W. Butler, treasurer; Mrs. Helen E. Chaput, secretary; William J. Speers, trustee; Hartley Rogers, Jr., scholarship committee; John A. Dolan, chairman of the nominating committee; William S. Lippman, nominating committee; Mrs. George B. Redding, nominating committee; Levon K. Boodakian, finance committee chairman; Henry Van Dyke, finance committee vice chairman; Mrs. J. M. Harrington, Jr. publicity. The following five members are to serve on the general committee: Mrs. Robert Moore Smith, Mrs. William G. Urmson, Jr., Arthur W. P. Hughes, Clarence S. Lyons and Andrew J. Tambone.

The above officers and committee members together with many others whose terms did not expire this year will work to insure the continued success of this worthwhile town-wide project in its 18th year of fund raising to give maximum opportunity to all Winchester High School graduates to further their education regardless of personal financial limitations.

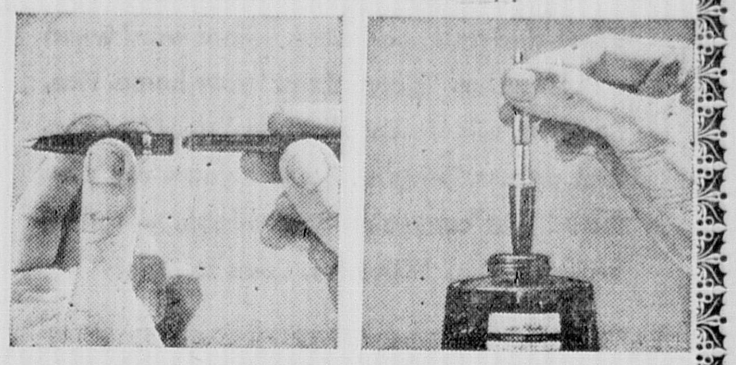
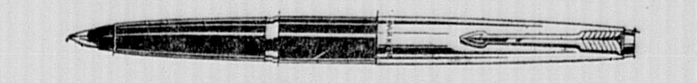
New kind of pen for people who are always running out of ink

1. Slip in giant size Quink cartridge and write up to 10,000 words.

2. Insert converter. Fill from ink bottle as you would ordinary pen.

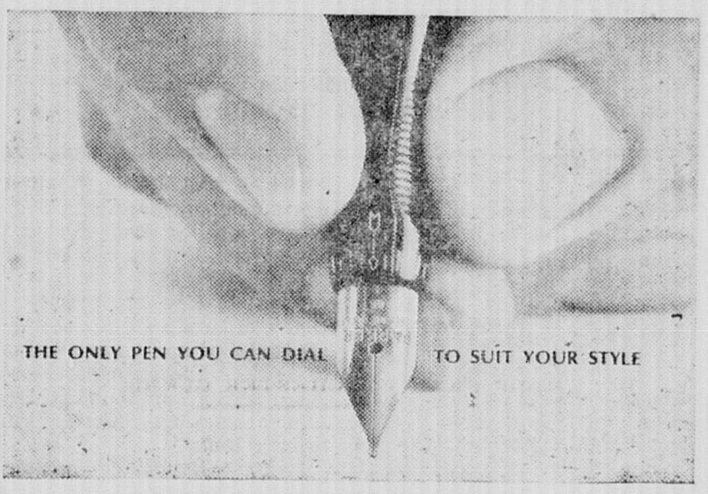


This pen doesn't leave you with a single excuse for not writing with a fountain pen. It won't let you run out of ink. Load it with a leak-proof cartridge or fill it from an ink bottle. Choice of seven solid 14K gold points. And the Parker 45 "convertible" costs only $5.



The new Parker 45 "convertible"

ENTIRELY NEW IDEA IN FOUNTAIN PENS



You can dial the point to fit your writing angle

The New VP* adjusts to you: Pick it up and your fingertips automatically slip into a comfortable position, thanks to the gently contoured grip. Dial the big, solid 14K gold point until the tip touches the paper at just the angle you want. Then you can write with more ease and comfort than you ever thought possible. The VP gives you a choice of 15 instantly replaceable points, from a needle point to an extra-broad executive. Stop in for a free booklet "How to Pick the Right Point for a VP."

New Parker VP* (VERY PERSONAL) $10

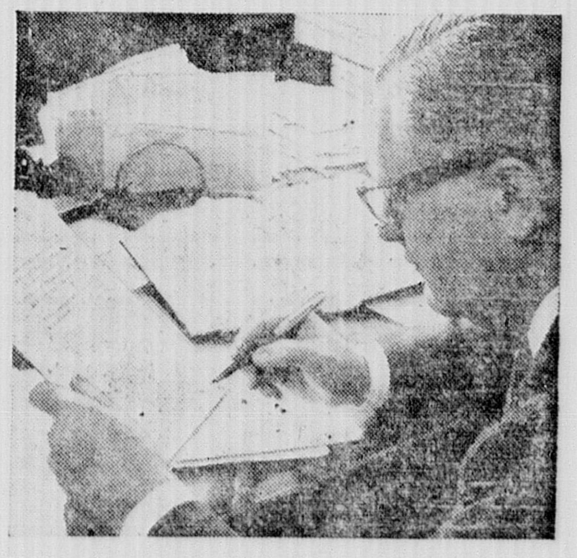
Give the pen that does the writer proud



Here's the perfect gift for people who take pride in their handwriting. A Parker 61 does far more than merely make marks on paper. It captures the personality of the writer, responds to his every touch.

Fills itself by capillary action – even makes its own ink out of water. Proved leakproof, even in a jet at 40,000 feet. A really thoughtful gift. $15 to $150.

Christmas Eve Caroling on The Town Common

Once again the Fortnightly will sponsor the annual caroling on the Common, starting at 7:00 p.m.

Mary Ranton Witham, organist and choir director at the Unitarian Church, will direct the carol singing. A brass ensemble, inspired by trombonist Robert Eddy, Jr., will provide an accompaniment for the voices. Other members of the Winchester High School Band, John Burrows and Peter Moulton will accompany on trumpets and Lanz Grenzeback on the French horn. Miss Gwen Eugley will sing a solo, "O Holy Night."

This is one community affair that can be shared by people from all churches and from all precincts of town. Children especially enjoy this annual occasion, so be sure they bring their bells to ring out "Jingle Bells."

Every Winchester person will find it a delightful way to preface Christmas Eve. All ages are cordially invited to lend their voices for the half hour of caroling.

Without further personal invitation it is hoped that many, many lovers of Christmas cheer, both young and old, will make a special effort to be on the Common at 7:00 p.m. on Christmas Eve to usher in the Christmas holiday with carol singing.

Is your young child having difficulty with his spelling? Ask about the pre cut letters we have and make your own alphabet sets. Inexpensive enough to purchase several letters of one kind for sentence building. At the Winchester Star.

Mrs. Addie B. Clarke

Mrs. Addie B. Clarke, widow of Charles E. Clarke, who had been making her home in Winchester with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Redding, at 10 Cranston Road, died Thursday, December 5.

Mrs. Clarke was born December 21, 1875, in Somerville. She grew up in that city, was graduated from Somerville High School and from the old Salem Normal School in the class of 1894. For 10 years, until her marriage, she taught at the Agassiz School in Cambridge.

Mrs. Clarke was married in 1906 to Charles E. Clarke who was in the coal business in Boston with H. N. Hartwell. Mr. Clarke died in 1958. His widow was a member of the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Medford, and in her more active years, a member also of the Woman's Alliance of the church.

Besides Mrs. Redding, she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Burton T. Ellis of Ventura, California, and Mrs. George F. Glavey of Gaithersburg, Maryland; a brother, Arthur W. Byam of West Medford; three grandchildren, Mrs. Stanley Grover of New York City, Mrs. Malcolm Carlisle of Rockville, Md., Clarke N. Ellis, who is the American Consul in Munich, Germany; and by five great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Unitarian-Universalist Church in Medford. A former pastor, Rev. Robert D. Richardson, of Concord officiated. Burial was in Spring Grove Cemetery, Andover.

James J. Castadoro

James J. Castadoro of 114 Main Street, retired foreman for the New England Confectionery Company, died Thursday, December 5, at his home after a long illness. He had, during his illness been hospitalized for 16 weeks.

Mr. Castadoro was born in Boston and grew up in that city. He had lived for five years in Winchester, and previously had been for 40 years a resident of Medford. He was for 50 years in the employ of the New England Confectionery Company and was at the time of his retirement in 1956 a foreman in the company shop.

He leaves his wife, the former Mary Benedetti; two sons, Edward and Alexander Castadoro; a sister, Pia; and two brothers, Vincent and Alberti Castadoro.

The funeral was held Saturday morning from the Fitzpatrick Funeral Home on Governor's Avenue in Medford. Requiem high Mass was celebrated at St. Mary's Church at 11 o'clock. Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

Mrs. Jennie C. Hastings

Mrs. Jennie C. Hastings, widow of William T. Hastings and mother of Mrs. Katherine H. Gibson of this town, died suddenly December 7 at the Winchester Hospital after a brief illness. Her death was wholly unexpected. She had been living for the past seven years with Mrs. Gibson at 12 Dana Avenue.

Mrs. Hastings was the daughter of Charles, and Margaret K. (Clark) McDonald. She was born January 2, 1875, in Baltimore. Her husband died in 1935.

Besides Mrs. Gibson Mrs. Hastings leaves a son, William T. Hastings, Jr., of Norfolk, Virginia, and a sister, Mrs. Edith McDonald Rice of Stoneham.

Services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Kimball Chapel on Church Street. The Rev. H. Newton Clay, pastor of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church, officiated. Burial took place on Tuesday at Loudon Park Cemetery in Baltimore.

Mrs. Geneva L. Salt

Mrs. Geneva L. Salt of 135 Cambridge Street, died suddenly in her sleep Monday night, December 9. Though she had been in failing health she was well the day previous to her passing, her death coming as a severe shock to her family and friends.

Mrs. Salt was 66 years old and a native of Somerville. She grew up in Somerville and was educated in the Somerville schools, coming to Winchester 24 years ago.

Mrs. Salt's husband, the late John M. Salt, died in 1962. She is survived by a son, John R. Salt of Winchester, with whom she made her home.

Funeral services will be held this Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Lane Funeral Home with the Rev. John Hill, assistant at the Church of the Epiphany, officiating. Burial will be in Wildwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Alice Rodgers Hamilton

Family funeral services were held Wednesday, December 4, at the H. Sampson, Funeral Home in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for Mrs. Alice Rodgers Hamilton, widow of T. Herbert Hamilton and mother of Mrs. C. Lee Todd of Winchester.

Mrs. Hamilton died in Winchester on Monday, December 2. Besides Mrs. Todd she is survived by three sons, T. Herbert, and J. Rodgers of Pittsburgh; Richard P. Hamilton of Alliance, Ohio; also by 13 grandchildren. Interment was in Pittsburgh.

Miss Marie L. Stillings

Miss Marie L. Stillings of 30 Mt. Pleasant Street, died Sunday, December 8, at her home after a long illness. For the past twenty years she had been confined to the house by arthritis. During that time she was in the care of Miss Peggy Singleton, who made her home with Miss Stillings.

Miss Stillings was born April 12, 1876, in Boston, the daughter of Ephraim, and Celia (Kemp) Stillings. She lived most of her life in New England, with the exception of ten years which she spent in Tennessee. As a young woman she studied the violin in special lessons at the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Miss Stillings made her home in West Harwich for many years, coming from that town to Winchester to live in the old house on Mt. Pleasant Street, which her grandfather had bought and left to her cousin, Henry G Ray. Her nearest living relative is Mrs. Delcevare King of Quincy.

Memorial services will be held on Sunday, December 15, at Meyer Chapel of the Unitarian Church. The minister, Dr. Robert A. Storer, will officiate. Burial will be in the family lot in Wildwood Cemetery.

Donato Vespucci

Donato Vespucci of 62 Irving Street, a retired leather worker and long-time resident of Winchester, died on Friday, December 6, at the Winchester Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Vespucci was born 83 years ago in Italy. He had made his home in Winchester for 60 years and had been a leather worker in his active years, working for the old line firm of Beggs & Cobb for 35 years before his retirement 16 years ago. He was a member of the Winchester Christopher Columbus Club.

Mr. Vespucci's wife, Filomena, died some years ago. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. John DeFrederico of Southbridge and Mrs. John Petitti of Winchester; four sons, Gabriel, Jr., of Southbridge, Anthony J., Dominick, John and Bernard Vespucci, all of Winchester; 10 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The funeral was held Monday morning at 8:15 from the Lane Funeral Home with solemn high Mass of requiem celebrated at St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

"Rhinoceros" At Charles in Final Three Weeks

Ionesco's satirical comedy, "Rhinoceros" second production of the season at the Charles Playhouse is now in its final three weeks, and will end a scheduled six week run on Sunday, December 22nd.

Michael Murray directed the avant-garde play with Herbert Voland, Robert Barend, Judy Harris, J. Frank Lucas and James Beard in leading roles.

Rodgers and Hart's musical romp, "The Boys From Syracuse" is next at the Charles. Winner of the New York Critics Vernon Rice Award and the off-Broadway "Obie" Award, the newly- revised musical will open at the Playhouse on December 26. The entire production will be directed and choreographed by Neal Kenyon, and will play for six weeks at the resident professional theatre. Mr. Kenyon staged the musical success, "Little Mary Sunshine," at the Playhouse last season.

Frank Sugrue and Michael Murray are presenting the musical hit, "The Boys From Syracuse."

AAA Proposes Cutting Auto Excise Tax Rate

The motor vehicle excise tax rate would be cut in half under legislation filed last week by Sen. William X. Wall of Lawrence for the Massachusetts Division of the American Automobile Association.

"Purpose of this proposal is to reduce the sky-high taxes our motorists are now paying," said Sen. Wall. According to the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, Massachusetts ranks first of all 50 states in the total amount of taxes and fees on passenger automobiles.

"Our bill would result in an annual saving for motorists of about $45 million, in reducing the present excise tax rate of $66 per $1,000 valuation to $33."

Sen. Wall pointed out that the reason for lowering the excise tax rate to $33 is so that it will correspond to the adjusted property tax rate. Presently motor vehicles are assessed at full market value but the rate is tied to the property tax rate which is assessed on 50% of full market value.

Cerebral Palsy "33 Minute March" Drive In January

A goal of $150,000 has been set for the 1964 campaign of United Cerebral Palsy of Greater Boston, Herbert L. Connolly, president of the association announced recently.

The campaign will be climaxed with the house-to-house "53 Minute March" when 20,000 volunteer marchers will call on their neighbors. The date of the march is Sunday, January 12th. The term "53 Minute March" underlines the fact that cerebral palsy strikes someone every 53 minutes.

"The sum of $150,000 is based on a carefully considered study of our needs in the coming year," Mr. Connolly said. "Our obligation to the cerebral palsied children and adults we must serve calls for this amount as a minimum. We must provide them with the best possible treatment and habilitation services. We must give them the help that will enable them to reach their maximum degree of independence."

"In addition to our local services," Mr. Connolly noted, "we also contribute to the National United Cerebral Palsy Research program, which since its founding has invested more than six million dollars in research. Over one hundred research projects supported by United Cerebral Palsy are going forward in leading universities and laboratories. In these lie the greatest measure of our hope for more effective treatment and eventual prevention of this most multi-crippling affliction of all."

"I feel confident," Mr. Connolly said, "That the people of our communities will answer generously to our theme: "If they lived next door, would you help?"

Commissioner Robert F. Murphy today announced that starting Monday, December 9, and remaining in effect until after the Holiday Season, the Metropolitan District Police will put into action a "beefed up" safety patrol of the Southeast Expressway.

Senior Forum

"Can We Still Keep Christmas?" is the question that Reverend Allen C. Hackett will ask the members of the Senior Forum this Sunday, December 15, at the regular morning chapel service. Mr. Hackett is at present working for the Mass. Congregational Christian Coference on a program, coordinating 120 Congregational churches in the greater Boston area and trying to help solve the many problems of the urban church.

The chaplain for this service is Jeffrey Russell assisted by Stephen Butterfield. The deacons are Robert Hudson and Greg Davis; the ushers, Robert Brunkhorst and Stephen Carleton.

All members of Forum are looking forward to the Mistletoe Dance on Saturday, December 21 at 8:00 p.m. in Chidley Hall. The Social Committee under the chairmanship of Jeffrey Strout and Kandy McConnell are working hard to make this a "gala affair."

Marine R. W. Bond Is Off To Far East Service

Marine Private First Class Richard W. Bond, son of Mrs. Marcia E. Bond of 7 Governors Avenue completed combat training recently while serving with the First Battalion, Fifth Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, California.

The six-week combat training was designed to increase combat efficiency prior to deployment to the Far East. The training ranged from firing of 81mm mortars to guerrilla warfare.

He left for the Far East November 7.

Morgan Memorial Launches Appeal

Morgan Memorial and Goodwill Industries today launched an urgent appeal for $100,000 to meet "the increasing needs of the handicapped and underprivileged."

Henry E. Helms, executive secretary, in announcing the campaign, said that "poverty-stricken people are around us in every area, many without adequate food, clothing, furniture and heat."

Funds are also needed to guarantee the continuing operation of Goodwill Industries, employing 450 handicapped people at jobs and job training, he said.

"The task of relocating our headquarters and big Goodwill Industries building because of the new turnpike extension has been a tremendous burden during the past few months," Helms said. "In addition, we lost six of our ten buildings because of the turnpike coming into the city. All of our nine agencies serving homeless boys, youth and children's center, the nursery for babies of working mothers, and others serving all ages, needs and creeds, are continuing. All are meeting increased appeals for aid."

Home Ec Girls Enjoy Trip To First National

Seventy McCall Junior High girls of Mrs. Theodore Schwenke's 7th grade home economics classes were guests recently of First National Stores headquarters. Forty of the girls visited the plant in Somerville one afternoon two weeks ago and a second group of thirty girls were there last week for an afternoon.

"We could almost follow our noses from one department to another," remarked one student.

In the bakeries, they watched cherry pies by the hundreds going into traveling ovens, coming out the other end golden brown and piping hot.

One thing that interested the girls was seeing women put frosting on coffee cakes. One package after another moved under a nozzle that reminded them of a garden spray. Icing oozed from the nozzle, spreading thin ribbons across the top of each coffee cake. Immediately after, a roller gently spread the icing evenly over the top.

They also watched bread making, from beginning to end—mixing, rising, baking to cooling and wrapping — 5,000 loaves of bread every hour! Also packaging of salted peanuts, peanut butter, coffee and mayonnaise, men blending teas and roasting coffee, and women packing tea bags.

One of their most interesting stops was at the product controi laboratory, where they saw food chemists and techincians analyzing food items to see that they consistenly meet requirements of the U. S. Government and First National's own rigid specifications—on flavor, texture, color, consistency, appearance and other factors for every item.

Back in the bus, the McCall Junior High girls dove into packages of cup cakes given them at the end of each visit. Probably none of the cakes reached home. "We walked miles," one of the girls told Mrs. Schwenke, "and we're hungry!"

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning Is Big Winter Car Danger

The dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning were called to the attention of Massachusetts motorists recently by Registrar of Motor Vehicles James R. Lawton.

Carbon monoxide, which causes more deaths than any other poisoning known to man, is especially dangerous during the winter months.

The Registrar offered the following checklist, based on a report of the National Safety Council, to avoid a carbon monoxide accident:

1. Check all automobile exhaust systems ergularly.
2. Never allow a motor vehicle to run in a closed garage or unventilated space.
3. Shut off the engine when sitting in a parked car for more than a few minutes.
4. Never drive with all the windows closed.
5. In slow-moving heavy traffic, or while travelling through tunnels, keep air intakes closed and remain a good distance behind the vehicle in front of you to prevent intakes of large amounts of carbon monoxide into your own car.
6. If you feel sleepy while driving, stop at once, get out of the car, and breathe fresh air. The cause of drowsiness may be carbon monoxide. Resume driving with the windows open.

The Registrar also set forth the National Safety Council's list of first aid instructions in case of carbon monoxide poisoning:

1. Remove the victim to fresh air immediately and start artificial respiration at once.
2. Immediately call a doctor and also call the fire or police department.
3. Continue artificial respiration for at least two hours or more.
4. Keep the victim warm with blankets or covering.
5. If emergency breathing equipment is available, use it for at least 15 or 30 minutes after natural breathing returns.
6. Keep the victim warm once he starts to breathe again.
7. By no means let the victim drink coffee or tea—or any other stimulant.
8. Aid the victim's circulation by rubbing arms and legs.
9. Urge the patient to rest and recover slowly to avoid any strain on the heart.

Said Registrar Lawton: "Carbon monoxide poisoning can kill within a few minutes. If a victim remains unconscious while breathing carbon monoxide, lasting permanent damage can result."

Marycliff Honored

Marycliff Academy received congratulations from the Committee on Affiliation of Catholic University in the November bulletin on Secondary Education published by them.

"The Rector and the Committee on Affiliation are honored to extend sincere congratulations to the seven affiliates who this year celebrate the Golden Anniversary of their affiliation with the Catholic University of America. We gratefully acknowledge their fifty years of unbroken contribution to the work of affiliation in particular and to Catholic education in general," read the notice.

Marycliff Academy, conducted by the Religious of Christian Education, is the school in Massachusetts to be so honored.

In 1914, Mother Aubert, R.C.E., the then Reverend Mother, applied for and received the privilege of affiliation with Catholic University.

Fifteen schools throughout the country became affiliates in May or in October of this year, the bulletin reported.

Traditional Christmas Plants

Christmas is just a few short weeks away and there are three or four plants which traditionally change hands during the Christmas season.

The Poinsettia, (Euphorbia pulcherrima), is probably the most popular of all the Yuletide plants. The common name was derived from that of a one time minister to Mexico, Joel R. Poinsette, who discovered the plant in Mexico during 1820.

In warm climates, the plants are treated as evergreen shrubs. They are distinguished by large terminal bracts of fiery scarlet leaves which are shown from December until February.

In the modern home, the plant will do best in a warm and humid spot which receives ample light. When the leaves begin to yellow and drop, water should be withheld slowly. When the plant is completely dry, it should be stored without water in a temperature of about 50 to 60 degrees.

In May, cut the stems back to within two buds of the soil-line and sink the pot in a protected sunny place in the garden. New growth will appear soon; during late July, the plants should be pinched back. If the leaves have a yellow tinge to them, add a cup of liquid manure; too much of any kind of fertilizer, however, promotes soft growth.

The plant should be brought indoors during mid-September. In order for the large bracts, which are commonly regarded as "the flowers" to form, the plant must be in full sun.

The beautiful Cyclamen is another plant which is associated with the Christmas season. It is a member of the Primulaceae Family and is a native of Persia. The base of the name Cyclamen is kyklos, meaning circular, referring to the round leaves.

The Cyclamen has beautiful flowers in pinks, reds, and white, which remain open for a long time; however, the plant is difficult to keep over the summer for a number of reasons. One, the absolute maximum temperature for the area in which they are grown is 50 degrees. Two, bright light is needed. Not only would it be hard for the home gardener to maintain an area at 50 degrees, but sun shining in, which inevitably raises the temperature, makes the job even more difficult.

It is, never-the-less, worthwhile to at least try to bring the plant into bloom for the following Christmas.

When all the flowers are gone by, slowly withhold the water; when the plant is completely dry, it should be stored on its side in a cool, dry place. When all danger of frost has past, the plant should be placed in the garden, once again on its side. When new leaves start to appear, the plant should be transferred to the next size larger pot and sunk in the garden. It is important that the roots not be disturbed.

A teaspoonful of dry fertilizer may be worked into the new soil. When buds appear, (a low temperature is needed or they will not form), one-half cup of liquid fertilizer may be given once each week.

The Christmas Cactus, or Epiphyllum truncatum is a member of the Cactus (Cactaceae) Family. The Genus name was derived from epi, upon, and phyllon, a leaf, since the flowers are borne on the ends of the leaf-like branches.

The plants grow and bloom best when they are slightly pot bound. A Christmas Cactus should be in bright light whiie indoors and shade while outdoors, during the summer. The plant should be kept on the dry side. When brought in from a summer outdoors, water should be with-held for a month.

News of The N.Y. World's Fair

A "Walk on the Moon" is in store for visitors to the New England States Exhibition at the New York World's Fair. The lunar stroll will be part of the Technology Exhibit at the $4 million six-state exhibition and should be one of the outstanding attractions of the entire fair.

The "Moon" will be reached after a ride in an elevator designed to resemble a space capsule. The approach to the capsule is through a chamber built like a space ship and adorned with instrumentation provided by New England Companies which manufacture the actual components.

The capsule will descend about four feet and deposit the visitors on the simulated surface of the dark side of the moon. Special sound and vibration effects provide a feeling of lengthy space travel. Hot air within the capsule will precondition the visitor for the landing on the moon's surface and when the door opens out on the moon the visitor is hit with a blast of cold air.

The surface has been created to duplicate a crusty, regenerative substance.. The visitor will be at the bottom of a moon crater, with the weird and eerie light of the sun making every object stand out in sharp contrast. A three-dimensional setting will give a sense of extreme vastness. Since scientists hold that there is a complete lack of echo on the moon, an unusual experience of a lack of reverberation is expected to contribute both to the authenticity and the strangeness of the moon visit.

A symbolic gantry, erected just off the lobby of the Technology Exhibit, serves as the introduction to the space trip. Symbolic colors, red and orange, will be used to represent the blast-off and blue and black will be the hues of outer space.

To insure the scientific authenticity of the trip to the moon, James S. Plaut, president of Exhibition Services International, Inc., Cambridge, planners and managers of the New England States Exhibition, appointed a committee of distinguished scientists to work with the planners of the Technology Exhibit.

The committee is headed by Dr. Jonathan Karas of Science House, Manchester, Mass., and includes Dr. Fred L. Whipple, director, Smithsonian Institution Astrophysical Observatory; Dr. Ross A. MacFarland, Guggenheim Professor of Aerospace Health and Safety, Harvard School of Public Health; Dr. Paul M. Frye, president, Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and Dr. H. Bradford Washburn, director of the Museum of Science.

The "Walk on the Moon" will serve both as an educational and entertainment feature of the New England States Exhibition and will also reflect the great progress and contributions of New England companies to the space age.

Fred F. Froton Undergoing Recruit Training

Fred F. Froton, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton A. Froton of 35 Park Street, is undergoing recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

The nine-week training includes naval orientation, history and organization, seamanship, ordnance and gunnery, military drill, physical fitness, first aid and survival.

During the training recruits receive tests and interviews which determine their future assignments in the Navy. Upon completing the program they are assigned to service schools for technical instruction or to ships and stations for on-the-job training in a Navy rating specialty.

Hospital Awarded Accreditation In Service Standards

Winchester Hospital has been advised that as the result of its recent evaluation, the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals has again awarded a three-year accreditation to the Hospital.

The survey by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals is voluntary and the majority of hospitals in the United States seek this evaluation as an outside measurement of their overall methods, procedures and performance, particularly in the areas relating to the care of the patient. Accreditation has been likened to the "Sterling" on silver, to indicate that the hospital measures up to the requirements of the accrediting commission.

The Commission is sponsored by the American Hospital Association, American Medical Association, American College of Surgeons and the American College of Physicians, and has been conducting this service since 1952. Their evaluation includes the following areas:

Administration—management by the governing body, hospital building facilities, and hospital services provided.

Medical Staff

Nursing service

Accreditation is the result of the constant efforts of the directors, the medical staff and hospital employees working together to maintain high quality patient care while at the same time working to keep abreast of the new techniques required in modern medicine.

In announcing the accreditation award, William J. Speers, Jr., president of the Hospital stated that he is pleased to bring to the community this added assurance that the Hospital meets recognized standards of community service.

Equal Employment Plan For State

Governor Endicott Peabody has announced formation of the Massachusetts Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity, which has received special recognition from President Lyndon B. Johnson and is believed to be the first plan of its kind adopted in any of the states of the Union.

Developed by the Committee on Industry, Finance, and Commerce of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Civil Rights, the plan was developed in committee meetings extending through the past summer and fall months.

"While I agree with the Committee's feeling that no one plan can entirely solve the problem that confronts us, I believe that successful implementation of this program could result in a meaningful expansion of job opportunities," the Governor said of the plan.

In a special acknowledgement, President Johnson said that the late President John F. Kennedy was deeply concerned with ensuring equal rights for all men and women of the nation, and that the successful execution of a program to expand job opportunities and individual rights would further honor his memory.

"It is deeply satisfying to me personally to find such an action coming from Massachusetts, the home of our beloved President, at this particular moment," President Johnson said.

The Governor said that the Massachusetts program is patterned after the "Plan for Progress" program now in use by more than 117 large national firms in the country. At least 22 of these firms have operations in the state, he added, and would become eligible immediately for membership in local programs.

"The Plan is not geared merely to large concerns," the Governor explained, "but rather it seeks to bring the experience and motivation found in the successful national plan within the reach of small firms more characteristic of this area Essentially, the Massachusetts Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity is designed to encourage employers to reevaluate opportunities available to Negroes and other minority groups and broaden them wherever possible," the Governor continued.

It is a voluntary program wherein the employer will accept membership through reviewing his own personal practices and procedures and agreeing to formulate a written policy that is intended to extend this motivation clearly to all levels of supervision.

"The purpose is to give priority of attention to this policy of maximizing equality of opportunity within the individual firm," Governor Peabody said.

His plan calls for employer associations to play a key role. After the volunteering employer submits his individual program along the guide lines suggested by the plan for meaningful analysis, he will forward his progress report to the appropriate association on a yearly basis after an initial six-months report.

Reports will not identify the firm by name, but rather will be geared to measure overall progress in enlarging opportunity over a sequential period.

"I am pleased to announce that association support has been found for this program both at the state industrial level and for the Greater Boston area," Governor Peabody said.

"This support comes from pledges of cooperation from the Associated Industries of Massachusetts and the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce," he said.

Ths Governor reported that at least 15 firms already have agreed to participate in the Plan.

Report To Massachusetts

By Sen. Leverett Saltonstall

"LOOK FORWARD, NOT BACK
LOOK UP, NOT DOWN.
LOOK OUT, NOT IN, AND LEND
A HAND."

These words, spoken by Charles W. Eliot when he was inaugurated as President of Harvard University in 1869, have special meaning for us today. During the past weeks, television, radio, and the newspapers have brought into our homes the tragic events leading to the end of the wonderful career of a Massachusetts citizen of whom we are all proud, John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

I attended the final church service for him, conducted by Cardinal Cushing. It was moving, yet magnificent, a fitting tribute to a career that exemplified "A PROFILE IN COURAGE." That we are leader of the free nations of the world was made evident by the representatives of 92 nations who crossed oceans from far-distant lands to attend his funeral service. They came because they respect our country; they came because they admired the leader of our country; they came, too, because they were shocked that such a tragic event could happen in the United States. So we have much to do in order to live up to the responsibilities that fall to each one of us in the days to come.

We can thank God that our Founding Fathers wrote a Constitution that provided us with a continuing leadership. One hour and 39 minutes after President Kennedy died, Vice President Johnson took the oath of office as the President of the United States. In our new President we have a man who has had broad experience in the Legislative and Executive branches of our Government. He came to Washington as a Congressional assistant and soon won a Congressional seat of his own. Then he succeeded by his efforts, energy, and ability in gaining a seat in the United States Senate. When the political balance of the Senate shifted, Lyndon Johnson became the Majority Leader. He quickly gained a reputation as a man who could accomplish results. He did this by his knowledge of the personalities in the Senate, what they could do, what they were willing to do and what he could get them to do on any single measure. His was the art of the possible, and through this art, for example, he steered through the Senate President Eisenhower's civil rights program, the first civil rights legislation enacted since the days of the Civil War. His methods of achieving success varied with each situation and with each person with whom he had to deal, but he knew what he wanted and he knew how to get it.

In contrast to earlier administrations, Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy wisely included their vice presidents within the highest councils of government. Thus President Johnson sat with the Cabinet and participated in many conferences with the President and other Administration leaders. So today, as he enters the White House, he is a man whom we can be confident has a thorough understanding of our domestic problems and a knowledge of our relations and problems with other countries. Thus he can establish a course of his own without interruption and the world need not fear a great change in our foreign policy.

The leaders of other countries who came to pay their respects to Kennedy will now be seeking an impression of our new President. Our future relationships and negotiations with the rest of the world will depend in part on those impressions.

Here at home we have many problems to solve. We want each of our citizens to have the rights to which he is entitled as an American citizen and to have opportunities commensurate with his abilities. We want to reduce unemployment. Above all, we must try to eliminate the hatred that erupted in the violence which destroyed the life of our late President. What we need today is the patience and common understanding that will lead us to full realization of the goals that all free men seek, the opportunity to live peacefully, to bring up one's family in safety and security, and to pursue meaningful and rewarding endeavors which lead to happiness and peace of mind.

Our Massachusetts people have a long history of courage, leadership, dedication to public service, and an ability to rise to the challenge of the times. We can be proud of our many firsts—in education, government, social legislation, commerce and scientific research. Our early forebearers went down to the sea in ships. They prided themselves on the speed and the quality of their clippers and their ability to trade. When sailing ships were no longer profitable, they turned to shoe manufacturing and to cotton and woolen textiles, using the water power from our rivers. And now we see the imagination, energy, and ability of our people directed to the electronics age and the effort to conquer space. These are all qualities that have built Massachusetts into a state in which we love to live and to bring up our children and grandchildren. This is the history and tradition which so influenced John Kennedy.

He was a remarkable man and I enjoyed the opportunity which I had to watch him grow and develop during the major part of his political career. From the day I escorted him down the aisle to be sworn in as a member of the Senate, he and I worked together in the interests of Massachusetts. To some, this relationship seemed unusual; to us it seemed perfectly natural. We trusted and respected one another and though our views on legislation sometimes differed, particularly on domestic issues, we remained on good terms even though he was a Democrat and I a Republican. I saw less of him of course, when he became "Mr. President" instead of a colleague, but our association did continue and was pleasant throughout. Certainly he was a man of good will, a man of ideas, a man with his feet on the ground.

Two weeks ago the aftermath of the terrible tragedy, American families sat down together to celebrate our traditional Thanksgiving. It was certainly not the happy one that our country usually enjoys, for we will spend some time recalling the events of the preceding week. We who worked with John Kennedy and liked him and respected his firmness, his courage and his knowledge of our country's problems in these difficult times thought of what he meant to us, and how he carried forward the great traditions that have built our country and for which we have given thanks in a day set aside by him as President of the United States before the tragedy that took him away from us. We can be grateful how far we have come and for what we have achieved as a nation. We can be thankful that in this crisis and the tragic circumstances the nation and its leaders could rally and present a united front to the world.

So these events, one of tragedy and the other of thanksgiving, bring home to us what we have to face. We all join in our expressions of sympathy and affection to President Kennedy's widow, his children and his family, and as we do we determine anew that our country will go forward and that each Thanksgiving in the days to come will be one of which we can say we have done our part in building a more peaceful world and a better United States.

Robert E. Durland Home Firearms Safety Instructor

Robert E. Durland of 5 Emerson Road, has been appointed a Home Firearms Safety Instructor, it was announced by the National Rifle Association, sponsor of a new course designed to help reduce shooting accidents in the home.

The NRA promotes safety among those who normally do not use firearms for recreation but have them in their home. It emphasizes the recognition of unsafe practices and conditions and points out how to correct them.

Mr. Durland was awarded an NRA instructor's certificate following successful completion of a written examination. He is now qualified to conduct the course locally. It runs about four hours and requires no shooting range since actual firing is not included.

The new course supplements the NRA's 13-year-old Hunter Safety Course, which has been instrumental in helping to reduce accidents in the field. Nearly two-million students have completed this course; in this time, the total number of hunting accidents has declined, while the number of hunters has increased.

For further information concerning either course, contact Program Division, National Rifle Association, 1600 Rhode Island Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. Founded in 1871, the NRA is a non-profit organization supported entirely by individual and club membership fees.

Children And Fire

Very few parents would allow their children to play on the edge of a busy street. But many otherwise responsible parents overlook a hazard just as threatening—leaving small children at home alone while they go on a brief errand to a nearby store or to a next-door neighbor's house.

All too often, these few moments are all that a fire needs to do its deadly work. The shocking fact is that one-third of all child fire victims were alone and unprotected when fire struck, National Fire Protection studies show.

If you would protect your children from fire at home and at play, follow these precautions:

1. Never, under any circumstances, leave small children alone.
2. Make sure baby sitters have specific instructions to follow in case of fire. These include orders to get the children out of the house the instant smoke or gas is noted, directions for at least two escape routes from every room, and the way to get in touch with the fire department, parents, doctor and police.
3. Keep young children—two and under—in constant sight and mind.
4. Teach older children how to use and respect fire. They learn best by your example.
5. Keep your home free of fire hazards through regular check-ups. The fire department will help in this.
6. Train children of all ages how to get out of the house to safety in case of fire. Have at least two escape routes from every room and be sure the children know these routes by heart.

Young Workers' Force Up 50 Per Cent By 1965

Due to the World War II baby boom, New England is currently experiencing a sharp 20 percent rise in the number of 14 to 19-year-old youngsters entering its labor force. This large increase is occuring at a time when, nationally, 31 percent of youth in these age groups is unemployed as compared to a 4 to 5 percent unemployment rate for adults over 25.

These statistics are contained in a U. S. Labor Department publication entitled "Manpower Research Bulletin No. 3—Young Workers: Their Special Training Needs." These and other figures contained in the publication were cited by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz in a statement made to a Senate Subcommittee considering the proposed "National Education Improvement Act of 1963."

A breakdown by states shows that between 1960 and 1965 the number of 14 to 19-year-olds in the work force will have increased in Massachusetts from 195,800 to 237,600—a rise of 21.3 percent; in Connecticut from 87,500 to 112,900—up 29 percent; in New Hampshire from 23,600 to 28,900—up 22.5 percent; in Maine from 34,200 to 38,000—up 11.1 percent; in Rhode Island from 35,200 to 39,400—up 11.9 percent; and in Vermont from 16,000 to 16,600—up 3.8 percent.

Young labor force entrants will continue to increase between 1965 and 1970, although not in such large numbers as in the half-decade between 1960 and 1965. Between 1965 and 1970 there will be an 11 percent increase in Massachusetts, a 15.1 percent increase in Connecticut, and 8.6 increase in New Hampshire, .5 percent increases in Maine and Rhode Island, and a .6 percent decrease in Vermont.

Secretary Wirtz told the Senate Subcommittee, "Our report sends up a warning signal that says to all Americans that the post-war population explosion, which first hit the schools, is now making itself felt on the size and make up of the labor force in this year and in 1964 and 1965. The lead time for adequately preparing many of the youngsters before they enter the labor force has already disappeared."

The unprecedented number of non-college bound young persons seeking employment is expected to consist of nearly 3 and one-half million youths with a high school education and approximately 2 million school dropouts. Altogether these young jobseekers will account for 3 out of every 4 new labor force entrants during the 1963-65 period.

Secretary Wirtz said that "unless and until the educational system in this country is strengthened, two danger spots that have already shown up in our manpower situation are going to get worse. One is the concentration of unemployment among unskilled workers. The other is the imminent shortage of personnel in a good many skilled, professional, semi-professional and technical occupations."

Pointing out that many of our young people do not have the resources to obtain the kind of education demanded by automation and space age technology, the Secretary noted that in 1961 approximately 12 million youngsters were in families whose total money income was less than $3000.

He warned that the more than 5 and one-half million new young workers who will not be going to college in the next three years (1963-65) "will present one of the most difficult and pressing manpower problems this Nation has ever faced."

The problem is two-fold: To seek ways and means of stimulating the economy to provide more jobs, and to prepare our young workers for the more highly skilled jobs required by our modern, technological economy.

The report does contain some heartening news. The percent of 14 to 19-year-olds enrolled in school in New England has increased from 27.1 percent in 1950 to 46.8 percent in 1960. The increases by states during this period are; from 21.9 to 52.7 in Maine, from 31.4 to 51.3 in New Hampshire, from 36.5 to 58.6 in Vermont, from 27.6 to 52.9 in Massachusetts, from 16 to 37.8 in Rhode Island, and from 30.5 to 53.3 in Connecticut.

Other highlights of the report include:

In 1962, young persons under 25 represented over one-third of the unemployed; yet less than one-fifth of the labor force.

In October of 1962, 365,000 youngsters aged 14 through 19 were not in school and were looking for work. Another 200,000 young men in this same age bracket were not attending school and were not looking for work.

Of the approximately 12 million full-time students enrolled in public secondary schools in 1960, only 1.7 million were enrolled in vocational classes; more than half of these in home economics courses.

About 95 percent of 17-year-old juvenile delinquents are not attending school, while 85 percent of the 16-year-olds, and 50 percent of the 15-year-old delinquents are not in schools.

In 1961, one-half of all males were married before age 23, one-half of all females before age 20.

According to the preliminary findings of a 1962 survey by the Department of Labor, less than a fifth of 700,000 establishments in private industry had a definite training plan or program.

Secretary Wirtz said that if we are to avoid the "social dynamite which will be generated by frustrated unemployed youngsters, we must have an omnibus educational and training approach which will encompass all of our citizens." He noted, particularly, the need to improve and expand vocational education.

Local Residents Sing in Lexington Choral Concerts

Mrs. Arthur McRae, Aram Mouradian, and Dr. Nelson Fontneau of Winchester will be among 125 singers who will fill the stage at Cary Memorial Hall, Lexington, when the Lexington Choral Society presents its first program of this season at 8:30 p.m. on the evenings of December 14 and 15.

An interesting and varied program, mainly of a cappella music, will be presented under the baton of Allen Lannom, the Society's eminent director. The program will be "Mass in G Minor" by Ralph Vaughan Williams; three Renaissance pieces by Sweelinck, Victoria, and di Lasso; the Motet No. 6 "Lobet den Herrn" by Bach; four a-cappella choruses from "Catulli Carmina" by Carl Orff; and the finale from "Belshazzar's Feast" by William Walton. Accompanist for the Society is Donald MacFeeley.

Tickets to these concerts are free of charge and may be obtained from any member of the Choral Society, or from Mrs. David Sykes, ticket chairman, at CL 9-9091. It is urged that all interested persons get their tickets early, since the capacity of the hall is limited. Tickets are also available at the Winchester Public Library.

Prof. Greenwood Gets NSF Grant To Direct Research

The National Science Foundation has granted $16,450 to Tufts University for a chemistry research program for college teachers. It is designed to aid those from institutions with limited research facilities or whose teaching loads do not afford time for experimentation and critical inquiry during the regular academic year. The 12-week program, beginning June 15, 1964, will be directed by Dr. Fred L. Greenwood of 112 Arlington Street, professor of Organic Chemistry at Tufts.

The NSF grant provides for individual stipends of $1,200 for each of five participants, with additional allowances for dependents and travel expenses. There will be considerable flexibility in choice of research problems, although joining projects already under way at Tufts will allow greater progress in the time available.

J. F. Kennedy On Retardation Bill

Just one week after the National Association for Retarded Children's (NARC) convention in Washington, President Kennedy signed S. 1576, the Mental Retardation Facilities and Community Mental Health Centers Construction Act of 1963. Attending the signing were several members of the National Association for Retarded Children, the parent affiliate of the East Middlesex Association serving Winchester.

The President, said, "I am delighted to sign this bill. It will make possible a major attack on the problems of mental retardation and mental health."

"This bill will expand our knowledge, provide research facilities to determine the cause of retardation, establish university related diagnostic treatment clinics and permit the construction of community centers for the care of the retarded."

"For the first time, state and federal governments and voluntary organizations will be able to coordinate their manpower and facilities in a single effort to cure and treat this condition."

Film Program At the Library

Friday, December 13, at 7:30 p.m., the Library will show Amazon Family, a quietly beautiful film, following an Indian family deep in the South American jungles on their self-explanatory tasks. There is no dialogue.

Two little boys bedevil their grandfather in Chairmaker and the Boys until Grandpa takes steps and puts them in their places.

Lions at Home is a relaxed view of the home life of one of the very few animals which does not have to spend most of its time alert for danger. Quite a change from the bunnies and ground birds we've been seeing.

The program will be shown Saturday morning at 10:15 for school children. Tickets may be had in the Boys and Girls Room at 10.

Dial-a-matic adding machine. For small offices, home use, income tax, etc. Six dials, answers appear automatically. Also subtracts. Priced at $4.00 at the Winchester Star.

Highway Deaths At Christmas Heaviest of All

The Christmas season claims more lives on the highway than any other holiday period, according to the Automobile Legal Association.

A total of 10,155 persons, the A. L.A. pointed out, were victims of highway slaughter on Christmas holidays during the years 1947 through 1962. Meanwhile, the record of fatalities for the same number of years for Labor Day was 8,705.

A comparison study of traffic deaths for other principal holidays of the year, the A.L.A. noted, showed that the Fourth of July ranked third with a total of 6,860 fatalaties. New Year's Day claimed 6,650 lives on the highway, while Memorial Day counted 5,770 highway deaths.

Last year alone, the highway death toll at Christmas was 805. Labor Day had a record of 670 lives lost, followed by New Year's Day with 485, Fourth of July with 225, and Memorial Day with 170.

A.L.A. safety experts this year are urging that law enforcement agencies, motorists, and pedestrians realize the great danger of highway death at Christmas, and take part in an all-out drive to promote holiday safety.

Praise For Audubon Society

"People are both the cause and the cure for problems of wise use of natural resources," Massachusetts fisheries and game director Francis W. Sargent told the Massachusetts Audubon Society at the Museum of Science in Boston today.

Speaking before the annual meeting of the nation's largest state Audubon society, Sargent commended the Massachusetts unit for foresight in attacking "the very heart of the problem—public ignorance and indifference, by starting as far back as 1939 with the Audubon natural science and conservation courses in our public school system."

"The Audubon educational program, including your classroom teachers, your Hathaway School of Conservation Education, and the Audubon summer camps for children, serve as an excellent model of what needs to be expanded throughout Massachusetts until every school child and eventually every adult becomes fully cognizant of his dependence upon and responsibility for the wise use of all our natural resources," Sargent said.

"That the Audubon programs as well educational efforts of the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game are beginning to show results is borne out by creation of an office of conservation education in the State Department of Education." Sargent said. A recent conference that included these three organizations as well as representatives of many levels of the education profession and the Fund for Preservation of Wildlife and Natural Areas laid plans for a series of publications to assist teachers in bringing the facts about natural resources into their classrooms."

The fish and game director, formerly director of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission in Washington, pointed out that 90 per-cent of all American adults engage in some form of outdoor recreation dependent upon the existence of open space, wildlife habitat and water resources. He also said that all Americans depend on the country's natural resource base for the sinews of industry, for mental and physical health, materials for national defense, in fact for the very foundation of our American life and freedoms.

"We expect the nation's population to double before the year 2000," Sargent said, "and the demand for outdoor recreation of all kinds to at least triple. Coupled with this will be a similarly increasing demand for natural resources for fuel and food, raw materials for industry, and so on. What this can mean in Massachusetts should be obvious. We presently have a population density of more than 600 people per square mile. For example, we already have experienced the loss of much of our former pheasant habitat, as well as many acres of wetlands and other open space to unplanned, unregulated development."

"However," Sargent stated, "we are encouraged that citizen's groups like the Audubon Society are alert to these problems, and we look forward to working cooperatively with all interested groups to preserve our common heritage of natural resources and the outdoors."

Abely Appointed Asst. Controller At General Foods

Joseph F. Abely, Jr., a former Winchester resident, has been appointed assistant controller of General Foods Corporation, the company announced today.

Mr. Abely joined General Foods in White Plains, N.Y., last February as assistant to the controller. He was previously with W. R. Grace & Co. for six years, and from 1961 to 1962 was general manager of its Cryovac Equipment Division plant in Woburn.

Mr. Abely was born in Boston and is a 1950 graduate of Boston College. He received an M. B. A. degree from Harvard Business School and an LL. B. degree from Harvard Law School.

Winter Term Of Adult Ed. Center Begins January 6

More than 90 daytime and evening courses will be offered at the Boston Center for Adult Education, 5 Commonwealth Avenue, when it opens its 30th winter term on January 6.

Just published this week, the Center's new booklet lists a variety of courses ranging from Automobile Mechanics to Current Political Theories, all designed to interest men and women who wish to continue their intellects or avocational pursuits.

Course groups are purposely limited and emphasis is on informal discussion directed by expert leaders in comfortable surroundings. Fees are nominal and there are neither examinations nor credits.

Among the new courses added for the Winter Term are: Contemporary Mathematics for Modner Parents, Creative Thinking, Exploring Earth Science, International Cooking, Portuguese, Mediterranean Folk Dancing, Modern Art, Philosophy in Literature and Masters of Modern Music.

Registration is now open to all Winchester residents. For futher information and a free program booklet, phone COpley 7-4430.

S. O. I. News

The officers and members of the local organization extend their sincere sympathy to each member of the Vespucci family in their recent loss.

Congratulations are in order for the degree team, which made another successful trip to Somerville to assist in initiating new members to the ladies' and men's lodges.

Just a reminder that the children's Xmas Party is to be held at the club hall on Sunday, December 22, at 2 p.m. Members are urged to contact the committee to register youngsters under 10 years of age if a gift is to be received from Santa. See Chairman Art Dunbar, or Frank Dattilo, Nick Ronzio, Joe Paonessa, John Paonessa or Pat Bruno.

The program and entertainment committee has made arrangements for the New Year's Eve Party and all wishing to attend must contact members of the committee before the fifteenth of this month. Get in touch with Randy Kazazian, Joe Paonessa, Frank Provinzano, Carl Bertolucci, Mel Fiore, Greg Sacca, Bob Fiore, Frank Antonuccio or Boss Dattilo.

Financial Sec. Frank Dattilo reports that this is the best year in a long time for collection of dues but would still like to hear from a certain few.

Make plans now for your next blood donation. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Swanton Street S. O. I. Hall on Monday, January 20, between the hours of 1 and 7 p.m. If in doubt whether you can give this life-giving fluid, the medical corps on hand will help you decide. Last year's turnout was encouraging, so let's top it this year. Co-chairmen for this drive are Richard Penta and Tony Melaragni.

Chairman Dick Tofuri and his sports committee are all set for the sports night, to be held on Sunday, January 19, at 6:30. Awards are to be presented to the S. O. I. softball town championship team and also to the winners of the club's golf league.

The club's Boy Scout troop meets every Monday evening from 6:30 to 7:30 at the club. On hand to assist the troop are Bob Fiore, Norman Doucette, Randy Kazazian, Mel Fiore, Bill Maggio and Tony DeLuca. Any interested in giving a hand to make this growing troop successful is urged to contact any of the above; or better still, report to the meeting.

Don't forget the Friday night special at the club! If you like baked quahogs, steamed clams or lobster your place is at the club every Friday at 7:00. They don't last too long, so get your orders in early and bring your wives down and make an evening of it. Meet the others present! See you tomorrow night.

At the last meeting Bob Maietta presented a most interesting talk on the Winchester Civic League "Picker-Upper Campaign," the primary purpose of which is to help keep Winchester clean and a community proud to live in. As a result the members dedicated themselves to playing an important part in the campaign by possessing collectors in their cars and promising to stoop over and pick 'em up when the occasion arises. This is a campaign for all to join, so let's all sign up right now. Use those little baskets; and by all means keep those car windows closed to waste. As they say in the service—"Police the area!"

Living With Your Heart

Surgical correction of open ductus arteriosus, a major congenital heart defect in stunted patients, can be performed as late as a child's eighth year without prejudicing his chance of resuming a normal growth pattern, a Heart Association-aided study at Children's Hospital Medical Center has shown.

Doctors Richard Umansky and Anna J. Hauck of the Center staff surveyed 422 boys and girls who underwent the operation for correction of a condition in which the blood flows from the aorta through the ductus arteriosus to the pulmonary artery instead of into the blood vessels supplying the body.

Children born with this affliction tend to be shorter and slighter than those with normal hearts, and even after surgery some patients do not reach normal stature.

However, the rate of growth has been found to increase in most cases after the operation.

"Of major importance is the fact that in neither initially short nor normally sized children does operating as late as 7 and eleventh-twelfth years diminish the likelhood of height acceleration or lowthe height level ultimately achieved in childhood," the researchers reported.

In shorter children, neither weight acceleration nor post-operative stature were found to be depressed by increasing age at the time of surgery.

The physicians, in their study of the youngsters' records, found that there is a tendency for taller children, operated on at an earlier age, to show greater weight acceleration than those undergoing surgery later, "but the final weight status does not seem to be much affected in this group by operative age."

It developed also that the heart condition itself did not appear to be the most important cause of statural retardation in those whose preoperative growth was unusually slow.

Major reasons for poor statural growth were reported as prenatal conditions, poorly understood at present but clearly independent of the abnormal blood flow pattern involved in open ductus arteriosus. The flow pattern, however, does affect the child's weight prior to surgery.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lorris	237
George Kimball and Dennis Heindel	236

The author of the hand of the week is writing under the pseudonym of "Dondi" as he describes a debatable situation which occurred while he was out on a date with delectable "Emerald Black."

HAND OF THE WEEK

One of the regulars and her sometimes favorite partner have had more than one heated discussion on the relative merits of No Trump vs something in a suit. As far as she's concerned, the cluck across the table can have his suits — she'll take NT!

There's no denying that — all other things being equal — the big fat 40 that goes with the first trick at No Trump can be nourishing, UNTIL someone who likes shortages plays the same hand at a suit contract, and finds a way to trump something for the extra trick that means so much.

Just often enough to maintain her position, this one runs into a hand where she can PROVE that No Trump was the only proper spot. "Results you want? Results we got!" Look at this one — board 11 in the Club Championships tournament. East is the dealer, with nobody vulnerable.

North

♣ A K Q 10 9

Before your read how the bidding went, be warned that if you try to send in improvements your letter will be returned marked: "Addressee moved — left no address." With opponents in no mood for bidding, North and South had it all to themselves. South looked at 19 points — too strong for an opening No Trump — and bid one club. North looked at very little, shuddered slightly as he considered passing, but dredged the brilliant thought that a one spade overcall would promise very little, and JUST MIGHT steer this thing into a reasonably safe spot at one No Trump. So he bid the spade. South could now say, "Well goody! Here we sit with the two cards in partner's suit that mean so much to Clucky, so WHY WAIT? Three No Trump!"

Play of the hand turned out to be sheer delight. For reasons known only to himself, West led the heart 3. Dummy's 5 was covered by the Jack, taken by the ace. Nice. Dummy began to look a little better. Next came five rounds of pleasure with the clubs, and a low heart toward the queen. West took his king, played the spade king, and shifted to a diamond. South took her ace and played the spade jack with such authority that West didn't dream this was the time to play the ace. The ninth trick was quickly scooped with dummy's good heart queen.

If top score on a board is 20, and partner racks up 19½ with this one, how can you say that No Trump wasn't the proper spot?

But just try an opening bid of one No Trump instead of one club and see what happens. You'll die real dead!

Editor's Note Our game on Christmas will be held on Thursday evening, December 26th, at the Knights of Columbus Hall (instead of on Christmas day.)

John T. Williams Elected To Head National Society

A former Winchester resident, John T. Williams, has been elected president of the American Production and Inventory Control Society with headquarters in Chicago, Illinois. He resided at 76 Woodside Road from 1949 to 1961. Both his daughter Deanne and son, Rex, are graduates of the Winchester High School.

Mr. Williams is materials manager of the Radiation Division, Sperry Gyroscope Company, Great Neck, Long Island. Prior to joining Sperry, he was an executive with the Raytheon Company, where he served as senior consultant, reporting to the director of Corporate Production Programming and Control. He was a special agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation from 1942 to 1951, is past president of the Long Island Chapter of APICS, and previously served on the society's national board of directors.

While residing in Winchester, he served as chairman of the Citizens Committee for a new Junior High School in Winchester; was general chairman of Raytheon's United Fund Drive; and a member of the Boston Steering Committee, Junior Achievement of Eastern Massachusetts, Inc.

Sartini Serves With USN in Spain

Richard F. Sartini, aviation machinist's mate airman, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Sartini of 10 Pocahontas Drive, is serving with Fleet Tactical Support Squadron 24 at the Naval Station in Rota, Spain.

The squadron provides logistic support for units of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean and delivers personnel, cargo and mail to ports out of which these units operate.

NE Committee For Project HOPE Elects Chairman

Dr. John Schulman, Jr., of 7 Ashmont Road, Waban, who served aboard the white hospital ship S. S. Hope for two months during its voyage to Peru last year, has been named chairman of the New England Committee for Project HOPE, it was announced recently at HOPE's Washington, (D. C.) headquarters by Dr. William B. Walsh, president of the project.

The New England Committee for Project HOPE, formed in 1961, comprised of outstanding area business, professional and community leaders, is one of eighteen similar Committees throughout the United States that are active on behalf of the Project. The principal activity of the New England Committee is to plan and handle details in connection with regional fund raising activities.

Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti has been named honorary chairman for Massachusetts. Other committee members include Winchester residents Rear Admiral Leroy V. Honsinger of 45 Myopia Road, and Mrs. Albert S. Muggia, 144 Cambridge Street. Rear Admiral Honsinger is co-chairman and Mrs. Muggia is secretary of the newly formed Winchester Chapter for Project HOPE.

Project HOPE, founded in 1958, is the principal activity of the People-to-People Health Foundation, Inc.,, a non-profit corporation formed to carry out a program of cooperation in the field of health between people in the United States and newly emerging nations of the world.

The S. S. HOPE carries aboard a top-flight staff of volunteer doctors, dentists and nurses, many of whom serve without pay, who have trained some 1700 doctors and nurses, performed over 4000 major operations and examined and treated nearly half a million people in Southeast Asia and Peru.

On November 20 the S. S. HOPE left New York City to begin a medical mission in Guayaquil, Ecuador. As on the two previous missions, American professionals will be working closely with their local counterparts to heal, teach and bring better health knowledge.

Busby Sang At N.E. Concervatory Of Music

James Busby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Busby of 213 Main Street, sang with the New England Conservatory Chorus in its annual Christmas Concert on December 5. Mr. Busby is an undergraduate student at the nation's oldest music college where he is majoring in organ. The Chorus sang in Jordan Hall, the Conservatory's world-famous concert auditorium.

The December 5 program included Apparebit Repentina Dies by Hindemith, Deutsches Magnificat by Schutz, Die Weihnachtsgeschichte by Distler, and Viderunt, Notum Fecit by Perotin.

The Conservatory Chorus, under the direction of Lorna Cooke deVaron, has recently won the award given by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences for the best classical choral performance of 1962. The Chorus won the same recognition last year. Both awards were given for performances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on RCA Victor records. Famous for its presentations of American and world premieres, the Conservatory Chorus is scheduled to perform the first American performance of Leonard Bernstein's Kaddish with the Boston Symphony in February.

Mail Early For Christmas

Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun said today, "This certainly looks like a record-breaking year for Christmas mail. Between December 1 and the 25th last year, we handled a total of 775,000 pieces of mail. So far this year, we have already received and sent 125,000 Christmas cards, letters and packages, and the heaviest rush is still to come."

The Postmaster states that the present flow of Christmas cards is running about the same as last year, but the mailing of Christmas gifts is lagging somewhat. He suggests that all gift parcels to most distant points be sent by Air Mail from now on.

Speaking about Christmas gift packages, the Postmaster said, "I cannot emphasize too strongly the vital need for packing and wrapping your Christmas gifts securely. Pack all your gifts in sturdy cartons, wrap them with heavy paper, and tie them securely with strong cord. It is sometimes hard to understand why people will be so careless about putting valuable Christmas gifts into the mails in flimsy boxes and loosely wrapped packages. Many of these poorly wrapped gifts simply cannot stand the necessary handling, and thus cause much delay and disappointment all around."

The Postmaster further suggests that it is best to print the recipient's full name, street address, city, zone or ZIP Code number and state on all mailing labels, making sure to include an extra label inside your gift packages.

If you'll send all your Christmas cards by First Class mail, using the new five cent Christmas Tree stamps, and include your name and address on the envelopes, you'll help your friends to keep their mailing lists up-to-date. Further, you are assured that any cards that cannot be delivered will be returned to you for correct addresses.

If you wish to enclose your Christmas card or letter in your gift package, merely add the appropriate letter postage to the postage for the package itself and indicate the presence of a letter or Christmas card inside the package.

The Postmaster expressed his thanks for the fine public cooperation to date and said, "If you'll just follow these simple requirements, it's sure to be a much merrier Christmas for everybody."

*Insure your gift parcels. Register letters of real value.

*Parcels containing delicate gifts must be marked "Fragile", and food stuffs should be marked "Perishable" if they are subject to spoilage.

*Be sure your Christmas card and gift mailing lists are up-to-date.

*Wrap your Christmas gifts securely.

*Address your cards and gifts legibly and correctly.

*Use complete addresses—including street number, rural route or post office box number. Be sure that the name of the street is complete with avenue, parkway, or drive. Avoid abbreviation of street and state names. Use ZIP Code numbers wherever possible, and be sure to include your own ZIP Code number in your return address. For Winchester ZIP Code number is 01890.

*And most important of all—mail your cards and gifts now!

Toys for Tots

The 1963 Toys for Tots Cavalcade with Miss Jean of the "Romper Room School" in conjunction with the United States Marine Corps Reserve will be held this year on Saturday, the 14th of December. Lieutenant Governor Billotti, the honorary state chairman, will start the "Cavalcade" at 11:00 a.m. at the Child World Store in Quincy. Miss Jean will be at the Child World Stores on Route 1 Dedham from 12:30 p.m. till 1:30 p.m. and at the Fellsway Shopping Plaza at Medford from 2:00 p.m. till 3:00 p.m. and at Vinnin Square at Swampscott from 3:30 p.m. till 4:30 p.m.

Christmas is a happy time, but not for those children whose parents are unable to provide for them the shiny, bright toys so beloved to a child's heart. This is an excellent opportunity for your children to meet Miss Jean as she accepts your toys and also help another child have a Merry Christmas.

Walter F. Morgan Toastmaster For Children's Party

Walter F. Morgan, of 515 Washington Street, a Past Golden Rodent of the National Order of Trench Rats, Disabled American Veterans, will be Toastmaster at a Christmas party to be held at the Hotel Vendome, Boston this Sunday, December 15 at 2 p.m.

This annual party is under the sponsorship of Dugout 103, National Order of Trench Rats and Rat Trap 103, National Order of Alley Cats, an Auxiliary of the Disabled American Veterans, whose purpose is Child Welfare Work. Some 200 children from various Homes of Destitute Children of Greater Boston will be in attendance at this affair where toys and refreshments will be given out and entertainment will be held.

Fortnightly In Group Study Of Eugene O'Neil

Mrs. Everett D. Littlefield graciously opened her home on Wednesday, December 4, for the meeting of the Literature Group of the Fortnightly. This year, the group is studying the Biographies of American Authors (1900-1960).

Mrs. Caroline Fitts gave an interesting paper on the life of Eugene O'Neil and his works and a delightful skit from "Ah Wilderness" was presented by Mrs. John Wills, Miss Mary Hodge and Mrs. Ralph Meigs. They were attired in charming costumes of the early nineteenth century.

Later excerpts from "The Long Journey into Night" were read by Mrs. Herbert Thompson and Mrs. Everett Littlefield. A delicious tea was served at the close of the meeting. Mrs. Ralph Meigs poured.

Week at a glance appointment books showing day and time schedules. Excellent for professional people. At the Winchester Star.

Mrs. Given Talks On Friday To Morgan Memorial

The presidents of woman's church organizations in eastern Massachusetts have been invited to attend the annual Presidents' Day of the Woman's Auxiliary to Morgan Memorial of Boston, Friday, December 13, at 12 noon, at St. Paul's Methodist Church, 90 Park Street, Brookline.

Invitations have also been extended to minister's wives of all churches in the Greater Boston area to be guests of honor.

There will be a coffee hour, beginning at noon, followed by the business meeting and entertainment.

The featured speaker will be Mrs. Harold Given of Winchester, a native of Norway, who will present a delightful program entitled, "Christmas in Norway".

Special Christmas music will be offered by Mrs. Ruby S. Jones of Allston, soloist, and Mrs. Ella France Jones of Everett, organist.

With the year coming almost full circle, we once again have the pleasure of extending the greetings of the season to our many good friends and wonderful patrons. May you all enjoy this last, but best, part of the year in health and happiness.

Parish Players Honor The Grants At 15th Anniversary

Fifteen years ago to the month, the Parish Players presented George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" on the stage of Chidley Hall, with a new director—Harlan F. Grant who came from Cambridge and who was known here only as the head of the Drama Department at the Boston Conservatory.

On November 21 and on December 6 and 7, the Players revived their production of "Pygmalion"—and the director was their old friend and Pierrepont Road resident, Mr. Grant. For the three nights of the performance, the whole affair was not "just another play," it was a warm, personal tribute by the Players and their audiences to Harlan Grant—and to his lady, Florence Grant.

At intermission, the audience was invited to meet and chat with the Grants. The usual pleasant coffee nour became more than a social time—it was a chance for people to peek "backstage." Many who had been in the Parish Players' shows during these fifteen years made special effort to come to these evenings, and to share in the tribute.

Since that first Pygmalion, Mr. Grant has worked with countless men and women (and students from the High School too), and has shown them the fun of Little Theatre as a hobby. He has taken good plays, classics, mediocre plays — given each cast his capable, interested direction, and produced performances that have delighted audiences. Whether it was "Girls in 509," "Two Blind Mice," "Thunder Rock," "Winslow Boy," "I Remember Mama," or the moving "Diary of Anne Frank," under his guidance, casts brought forth a good show.

Thus in choosing "Pygmalion" in 1963, the fifteen-year span was noted, it was hardly just another play, for those who had been on this stage, and those who had attended the plays here, felt the anniversary glow in the air.

For that first "Pygmalion," John MacLellan designed three superb sets — and many in the audience this time remembered. For this production, Mr. MacLellan again designed three excellent sets — the stone portico of St. Paul's Church in London, Professor Higgins' cluttered laboratory; the impeccable and expensive drawing room of Mrs. Higgins. Mr. MacLellan was not only the set designer, he did much of the painting of the sets, and played the leading role of Col. Pickering! So this veteran actor also shared in the "Pygmalion Anniversary."

The play itself is now a classic, its story very familiar to all theatre-goers. But the role of Eliza Doolittle, the Cockney "flower gel" from Lissom Grove who becomes a lady, is a most exacting one for any amateur. It calls for a wide range of voice and gestures—the actresses must GROW in the part. Nancy Dorsey, as Eliza, did just that, she was wonderful in the first two scenes as the dirty flower peddler who didn't know that hankies had replaced sleeves; she was beautiful as the Eliza in white satin and jewels, and a believable Eliza when she decides to marry Freddie and go back to a flower shop.

Her partner on stage, Henry Fitts, as Professor Higgins the speech teacher, was splendid to watch. Veterans of countless fine roles, he looks well on stage, and he knows his craft. He has exactly the right diction and assurance for this part - one heard every word, and one enjoyed those words.

Alfred Doolittle, the "common dustman" who becomes a "victim of middle class morality," is one of the best comic parts written; a gem of a role. A newcomer to the Players, Steve Brown, did the part complete justice, and well deserved the applause he got every night. Sally Phaneuf, as the housekeeper, made her part more important than the mere lines, for she is also a fine actress, and a craftsman.

James Hulm as Freddie Hill, gave that character a very definite place in the play. In too many productions of "Pygmalion," Freddie goes almost unnoticed. Not so with Mr. Hulm! Here is an amateur with much talent and with obvious enjoyment in acting. One hopes to see him in more plays. Susan Stockwell, as Freddie's sister, gave the small part a very definite sparkle, as did Mary Mears, playing Mrs. Hill.

Lenore Black, as Mrs. Higgins, delighted everyone in the audience, for here is a Parish Players' lady who always does a good job with any part given to her, lead or small role, who has lovely speech, and who walks across the stage like a queen.

It was a good show, from portico scene to Henry Higgins' final "Damn." It was smoothly done with the five intricate scene shifts. The 1912 costumes were lovely to look at, the stage settings most suitable, even to the gramaphone of that vintage! But most of all, it was the ACTING that was good—from the smallest maid part to the lead—and in this, one sees with admiration the fine touch of—Harlan Grant.

Dartmouth Women's Club

The Dartmouth Women's Club of Boston will hold its next meeting Wednesday, December 18, at 1:15 p.m. at the Hotel Vendome. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Custance, Haydn Irish Harp Duo, will present a program "Let's Celebrate Christmas."

Winchester members of the club are Mrs. Percy Gleason, Mrs. Theodore Freeman, Mrs. Clifford England, Mrs. Lester Godwin, Mrs. Gerald Hills and Mrs. Michael Macdonald.

Leonard Wood To Conduct Philharmonic

In celebration of its 30th anniversary, the board of directors, Philharmonic Society of Arlington, has invited Mr. Leonard Wood, first conductor of the Philharmonic to conduct portions of Handel's "Messiah" at its annual concert, Friday, December 13, at Arlington High School Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Mr. Wood, publisher of the Arlington Advocate, a suburban weekly newspaper, was the first conductor of what is now known as the Philharmonic Society of Arlington from 1933 to 1947. Trained as a gifted violinist from childhood he quickly demonstrated musical aptitude and talent in his studies at Harvard University and New England Conservatory of Music. A series of events led him from music to his current vocation as publisher, but on Friday the 13th, he returns to his first love, the Muse of Music.

Also appearing on the same program are Hazel O'Donnell of Winchester, soprano soloist; Ruth Hamilton, alto; Philip Morrison, tenor soloist at Beth El Temple, Belmont; and Francis Hester, bass soloist at First Baptist Church of Arlington. Chorus and orchestra are under the direction of Paul L. Bauguss, director of music, Perkins School for the Blind.

The "Messiah" is presented each year during the Christmas season by the Philharmonic Society as a gift to the town. Everyone is welcome to attend this traditional and inspirational concert.

A CHANCE TO HELP

Many elderly and infirm persons, as well as those with small children and limited means, need help at Christmas if this holiday is to be a happy occasion in accordance with the American tradition.

To help out our less fortunate Winchester friends during the holiday season, gifts of money, food and clothing are earnestly solicited.

Gifts may be sent to the Winchester Community Relief Committee.

Jesus' instructions on how to pray will be brought out in this Sunday's Bible Lesson at all Christian Science church services. The subject is "God the Preserver of Man."

Golden Text: "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth . . . The Lord preserveth all them that love him" (Psalms 145-18, 20).

Related readings from the Christian Science textbook will open with these lines: "Our Master said, 'After this manner therefore pray ye,' and then he gave that prayer which covers all human needs" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 16).

A four o'clock Christmas vespers will be conducted by Mr. O'Donnell at the Home for the Aged on Sunday, December 15. He will be assisted by the Junior Choir under the leadership of Mrs. O'Donnell.

The annual Christmas family program will be held in the halls of the church on Sunday afternoon, December 15 from 5-7 p.m. Miss Eleanor Wolsey, chairman of children's work, is general chairman of the event. The L. Jennie Crawford Circle assisted by the Lucy Burnham Circle will prepare the supper to be served at 6 p.m. The theme of the program is "The Gifts of Christmas."

Parents of the Senior High BYF will have the opportunity of meeting with Dr. Donald McLean on Tuesday, December 17 at 8 p.m., Church of the Epiphany. Dr. McLean will be in charge of the course "Fit To Be Tied" to be held in January jointly by the youth of Epiphany and First Baptist.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

"I'm Johnny Newcomer," a man said one morning. "And, I'd like you to handle my insurance for me."

"Fine," I replied. "What was your experience in Springfield? Did you have any losses?"

"I've never had a loss," Johnny said bitterly, "that is, one that was covered by insurance. That's why I looked you up. I asked a friend who would do a conscientious job of planning my insurance program. He suggested that I see you."

"We're pleased he did," I said. "We'll try to see that you are paid for any insurable loss you have here. Paying legitimate losses is the key to our insurance service."

"That sounds good to me," Johnny said. "It's discouraging to have a loss and find it isn't covered."

"We'll plan the proper program for you," I said. "Then I'll explain it to you so that you understand exactly what you have."

"That's fine," Johnny said.

May we design a Program of Protection for you as well?

Mystic Glee Club Sings Concert For Christmas

The Mystic Glee Club gave its annual Christmas Concert last Saturday evening, December 7, and was well received by an enthusiastic audience.

The club, under the competent direction of Wendell Withington, gave a versatile and varied program. The first part, narrated by James R. Willoughby, president of the club, ranged from college songs, chosen by the audience, to novelty music such as, "I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts", a barber shop medley and the show tune, "There is Nothing Like a Dame." Switching to a more serious mood after the intermission, the men sang traditional Christmas—music and closed with "Silent Night", a custom at this concert.

Making its debut was a quartet of club members consisting of Ragnar T. Brandt, first tenor; Austin Nanry, second tenor; Victor H. Jonas, baritone; and Henry T. Gerould, bass. The quartet sang several barbershop selections which pleased the audience immensely. Also appearing with the club for the first time was its able new accompanist, Mrs. Margaret Sibley Butt.

The audience heard a much improved glee club in a new format. It is to be hoped that the Mystic Glee Club is entering a new musical era and will grow much in size and in following.

The club will be appearing at the Home for Aged People in Winchester on December 16 and will give an annual concert for the Christmas Open House of William Parkman Lodge on the same evening. A concert in Medford on December 23 will end the club's Christmas activities.

Alliance For Progress Review

In Sao Paulo, Brazil this week, the Inter-American Economic and Social Council is meeting to discuss the problems and achievements of the Alliance for Progress. I have been chosen by House Speaker John McCormack to join the United States delegation which is headed by Under Secretary of State Averell Harriman and includes Alliance Director Teodoro Moscoso and Assistant Secretary of State Edwin Martin.

This is the second annual review of the Alliance which is engaged in activities in Latin America ranging from aid to disaster victims in Brazil, to school lunch programs in El Salvador, to agricultural development loans to Bolivia and housing projects in Mexico.

Launched at the Punta del Este Conference in 1961, the Alliance for Progress is a cooperative effort by twenty Western Hemisphere nations. It builds upon and expands our early Point Four aid and Development Loan Fund programs.

The United States Role

The United States is participating in the Latin American Decade of Development at many levels. The government helps through the Peace Corps, the Agency for International Development, the Food for Peace Program, the Export-Import Bank and the Investment Guarantee Program. In addition private business and industry have stepped up their investment in Latin America and a number of firms have conducted training programs to increase the manpower available for technical and managerial positions. American companies are also engaged in investment surveys to determine the feasibility of industrial development in specified areas and products.

American universities, in recent years, have also contributed mightily to our efforts. For example, Northeastern University in Boston is currently engaged in the collection of needed manpower statistics to be used by Alliance officials in determining development goals; United States economists are developing a graduate program in economics in Colombia; and educational leaders in Venezuela and the United States are establishing a cooperative program to improve secondary education and teacher training.

Emphasis On Self-help

The Alliance for Progress is essentially a partnership between the signatory nations. Mutual cooperation is the keynote of the entire program and each nation must contribute, insofar as it is able, to its own development. The achievement of the difficult goals contemplated by the Alliance demands extensive internal efforts by the Latin American nations. Tax and agricultural reforms, economic stabilization, and realistic assessment of resources must necessarily precede the development of power, manpower, industry and trade. The problems we face in Latin America are not insuperable—but neither are they capable of easy solution. How we can speed up our programs and make them more effective will be the concern of the Sao Paulo meeting.

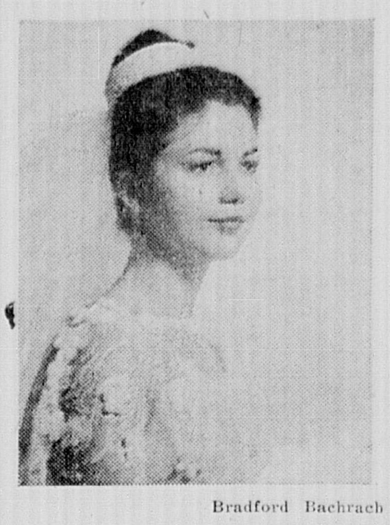
Roberts — Cuff

At a Nuptial Mass at St. Mary's Church on the morning of Saturday, December 7, Miss Mary Elizabeth Cuff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edward Cuff of 84 Church Street, became the bride of Lieutenant Richard Arnold Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Charles Roberts of 6 Seneca Road.



Bradford Bachrach

MRS. RICHARD A. ROBERTS

The ceremony was conducted by the Reverend Gerald Bueke, a friend of the family and was followed by a reception held in the Georgian Room of the Statler Hilton Hotel in Boston.

The bride was in a gown of French Chantilly lace, fashioned with a bateau neckline, short sleeves, and a fitted midriff of silk cloud satin, accented with a like bow at the waist. Its semi-bell shaped skirt was accented by a Watteau back, which flowed into a chapel length train. Her French silk illusion bouffant veil was held in place by a matching beaded open crown and she carried a bridal bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis. She was given in marriage by her father.

Honor attendant to the bride was Miss Valerie E. Dray of Somerville, and bridesmaids were the Misses Suzanne M. Curtin of Belmont, Audrey F. Dalton of Weymouth, Judith E. Murphy of Braintree and Helen S. Zelich of Fairfield, Connnecticut. All were gowned in holiday red satin made with a high circlet neckline, short sleeves, an Empire waistline and a long A-line skirt accented with pink embroidered appliques. They wore wreaths of pink carnation buds in their hair and carried cascades of pink carnations.

Miss Deborah Keyes of Wollaston, was flower girl, dressed in pink organdy and with a wreath of pink sweetheart roses in her hair. She carried a basket of pink roses.

Ronald J. Roberts was best man to his brother and ushering were another brother, Quentin C. Roberts, Jr., and a brother of the bride, Robert H. Cuff, along with David Allen of Oswego, New York, Daniel Raabe of New York City, Richard Hooten of Revere, and Donald G. Trites of Reading.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Cuff was in an emerald green silk-satin sheath and wore a white satin pillbox hat with emerald green and white beading, and a white orchid. Mrs. Roberts was in a mink brown silk-faced peau de soie suit. She wore a mink hat, and a white orchid.

The bride is a graduate of the Winchester High School and of Regis College in Weston. The bridegroom, who also attended the High School, was graduated from Colgate University with the class of 1963. He is a Lieutenant in the United States Air Force.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Roberts are on a wedding trip which took them to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Miss Cushman Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart L. Cushman of 134 Mt. Vernon Street, and Brewster, are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Lucy Ann Cushman, to Donald Stuart Peck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred G. Peck of Boston and South Orleans.

LUCY ANN CUSHMAN

Miss Cushman was graduated from the Winchester High School in 1962 and is presently a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Wilcox of Winchester.

Mr. Peck is a graduate of the Boston English High School and attended Boston University. He is presently in Army Reserve training at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

A June wedding is planned.

Engagement Announced

FRANCES MORELLO

Miss Morello is a graduate of Ursuline Academy and attended Boston State Teachers' College.

Mr. Rogers is a graduate of the Winchester High School and of Boston College.

The wedding date has been set for June 6, 1964.

Smyth — Anderson

On Friday, November 29th, Miss Nancy Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernhardt Anderson of 56 Dunster Lane, became the bride of Mr. James Douglas Smyth at Provo, Utah.

Mrs. Smyth was graduated from the Winchester High School with the class of 1960. She attended Boston City Hospital School of Nursing and is at present employed in the Utah Valley Hospital in Provo.

Mr. Smyth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smyth of Trail, B. C. He attended the University of British Columbia, and is now a student at Brigham Young University in Provo.

Children And Fire

One of the most dangerous of fires is the clothing fire, says Fire Chief Frank Amico. Each year burns from clothing fires cause hundreds of deaths and thousands of serious and often disfiguring injuries. There has been two deaths and one seriously injured person as a result of local fires so far this year, he said. Most frequent victims are children and the elderly according to National Fire Protection Association studies.

A helpful prevention measure is care in clothing selection, Chief Amico advises. Heavy, smooth-surfaced fabrics resist burning better than light-weight, long-napped ones. Designs avoiding billowing folds of material and long, loose sleeves reduce chances of clothing catching fire.

Most important of all is to appreciate that just about any clothing can burn, that a flame, spark or other intense heat may start it burning, and the burning may be so dangerously rapid that the wearer is enveloped in flame.

Safety from clothing fires calls for watchful care in all activities around stoves, heaters, fireplaces and outdoor fires, and in using matches and smoking materials.

If clothing does catch fire, the first and life saving rule is this: Don't run. Roll on the ground or floor. Smother the fire with a coat or blanket.

The Star is indebted to Clifford E. Pratt for the old picture shown above. It depicts the old Unitarian Church and the Gifford School, now both of the past! The church was destroyed by fire in 1897, and the Gifford School went by the board when the town's old wooden school buildings were replaced. The present Mystic School absorbed most of the old Gifford School youngsters, but in its heyday the Gifford served children from the center, Mystic Avenue, Symmes Corner and the side hills.

Clifford Pratt is an old time Winchester boy, now a retired Forest Ranger in Passaconnawey Valley, N.H. The Star's series of old photographs got him started and he sent us in the picture we reproduce above.

No one seems to know too much about "Cliff" Pratt, but his brother, Roy, now deceased, was well known at the Boat Club where he held the single blade one-mile trophy until his 40th year and was considered one of the best paddlers at the club.

According to "Cliff", his father, Frank Pratt, had the distinction of being the first male child born in Winchester after the town received its charter in 1850. Fred Symmes of Symmes Corner was second.

Mr. Pratt recalled the old Elm tree that stood in the middle of Church Street, and nearly caused a civil war in Winchester when the Selectmen finally decided to cut it down. He raises the question of how many recall the other Elm that stood in the center in front of A. B. Grover's Drug Store (Hevey's Pharmacy) between the railroad tracks and Lyceum Building.

Among the Pratt memories are trapping and skating on the Boston and Lowell Canal, the first electric car to Arlington, the paving of Bacon Street by Superintendent of Streets Spates, the torchlight parade in Woburn when McKinley was elected, and riding in the horsecars on Causeway Street in Boston down Atlantic Avenue to Rowe's Wharf and a day at Nantasket Beach.

Mr. Pratt still recalls the old white pine his father set out in 1855 on Harrington Place, and the tree huts he and his brother had there. Yes! those were the "Good Old Days."

"Choir Girl Who Couldn't Sing" At Marycliff

"The Choir Girl Who Couldn't Sing" will be presented on Sunday, December 15, at 3:30 p.m. at Marycliff Academy by the grammar school.

Lisa Inserra of Winchester, portrays Anna, the choir girl whose only talent is lighting candles. The Girls' Choir, composed of sixth and seventh graders, will not accept Anna because she cannot sing. As Anna prays one night, shepherds and wise men (from the eighth grade) enter and try to convince her that she can sing. Then, Our Lady, played by Mary Burke of Medford, appears and together they try to convince Anna she can sing. They do not succeed.

An angel, Leanne Bouley of Woburn, accompanied by other angels (from the eighth grade) finally get Anna to sing because in her heart she really wants to. This choral drama by Charles B. Fowler is narrated by Christine Guiliano of Medford. The entire production is under the supervision of Mother Lhomme, the principal, and the direction of Mother LeBlanc, of the music department.

The remaining grammar school classes plan additional entertainment. The kindergarten will recite poetry, while the first graders dance. The second grade is planning a song and dance routine; the third grade will produce a Toy Band. The fourth grade will contribute a short play which will be followed by a drill by the fifth grade.

Winchester Men Will Spearhead The Heart Drive

Two key posts for the 1964 Heart Fund in Winchester were announced today, as State Campaign Chairman Charles W. Bartlett named Maxwell McCreery, of 4 Curtis Street as the general chairman and Dr. Richard J. Clark, of 71 Myopia Road, to be advance gifts chairman.

Mr. McCreery, a long-time resident of Winchester, has been a Heart Fund worker for the past several years, and now steps up to head the drive. He is a Town Meeting Member and is affiliated with the Winchester office in the investment firm of Townsend, Dabney and Tyson.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mr. McCreery said: "This is a job for all of us, and one that demands the best all of us can bring to it. It is one of the most urgent needs of not only our town, but all over the world, to help promote research and development of preventives and cures to this, our most dread disease."

Dr. Clark has first-hand knowledge of and keen interest in the advancement of heart research as a cardiologist at the Winchester Hospital and as a member of the Board of Consultation of Massachusetts General Hospital. He is a former director of the Work Classification Unit at the latter institution, which is sponsored by the Greater Boston Chapter of the Massachusetts Heart Association.

In agreeing to contribute, again, of his energies in furthering the Winchester Heart Fund Campaign, Dr. Clark stated: "Vital programs of research, education and community service cannot go forward with their lifesaving missions unless towns like ours support this annual campaign, gladly and with generosity."

Other key chairmen will be announced by Mr. McCreery as the selection of qualified personnel are screened. The climax of the Heart Fund Campaign starts on Sunday, February 23, when a week-long Winchester - wide, house-to-house solicitation will be conducted to provide the opportunity for everyone in the community to support the 1964 Heart Fund.

Postage For Xmas Cards Same Today as in 1847

"People sending Christmas cards today at the 5-cent first class rate pay the same to mail Christmas greetings as Americans did well over a century ago," Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun noted today.

"Research shows that in 1847 the Post Office Department issued its first stamps, including a nickel stamp for the basic prepaid letter rate," Postmaster Gilgun said.

"And, of course, in those days a nickel could buy a meal where it usually can't even buy a cup of coffee today," Mr. Gilgun pointed out.

"Since 1932," the postal executive observed, "while living costs for the American family have skyrocketed considerably more than 100 per cent—the cost of mailing a first-class letter has only increased two cents or two-thirds."

The Postmaster's comments were made in connection with a recommendation to Winchester residents to use the first-class 5 cent Christmas stamp on their Christmas cards. The stamp portrays the National Christmas Tree on the "Eastern Ellipse" in the Nation's Capital. The stamp is available at the local post office.

The 5 cent rate permits forwarding or return of the letter where necessary, allows the use of a handwritten message on the card—adding a personal touch—and also provides speedier handling and faster delivery, particularly for cards going out-of-town.

"In recent years, people have been buying better and more expensive greeting cards—and it seems a shame, when only 4-cent third class postage is paid and the addressee has moved that we normally can not even forward the card," Mr. Gilgun commented "It is poor economy to try to save a few pennies and lose several dollars worth of cards in the bargain."

"Reports from the greeting card industry indicate it is not uncommon for an average family to send more than 100 cards during the holiday season.

"To avoid trouble and waiting in line, I suggest that two full sheets of the Christmas stamp—100 to the sheet—be picked up when at the post office, and then there is no last-minute panic about getting stamps to put on cards to send to those who have been overlooked or added to the list."

Christmas stamps, of course, are useable for postage at any time, Mr. Gilgun emphasized.

St. Mary's Mr. & Mrs. Club Christmas Dance

The annual Christmas Dance of the St. Mary's Mr. and Mrs. Club will be held in the church hall on Friday, December 27, from 9:00 to 1:00.

Chairmen Andy and Joanne Fichera have completed plans for a gala evening of dancing to the music of Guy Fandell and his orchestra. Refreshments will be served at midnight.

Mary and Leo Roche and their tciket committee will be busy all week contacting club members. If you are not contacted, please call the Roches at PA 9-2340. Tickets will also be sold at the door.

We hope all club members, old and new, will plan to join in the festivities.

Merry Christmas to all. See you at the dance.

Vinson-Owen School Building Account Final Payment Due

The Town may make its final and release payment for the construction of the Vinson-Owen School before the end of the year if present plans underway are realized. After three years of the school's being in full operation and occupancy, the Town has been keeping $5,100 as a retaining fee against the general contractor until the heating system had been brought up to snuff, and an additional $3,000 for odd finishing jobs that might have cropped up.

The Johnson Road-Ridge Street School building project was the source of an unusual community controversy in 1961 when it was discovered the building committee, in charge of preparing plans and specifications and soliciting bids for construction and other necessary expenses, had inadvertently committed the Town to a $44,990 expense liability in excess of the original $1,500,000 appropriated by the 1957 Town Meeting. The issue ended up before a Special Town Meeting, a referendum vote of the townspeople, the State Legislature, and a second Special Town Meeting before a $45,000 appropriation could be added to previous additions of $32,000 and $691,500 in 1959 Town Meetings, making the final figure $725,000 appropriated for the school.

When the school was finished and occupied in the winter of 1961, heating deficiencies in the three level design plagued the normal operations of the school. When the subcontractor on heating facilities, Almo Heating, wasn't able to correct the problem, a new firm, Park-Davis, was brought in to make the heating what it should be.

During the winter of 1961 and 1962, several second and third level heating failures recurred, and one wing even had to be abandoned occasionally. Last year there were still a few failures in the second and third levels. However, this year everything has been functioning all right, according to Vinson-Owen principal, Dr. Clare M. Corcoran, and the custodian. Dr. Corcoran said she personally was "very encouraged" with the system as it is working so far this year.

(During the first full year of school operation, 1961-1962, there were 242 students enrolled in grades 1 through 6 and the kindergarten. Last year, there were 309 pupils registered there; and this year there are 340 — with many more anticipated in the next few years with all the subdivision homes going up or planned for that school district. However, according to Dr. Corcoran, there is still room for more pupils at the Vinson-Owen as the total capacity has not yet been reached.)

When Fire Chief Frank Amico finally approved the oil heating system's operational and mechanical efficiency and safety (not really in question) after receiving a positive report from Lieutenant-Inspector Joseph Connolly that it complied with state regulations, he sent a communication to the Town Comptroller on December 10, 1963, notifying him of the change in the Fire Department's determination of the heating conditions at the school.

HOUSE FIRE AT PRINCE AVENUE. Firefighters fought a cellar fire at 16 Prince Avenue Saturday afternoon that caused extensive damage in the basement and first floor of the dwelling. Heavy smoke engulfing the property caused firefighters to ring a second alarm, but the fire was confined to the cellar where it started.

Public Library Seeking New Addition For More Space To Meet Demands

The Winchester Public Library is preparing to ask the Town to consider building an addition onto the building in order that it may be able to more adequately meet the increased current and future demands set upon it by the Town's thousands of children, young adult and adult readers.

Although the Library's 1957 Town Meeting request for two additions for reading rooms and an auditorium was turned down because of the then existing school building demand and the believed "luxuriousness" of the architect's $396,000 plans for a Library expansion by some at that time; nevertheless, the Library is again seeking a revised addition on the grounds that there is a serious need and demand for such an expansion.

According to official Library statistics for 1962, more than half of the Town's 21,000 population was registered as a Library book borrower. Interestingly, the Library's high 250,000 book circulation was circulated by some 10,000 borrowers...not to mention those who read in the Library and didn't take books out...and when spread out over the community on a per capita basis, that makes 13 books taken out by every man, woman and child in Town. This is a notable statistic when compared with the American Library Association's considered excellent use of a Library when a 9.5 books per capita a year rate is reached, and when compared with the Town's 7 books per capita in 1931 when the present Library was built.

Armed with statistical information and ammunition of this sort to substantiate and prove its case that a Library addition is both needed and desirable, the Library sent a communication to the Board of Selectmen last week requesting that the board place an article in the Warrant for the next annual Town Meeting in March asking that the Town request the new Permanent Building Committee to look into the construction of a Library addition.

The board noted the request at its Monday night meeting, and voted to look further into the request before deciding whether to support or oppose it.

The Library was remodeled in 1958 and 1959 as a partial solution to some of the existing space problems at that time at a cost of $27,384.

Built at a cost to the Town of $137,000, the Library was dedicated on December 5, 1931. At that time the population of Winchester was 12,000, and the Library, operating with a $12,000 budget and 24,000 books, had 4,000 registered borrowers who circulated 84,000 books.

Ten years ago, with a population of 16,000, the Library had 11 full-time workers handling 57,000 books with a $58,000 budget. Some 147,000 books were circulated to 7,000 borrowers.

38th Christmas Eve Carolling At Common

For the 38th consecutive year men, women and children will throng the Town Common at 7:00 o'clock Tuesday night, Christmas Eve, to sing carols honoring the birth of Jesus in a stable 1,963 years ago.

Outside of Winchester the world will no doubt still be in a turmoil, moving from crisis to crisis. But around the lighted tree on the Common this Christmas Eve, at least some of the peace of the Prince of Peace will prevail as Winchester voices lift in song: "O come, all ye faithful, joyful and triumphant, O come, ye, O come ye to Bethlehem."

Once again this year Mrs. Mary Ranton Witham, organist and choir director at the Unitarian Church, will direct the carol singing. And once again, a brass ensemble, inspired by trombonist Robert Eddy, Jr. will fill the night air with the traditional and sacred hymns of Christendom.

John Burrows and Peter Moulton will accompany on trumpets and Lance Grenzeback on the French horn. Miss Gwen Eugley will sing a solo, "Oh Holy Night."

The Fortnightly, which sponsors the annual carolling on the Common, is hopeful of a good turnout. It is a wonderful way to start Christmas Eve, to meet your neighbors and to give an uplift to your Christmas spirit.

As previously indicated, the carolling begins at 7:00 p.m. Tuesday and should be over in about 30 minutes. Fortnightly is anxious that Winchester people realize this fact for the carolling has been scheduled so as not to interfere with attendance at church services.

Fortnightly also urges all Winchester people who plan to attend to dress very warmly. We were fortunate in our weather last year when about 500 people came to join in the singing. However, two years ago a blizzard, complete with hail stones, descended on the Town. It is nice to have a white Christmas, but Fortnightly is in high hopes that the snow will come either before or after the carolling.

Board of Appeal Denies Permit On 192 Cross Street

The Board of Appeal has unanimously denied a petition by the Winchester Lumber Company to construct a single family residence at 192 Cross Street on a tract of land in the General Residence District which has less than the 6,500 square foot area and less than the 65 foot width requirements.

The decision, handed down in a 15 page technically involved judgment, came two months after a formal public hearing was held, as required by law, in the Town Hall on Tuesday, October 8.

Approximately seven Cross Street residents appeared at the hearing in opposition to the petition for granting a building permit under Section 8A of the Town's zoning by-laws. The petitioner was represented by Attorney Margaret M. Nunes of 220 Cambridge Street.

The land in question is rectangular in shape, has an area of 5087 square feet, and fronts on Cross Street for a distance of 50 feet, the petitioner purchased the property in April of 1963 from Mr. and Mrs. James J. Haggerty, who live adjacent to the property at 196 Cross Street.

The Appeal Board noted at the outset of its decision report that the petitioner's land did not meet the minimum area and width requirements of the zoning by-laws established by the Town. However, the petitioner contended that the restrictions were not applicable in this instance because, the petitioner claimed, the lot existed in its present size at the time Section 8A requirements first became effective, and hence was therefore exempt from the requirements set down.

The pivotal language in Section 8A which spelled out exemptions for nonconforming lots of this type and upon which the Appeal Board was committed to assay and judge from, read as follows:

"Provided, however, that nothing contained in this Section shall prevent the construction or placing of any building on any lot having a smaller area, width, or frontage, if such lot on or subsequent to the effective date hereof, did not adjoin other land of the same owner available for use in connection with said lot."

The board reviewed the title history of the petitioner's tract of land as it related to the Town's changing minimum zoning area requirements and their effective dates.

As a result, the board determined that "on the effective date of the 6,500 square foot minimum area requirement of Section 8A of the Zoning By-Laws, the tract of land which now consists of the

Decorations Set Town's Christmas Mood for Center

Park Department employees, aided by Fire Department ladder equipment and men, put up the town's Christmas lighting in the center on a cold Monday morning this week to set an appropriate Christmas atmosphere in Winchester.

Although the Christmas lights were actually put up a week later than they were last year, the reason for the delay was not a forebearance due to the mourning period established after the death of our late President—as it was in neighboring Woburn—and as it was first presumed by some residents who missed not seeing the gay lights on in the evenings early in December.

During the past three years in which the Winchester Christmas Spirit Committee (established by Town Meeting action) has directed the town's Christmas lighting, the committee had contracted with an outside electrician to handle the putting up and maintaining of decorative lights which he supplied for an approximate total cost of $1700. The Town Meeting appropriated about $300 for the purpose, the other $1400 was donated by local merchants.

However, this year, many merchants decided that they did not want to continue to support what they considered to be an overly expensive and inadequate Christmas lighting decoration program.

After some discussion, and a general meeting between the representatives of the Christmas Spirit Committee, the Winchester Merchants Association, the Park Department, and others, it was decided that the committee and its active participating members — those merchants who generously contribute funds each year to provide some Christmas decorations for the town—would purchase the lights outright and have the Park Department put them up.

The string of lights were purchased at a great saving— about 40 per cent discount — from the Eriksen Supply Company, and Park Department employees quickly put them up this week, at no cost to the town.

Firemen Subdue 2-Alarm Prince Ave. Home Fire

A two-alarm fire at the 16 Prince Avenue dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Timpone early Saturday afternoon was successfully confined mostly to the basement due to the efforts of Winchester firefighters.

Shortly after a Prince Avenue resident had telephoned the Fire Station at 1:55 p.m., Engine 4 and the Rescue Truck arrived at the scene of the blaze. The quantity of heavy black smoke coming from the dwelling at first led firefighters to believe heating fuel was burning in the basement, and Captain Michael Connolly notified the Station to sound a second alarm.

The mutual aid system was put into effect when the second alarm sounded, and the Stoneham, Woburn and Arlington departments sent equipment and men to cover in at the Winchester Station while the full regular detachment went to fight the fire with the rest of the Town's equipment. Fire Chief Amico Asks Precautions For Yule Season

Fire Chief I. Francis Amico today appealed to residents of town to use sensible precautions to help prevent fires which each year roll up a tragic toll of fire fatalities during the Christmas and New Year's holiday season.

In his pre-Christmas appeal for fire safety, Chief Amico said: "Our annual fire loss is made up of a great number of fires—any one of which could involve the loss of life and physical suffering to individuals as well as the loss of their property. A great many of these fires occur during the Christmas holidays. At this time of year when families and friends gather together to enjoy the holidays, the spectre of fire in their homes is particularly horrifying. Yet fire need not be a guest at your house. These reminders of fire protection precautions will help keep your Christmas merry," Chief Amico said.

The Many Christmas Looks Of Mrs. Claus

In thirty-three guises the "Many Looks of Mrs. Claus" came through a holiday decorated arch and across a runway last Friday night at the Lynch School when as many young ladies in the ninth grade modelled self-made clothes at a fashion show entirely of their own making.

Sponsored, planned, decorated, accompanied and cooked for by all the members of the home economics classes of Mrs. Fay Rech, the event was festive and rewarding for the parents and friends in attendance.

The girls modelled clothes they had made in class this fall. They appeared in succession from behind the stage curtains through an arch constructed by Paul Goodwin (industrial arts instructor,) and decorated with holiday greens. They traversed a runway gay with a Boodakian rug and they walked to the tuneful and seasonal Christmas pianoforte of three of their classmates: Maria Kyricos, Sandra Lionetta and Catherine Piscitelli.

Introductions, prepared by Connie Bond and presented by Rosemary Morris, described the many skirts, jumpers, shifts and suits which had been fashioned in classes the pattern number and material for each one and the cost to the girl were also related and added commentary told of some of the problems encountered with the use of certain materials.

Gay and well-timed, the presentation showed the results of the short time of coaching in modelling which most of the girls had had with Mrs. Aliki Kyricos, of 21 Albamont Road, a professional in the field who has also authored a book, "Beauty Lives Within You". Mrs. Kyricos' much appreciated assistance added a certain finesse and confiidence which was evident in the show.

As an appropriate finish to the program, the results of the culinary efforts of the same two classes were enjoyed by the audience—home cooked Christmas cookies, served with punch.

The attractive programs, which had been designed by Marjorie Berger and Patricia Hughes listed the following models, who crossed the runway: Nancy Bennink, Marjorie Berger, Patricia Avakian, Jeanne Burton, Patricia Hughes, Lois Donnell, Donna Heitz, Sandra Lionetta, Patricia Lanigan, Maria Kyricos, Mary McGinty, Marianne Murphy, Maureen O'Doherty, Kathy Parsons.

Also Catherine Piscitelli, Jeanne Reardon, Linda Allen, Helen Bacon, Connie Bond, Elizabeth Dutting, Maureen Harkins, Martha Hunter, Joyce Kell, Paula Lanigan, Linda Lawton, Ann Edwards, Jane Lewis, Sandra Piazza, Joanne Paoni, Cynthia Sugerman and Rosemary Morris.

Ushering for the evening were Maureen Mallon and Katherine Quigley.

Stolen Vehicle Is Recovered; Police Arrest 2 Youths

Two Somerville youths riding around Winchester in a stolen automobile early Tuesday morning, December 3, were arrested by alert local police officers patrolling the town.

While cruising around Mount Vernon Street in Car 52 shortly after 2 a.m. Officers David Greel and Frank Tranfaglia noticed a 1960 Chevrolet heading north on Washington Street in an erratic course. They followed it to Swanton Street and turned off to check a business establishment.

They saw the car leaving Raymond Place going onto Chester Street, and decided to check the occupants who appeared to be acting suspiciously. The officers passed the car at Forest and Washington Streets and indicated the driver to turn to the side of the road, but at the intersection of Brookside Avenue the automobile sped ahead in a burst of speed.

Checks Stolen In Local June Theft Are Being Forged

During the summer and fall months, many of some 115 blank Travelers Express Checks stolen from the Aberjona Pharmacy at 888 Main Street on Monday, June 10, have been passed by various individuals in the Greater Boston Area, Cape Cod, and New York, with several arrests resulting for forgery, and receiving stolen goods.

Sgt. Andrew Crawford of the Winchester Police Department, who is heading the missing checks investigation, has been working closely with Boston Police, State Police, and the F.B.I. on the case.

According to Sgt. Crawford, the case is still current, as several checks were passed just last month.

On July 1, a William Walsh attempted to pass one of the checks using a dead man's identification papers at a Star Market in Newton. However, the store refused to cash it because a phony check from another robbery had been passed there just a week earlier.

Library

Now the Library, in a town of over 21,000 population, has 15 full-time and 16 part-time workers handling more than 72,000 volumes for approximately 10,000 borrowers who circulate over 250,000 books under a $114,000 budget.

Some measure of the Library's increased usage in the past ten years is indicated by the periodical department. In 1953 the Library subscribed to 180 periodicals; in 1962 it subscribed to 266 magazines and newspapers to keep up with the reading public's demand, and this year another half dozen were added. Library goers find the periodical room, necessitated in the remodelling almost seven years ago, a constantly used facility.

Other Library uses include public meetings of groups in the basement Rich Room (155 meetings in 1962), a family film program (about 40 persons every Friday night; and large Saturday morning youngster audiences), summer children's reading club (360 children last summer), Hospital circulation...paid for by the En Ka Society but handled by the Library ...which circulated 3,383 books last year.

Robert L. Wagenknecht, head librarian, pointed out that the Library is greatly pressed: (1) To provide a complete Children's Library unit for the 5-14 age group which has long since outgrown its present quarters. (2) To provide room to accommodate some 45 to 50 young adults of high school age, which at present frequently crowd older adults out of regular Library main reading room space. (3) To provide adequate work room and more office space for the staff. (Mr. Wagenknecht is moving out of his office to provide room for the new assistant librarian to have an office, and he is moving his office upstairs to where religious books are now shelved over his present office.) (4) And, if possible, to provide a larger and adequate meeting and exhibition hall to replace the present small facility which would be used for additional book shelving and as a quiet reference area.

Dial-a-matic adding machine. For small offices, home use, income tax, etc. Six dials, answers appear automatically. Also subtracts. Priced at $4.00 at the Winchester Star.

YOUR $100 Billion Business

How do you decide how to spend $100 billion a year? As a taxpayer and a voter, you are a stockholder and have a personal interest in your Federal Government's expenditures. Every year your Government spends about $400 billion of your money.

In 18 years as a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, I have participated in working out the way the departments of the Federal Government will spend their share of that $100 billion It's a mighty staggering proposition.

This year 12 months have passed since the budget was drawn up and still all the decisions on it have not been made. We should have had all the appropriations bills passed before July 1, 1963, the start of fiscal 1964. That has been done only twice since I have been in the Senate, but we usually finished our work before the first of September. This year the Congress has passed so-called "continuing resolutions" which permit the departments to spend at the same rate as last year until their new appropriations for fiscal 1964 pass. This is not good business because the various departments can do little planning and advance work on what may be necessary Government services.

President Johnson is now working hard (until 1:00 a.m. on the 9th of this month) on the budget he will submit to Congress next January. He states that he is trying to hold the line and reduce Governmental expenditures. But even at best his budget will probably exceed $100 billion.

Most of us in Congress expected this for in the last few years we have seen new programs enacted into law which are now growing... the Peace Corps, the Kerr-Mills Medical Care Bill, Area Redevelopment and expanded Public Works. Other programs are coming along every year and are bound to increase our Federal expenditures, even though we try to hold the line. Meanwhile, older programs are not being reduced.

How is the budget prepared? Preliminary work commenced 18 months ago, when the departments began to draw up their programs. Then the Bureau of the Budget began consolidating, and changes and eliminations were made. After the President gives his final approval, the Budget Bureau will begin to draft the message for him to send to the Congress about January 20. I am looking at this year's budget book. It is larger than the combined Boston phone directories. Think of it!

One matter that is little understood is the requirement that a project must first be authorized by Congress before an appropriation can be made to go forward with it. Consequently, many public works projects are authorized several years before work actually begins. Appropriations for planning are necessary and then the decision whether to go forward must be made. Sometimes the lag is 10 years or more, as in the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, authorized in 1937 and funded in 1953.

Some budget items cannot be altered by the Congress. The interest on the Federal debt, now over $10 billion per year or roughly $52 for every person in the country, is an example of the fixed expenditures which must be paid.

By custom rather than by law, the House of Representatives, the larger of the two bodies, has first responsibility for the appropriations legislation. Here the budget is broken down into tax bills (which must originate in the House) which are referred to the Ways and Means Committee, and about 12 appropriations bills, each covering one or more Federal departments or agencies. Each goes to a subcommittee of the 50-member House Appropriations Committee, which hears departmental witnesses and other experts, usually in closed sessions.

Meanwhile, Senators follow the progress of the bills through printed stenographic records of the hearings (more than a 4 ft. shelf of books from the House hearings alone), through charts, by talking with Committee experts, and by checking with the summary which is kept current on a blackboard in the Senate Appropriations Committee office. Just a glance at this board shows how tremendous the figures are and how intricate the details must be. Those details may range from a dredging study amounting to approximately $3,000 or a regional staff office of three to four men, to whole programs costing sometimes billions of dollars in the Defense Department. To understand them, we on the Appropriations Committee must get the best advice possible from people in whom we have confidence, either within or without the Government service.

The House Committee reports its recommendations to the House of Representatives which debates the bill, passes it, and sends it to the Senate, where it is referred to our Appropriations Committee. With 12 bills, each of the 27 members of the Senate Committee must serve on several of the subcommittees, where our hearings on the budget requests are held. I am a member of six. This means that I cannot always attend all meetings because often two or more subcommittees' meet at the same time. We arrange for the senior man on each subcommittee to become the responsible member of his Party for its work. Each of the nine Republicans takes one, and three of us have taken two. The majority and minority ranking members of the subcommittees work closely together. They are responsible largely for the bills that are reported out of the full Committee to the floor of the Senate, and support those bills to their passage.

In this work I try to judge the new budget requests by comparison with previous years. Are there increased numbers of employees? Does the maintenance of their properties cost more? How much new construction is necessary in order to take care of new equipment? To simplify this we compose a "spread sheet", which lists in columns for comparison last year's appropriations, the budget requests, the House, action and the amount requested in the Senate by the Administration over the action of the House, somewhat like the blackboard. With all its information gathered, the Senate Committee makes its final report. The great problem the Committee must face is that all the individual pressures are for increased spending on programs which someone believes necessary. The Committee has to resist these pressures and try to act in the best interest of all the people. Sometimes this is very difficult.

The whole appropriations procedure involves huge sums of money and millions of people. It's very disturbing that the procedure has been so delayed this year. It all boils down to a determination of what democracy means to us... how do we want our Government to serve us to get realistic results?

In the final analysis, it's your money, it's your business, and the interest you take in building up Federal income and holding down new Government spending programs will be reflected by the Representatives and Senators you send to the Congress. Upon the soundness of our Government depends the present and future of every man, woman, and child in our great country.

Stolen Car

The fleeing vehicle went out of control near the entrance to the J. H. Winn Company, striking an upright stop sign, going off the left side of the road, and hitting a tree and coming to a stop. The two ocupants jumped from the car and started to run away.

Officer Tranfaglia fired a warning shot into the air, and the two youths immediately surrendered.

They were questioned at the scene and placed under arrest.

Acording to police, the two youths had been using the car without authority, and had taken it from the 318 Lounge Bar parking lot in Somerville.

In Woburn District Court later that same morning, the two youths were sentenced to six months in the House of Correction, but were granted a year's suspended sentence.

Fire

duty regular firefighters and members of the Winchester Auxiliary Fire Department who were in town also went to aid in the quelling of the fire.

During the two and a half hours that the firefighters fought the blaze, the basement ceilings, walls, cabinets and floor coverings were burned.

Firefighters used smoke ejectors to clear the fumes, and cleaned up the debris and boarded up the windows before leaving the house.

A Fire Department spokesman said the probable cause of the fierce blaze was defective electrical wiring in the cellar area.

There were no injuries reported, in fighting the fire, and no available dollar estimate of the damage caused, although it was considered extensive.

Engagement Of Miss Luitwieler Is Announced

Mrs. C. S. Luitwieler of 89 Cambridge Street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Ann Luitwieler, to Mr. John E. Bunce of Peterboro, N. H.

A January wedding is planned.

Of Social Interest

Miss Lizotte Is Engaged

Mrs. Mary E. Juliano of 69 Oak Street, announces the engagement of her granddaughter, Sandra Marie Lizotte, daughter of the late George and Virginia Lizotte, to Mr. Joseph Charles Roketenetz, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roketenetz of 70 Woodside Road.

MISS SANDRA M. LIZOTTE

Miss Lizotte is a graduate of the Winchester High School in the class of 1963. She is now attending the Mansfield Beauty Academy of Boston.

Mr. Roketenetz is also a graduate of the High School in 1962. He attended Franklin Institute, and is now employed by the North East Disposal Company.

An October wedding is planned.

Vavak—Gravalese

Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Gravalese of 23 Emerson Road, announce the marriage of their daughter, Donna Marie, to Stephen M. Vavak, of Miami, Florida.

MRS. STEPHEN M. VAVAK

The marriage took place in Windham, N. H., on December 9th. The bride is a former graduate of Winchester High and is presently employed as a secretary at R.C.A. in Burlington.

Third (3rd) Class Petty Officer, Stephen M. Vavak is assigned to the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter (East Wind) on operation Deep Freeze, somewhere in the Atlantic.

Santos—De Vries

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Ellen Lorraine De Vries, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John De Vries, of 124 Church Street became the bride of Reginald B. Santos, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Santos, of Gloucester, at a candlelight ceremony, December first at Saint Mary's Church in Winchester.

MRS. REGINALD B. SANTOS

The Reverend Martin Dolphin officiated at the double-ring ceremony which was followed by a reception at the King's Grant, Danvers. The bride was gowned in Empire style ivory velvet trimmed with Venice lace with pearls and hand-cut crystals. She wore a detachable chapel train. Her French silk illusion veil was held in place with a circlet of velvet trimmed with holly and she carried a cascade of ivory poinsettias and holly.

Miss Joan De Vries was the maid of honor and Miss Kathy De Vries was honor attendant. Both are sisters of the bride. Their floor-length gowns were of emerald green velvet with matching bow headpieces. They carried bouquets of red poinsettias and holly with red velvet. The bridesmaids, Miss Carol Bairstow of Winchester and Miss Lynda Gay of Belmont were identically gowned.

Miss Elena Santos, niece of the bridegroom was flower girl and wore a floor-length gown of the same green velvet. She wore a wreath of holly in her hair, and carried a basket of tiny red and white flowers.

Best man for his brother was Joseph Santos, Jr., of Beverly. Ushers included Edward Ekborg and Gerald Pinto of Gloucester and Robert Bolcom from Boston. John De Vries, Jr., brother of the bride and Michael Santos nephew of the bridegroom were junior ushers.

Miss Dorothea Jarvis of Boston was in charge of the guest book at the reception.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. De Vries was gowned in American beauty red chiffon with matching accessories. The mother of the bridegroom wore mink brown satin brocade with matching accessories.

The bride was graduated from Winchester High School and Mt. Ida Jr. College. Mr. Santos was graduated from Gloucester High School and attended Northeastern University.

The couple will make their home in Beverly after a wedding trip to Canada.

Miss Greaves Engaged To Mr. Fottler

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Greaves of 5 Euclid Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Cynthia, to Peter Fottler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fottler of Waban and Marshfield.

MISS CYNTHIA GREAVES

Miss Greaves graduated from Katharine Gibbs School of Boston. Mr. Fottler is currently employed as an engineer at Sylvania Electronics Systems in Waltham and is a graduate of Newton High School, Chauncy Hall School, and the University of Maine School of Mechanical Engineering.

A May wedding is planned.

Miss Donovan Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Donovan of 117 Sylvester Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth Donovan, to Mr. Bruce Allen Brown of Woburn.

MISS MARY E. DONOVAN

Miss Donovan is a graduate of Winchester High School, class of 1961, and is presently a Junior at the State College at Lowell.

Mr. Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving A. Brown, and a graduate of Woburn High School, class of 1960. He is presently serving with the United States Coast Guard.

Pamela Raymond To Be Presented In New York City

Miss Pamela Raymond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Raymond of 24 Lorena Road, and granddaughter of Leonard J. Raymond of Boston (formerly of Winchester), will be presented at the New York Debutante Cotillion and Christmas Ball, being held at the Waldorf Astoria on December 20th. Her escorts will be Mr. Gordon Harkness Rheinstrom of New York City and Mr. Stafford James King, III of Topsfield.

MISS PAMELA RAYMOND

Preceding the ball, Miss Raymond will entertain her escorts and Miss Ann Rheinstrom, Mr. Peter C. Miller, Miss Victoria Ward, Mr. Calvin Smedley, Mr. Julian Charles Frost and Mr. Graham Hearn at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf.

Before the Cotillion her grandfather, Mr. Leonard J. Raymond, will have as his dinner guests at the Sky Club: Mrs. Charles A. Dana, Mr. and Mrs. J. Truman Bidwell, Mr. and Mrs. J. Truman Bidwell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Rheinstrom, Mr. and Mrs. Jack A. Rheinstrom, and the parents of the debutante, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Raymond.

The general contractor for the construction of the school, Keystone Construction Company of Boston, sent a bill for final and release payment of the retained $5,100 and the other $3,000.

On Monday night, the Board of Selectmen was told by James Costello, town comptroller, that Sumner Andrews, chairman of the Johnson Road-Ridge Street School Building Committee, had indicated a willingness to sign a certificate of final payment to the contractor since the Fire Chief had approved the heating equipment.

The Selectmen discussed the School Committee's stated opinion that its members were not "entirely satisfied" with the heating in the Vinson-Owen School because it had not had a long-term full winter work out. The School Committee asked that final payment releasing the general contractor from further responsibility for the school building be withheld for an additional 90 days—until the end of March—so the heating system could be watched for a full cold weather season.

The Selectmen said the School Committee's opinion, although appearing reasonable, also appeared to be overly "precautionary" in the light of the Fire Chief's approval and no reported Vinson-Owen School heating failures thus far this year.

The Selectmen decided to tour the school and check the situation fully themselves. Shailer Avery, chairman of the board, and John Lyman visited the school shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday morning. Mr. Avery said the heating appeared to be perfectly adequate on all three levels, and both the principal and custodian said it had been functioning well so far this year.

Mr. Avery said the Selectmen would probably review the matter on Monday night, after they had had a chance to discuss the matter with the School Committee to see if its members had stronger reasons for delaying than just to make the contractor wait a little longer for apparently unnecessary checks on the system. "After all," Mr. Avery said, "the contractor has been waiting three years for his money."

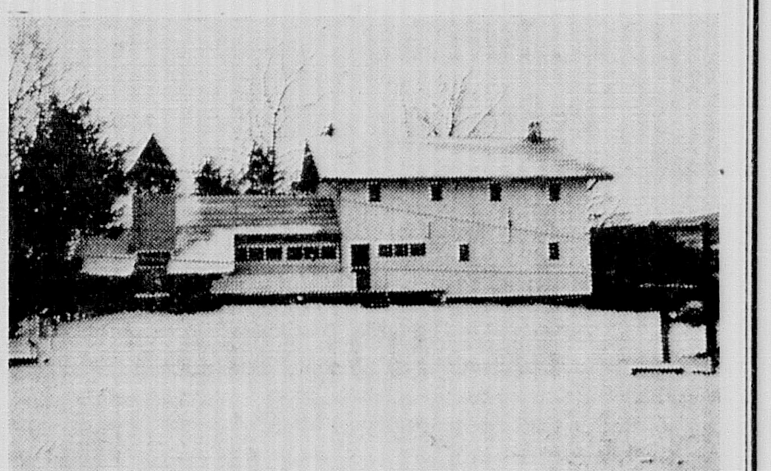
FRONTENAC SKI AREA

Plymouth, New Hampshire



The lodge at Frontenac Ski Area where many Winchester boys and girls will spend their Christmas and February school vacations houses 62 guests.

The Greers, owners of Frontenac, announce many new changes for their second year of operation. Three miles of trails have been cut from the top of the mountain. The bottom third of the slope has been cleared and floodlighted for night skiing. A new electrically operated rope tow will service this lower third of the slope.

Frontenac is open for children's camps during the two winter vacations and to various social and family groups on every weekend not included in the children's camps.

The weekend rates are nominal, with provision made for family groups. The weekend package plan includes two overnights of lodging, meals, ski instruction, and use of slopes, trails, and tows.

Mr. Greer may be contacted at his Malden home, phone DA 4-8582 — or in Plymouth, N. H., Plymouth 908.

Living With Your Heart

Millions of Americans — possibly as many as ten million — suffer from high blood pressure. It is one of the Heart Association's major concerns because it affects so many of us, because it can be serious indeed — and because medical science has not yet solved the mystery of all of its origins.

Everyone has blood pressure; without it, the blood couldn't circulate in our bodies. It varies from day to day, moment to moment, rising when we are excited, dropping when we rest. When it is persistently high, the condition is what doctors call hypertension.

Your blood pressure is the force of the blood against the artery walls, which are elastic and muscular, and which stretch and contract to accommodate the blood pressure.

Your largest artery is the aorta, main channel leaving the heart. Ever-smaller arteries branch out from it, ending in tiny arterioles, which make it easy or difficult for the blood to get through to the capillaries. When the arterioles clamp down, the heart has to work harder to pump the blood that nourishes your body.

In a small percentage of cases, high blood pressure can be traced to a specific disease but by far the most common kind — known as "essential" hypertension — doesn't seem to be related to any other ailment and its cause remains unknown.

Researchers are delving into various fields in their hunt for the causes of essential hypertension. They are studying body chemistry, bloodstream substances starting a chain of chemical blunders ending in elevated blood pressure.

Also under scrutiny is the possible relationship of human emotions to high blood pressure. Some persons react even to mild stress with excessive rises in blood pressure; their bodies respond to daily life as though it were one long succession of crises.

It has been found, too, that high blood pressure often runs in families. People whose parents had it are much more likely to get it than those whose parents did not.

Hypertension speeds the "aging" process in arteries and arterioles and when it is well developed, doctors take special pains to check for possible damage to the heart, kidneys and brain.

For those with high blood pressure who need medical help, the physician has much more of an arsenal of drugs than he did a decade ago—notably derivatives of Indian snakeroot. Many have been found to work with amazing effectiveness when used in combination with others.

Drug treatment will lower blood pressure in most cases of essential hypertension, but the physician also pays attention to his patient's diet. If he is overweight, he will be told to reduce. In some—but not all—cases, a low-salt diet is recommended. Along with this, physicians employ diuretics to help the body rid itself of excess salt. But nobody except the doctor can successfully prescribe a diet for a hypertension patient.

In many cases, patients are referred to psychiatrists if they are greatly disturbed by nervous tension and anxiety. The combination of physical and emotional treatment frequently allays the condition.

In most cases, treatment must be continued over a protracted period of time, but it is usually easier and less complicated than the patient fears. Neglect of well-developed high blood pressure is a form of Russian roulette.

Most patients are advised to do all things moderately, get plenty of rest and moderate recreation, and cultivate a relaxed outlook. They are counseled to give up tobacco on general principles; the American Heart Association considers heavy cigarette smoking injurious to the circulation.

For further information about hypertension, ask your nearest MHA office for the American Heart Association's free booklet, "High Blood Pressure."

The Winchester Star

Established 1880 by Theodore P. Wilson, Sr.

Editorials:

Christmas: A Season And Spirit Of Peace

A spirit and mood of disturbed tranquility and restless reflections on peace in the domestic and world scenes are a part of this normally much more jubilant Christmas holiday season here in Winchester this year as the national period of mourning for our late President and champion of global peace draws to a close Sunday.

Also, according to our calendars, it was just 1,963 years ago next Wednesday that the Prince of Universal Peace was born in Bethlehem. Every major religion in the world has a "Prince of Peace" as its originator, and for Christians it is Jesus. The very "Prince of Peace" title attributed to Jesus is not only a reflection of His teachings and His life, but is also a reflection of man's basic desire to embrace the concept of peace and to realize whatever fulfillments of that concept are humanly attainable.

After the terrible violence of World War II had passed, and the peoples of many nations realized that with the advent of the Atomic Age, war threatened the very extinction of the human race as bows and arrows, guns, and other instruments of violence never had so greatly, it was quite natural that a world governmental body devoted to the preservation of peace like the United Nations should become established and generally receive the support of almost every nation and people.

Man continues to take his short, but in recent years increasingly more progressive steps toward resolving a state of peace within the framework of the United Nations—and somewhat unusual in the history of the world, through a see-saw balance of forces between two diametrically opposed ideological groups, in part complemented by a third neutral group force which serves to partially offset any imbalances in the present Cold War relationship. Described as a Cold War era, nevertheless the world is not now involved in a great war, and is attempting to employ a method of "co-existence peace" until some time in the future a real and lasting peace can be established.

On Christmas Eve in the Winchester Common, many voices will be raised in praise of the man who suffered death to bring His message to the world. And on Christmas Sunday in Winchester's beautiful churches, choirs and organs will swell in great and ancient hymns: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will toward men." These observances will be repeated in many nations: in hundreds of cities and towns, in thousands of churches and places of worship, and in millions of homes and hearts.

Christmas is a symbolic but very real and deep commitment of many peoples to the message of peace on earth, good will toward men. That is why, celebrating the birth of Christ who brought the message home to the hearts and minds of men, Christmas is a joyous and holiday season for all men.

From The Editor's Desk

Merchants' Christmas Initiative

Winchester's civic-minded merchants, who during the past two years generously donated over $1000 for each Christmas lighting for the town, did an about-face this year and displayed what may be described as a typically Yankee sharp business economy sense and a typically American example of private enterprise initiative for what will result in a better town decoration of the Center in future Christmas seasons.

In 1961 the Winchester Spirit Committee received $1515 in donations from local merchants for Christmas lighting in the Center. Expenses reached $1605, however. Again last year, the merchants donated $2053. After $1734 had been spent for setting up the lighting display ($1165 for C. B. Hamblen & Son, Inc., contractor for supplying and putting up the lights; $169 for Edison electricity and $37 for meters; and $350 for Harold Tarbox' electrical services), there was $272 left in the account for this year's Christmas lighting.

Ususally donations for the lighting are solicited and given during the summer months. However, this year, by the end of November, there was still only $272 left in the account.

As Ed Williams, president of the relatively new (organized 1962) Winchester Merchants Association, put it: "The merchants felt that the lighting was getting too expensive for the short period of time they were up, and especially when the high cost of renting the equipment and paying for contractual services meant that when the season was over the town had nothing to show for its expenditure—that is, the Christmas Spirit Committee didn't own any lights for future years." In addition, he said in speaking for the merchants, there were many who felt the decorations could have been more substantial and better arranged.

Thus, a meeting of the minds took place early in December, and it was decided that the committee and its active participants would purchase strings of lights outright and be able to use them other years as well. The lights were obtained at a greatly reduced rate—40 per cent discounted—and the committee has a display this year that costs significantly less than in other years (over $500 less) and which it can use again next season.

In addition, the lights obtained were smaller and less expensive electrically to operate than the once used in past years without any loss in attractive coloration of the trees in the Common.

Over the next few years, the merchants will undoubtedly enlarge on this year's display to make the Common more festively lighted for the Christmas season as it should be. Current plans indicate decorating the Edison poles on Main, Thompson and Church Streets, and maybe additions of a few reindeer and a manger scene on the Common, as well as doing something for the Town Hall and Mill Pond area.

Possibly a few residents may fear any enlargement of the past policy of only a very little lighting in the Center for the Christmas season. But such fears, based on past record here in Winchester, would be unfounded. No one can question the merchants' desire to decorate the Common and Center area in anything but the most tasteful and appropriate of ways. Previous experience here will point out that it was through the efforts of the merchants collectively through the Rotary Club, and in several cases, individually through contributions, that the Town Common was greatly upgraded and more aesthetically provided for just a few years back. The new attractive rock garden on the Common by the bend in Church Street is but one example of the merchants' thinking and generosity.

For several years Winchester's Common has been one of the slightliest decorated anywhere around the Greater Boston area. On the other hand, no one wants it to be "over-decorated" to the detriment of the Town's beautiful Center. But, trusting in the merchants' civic-minded and generous attitude in caring for the Common's appearances in recent years, and their concern of the Center's appearance as a whole (as it is reflected in the attractive ways many of the stores have been remodelled), we are confident future plans for better Christmas decorations for the Town will be met with hearty and grateful approval.

And the merchants are to be commended for the intelligent and resourceful manner in which they have been able to improve upon what had been an established policy in practice by the Town—both in terms of private enterprise economics and more adequate and aesthetically appropriate decoration of the town's beautiful Center in keeping with a tasteful but yet properly spirited celebration of the Christmas holiday season.

The Last Christmas Of Father Kapaun

> "From the time man first raised fist to man, the lot of prisoners of war has been hard. The ancient peoples sometimes crucified captives; they invariably enslaved them, for life. From the time of Peter of Dreux, who burned out the eyes of prisoners, with hot irons, to the captives of Stalingrad and the hell camp of Cabanatuan, it has often been better for men to die fighting than to be taken by the enemy."
> —Lt. Col. T. R. Fehrenbach, USAR

Korea was white and cold; but the whiteness that was snow was stained with blood and shell powder, and the cold made the stench of war linger in your nostrils until your insides began to feel as dead as the corpses that were strewn along the roadside. Sometimes your Chinese captors made you move those corpses away from the road if they happened to be Chinese and nearer the road if they were American. All of the corpses were frozen; stiff, glazed and grotesque. Often they slipped out of your hands when you tried to lift them. Sometimes the Chinese would go berserk and beat the corpses with their rifle butts, and break them apart as though they had become ice all the way through.

It is December, 1950, and you have arrived at an old mining camp near the Yalu River. You are a prisoner of war and this is the most dreaded place you can be. Because the death rate is higher here than in any other compound the prisoners have named it "Death Valley".

The food you eat is a hardened mixture of soya bean and rice. It is distributed to you once a day, half cooked, and rolled in grime. The prisoners call them baseballs. For many they are only momentary relief, a prelude to dysentery.

There is no medicine, no medical supplies of any kind. Untreated wounds become infected and color with gangrene; pneumonia is common and actually appreciated because it is a less painful way to die.

And every day men die. First the sick and wounded; then those who possess little faith in themselves or anything else. Oddly, the young men die first. Sometimes they simply set themselves in a frozen corner and solemnly declare, "I've decided to die."

There comes a time when no one cares about any one else except himself. It is a matter of survival and you cannot survive by thinking of others. The Chinese send

Then one day a new prisoner arrives at Death Valley. His name is Emil Kapaun, he is the son of a Kansas farmer, and he is a Catholic priest. But whether you are Presbyterian, Lutheran, Baptist—whether you are Christian or Jew or non-believer—you come to call him "father".

From the beginning he put back the will to live in the hearts of men who had all but given up. "Pretty soon," he would say, "the first American tank will come rolling down that hillside, boys, and we'll all be going home." In the morning he would boil a pot of hot water and tell the men to imagine it was fresh coffee. He joked about situations that, to the others, had been horrifying and alarming.

He tended the sick and dying, washed their wounds, picked the lice from their bodies, cleaned their messes, and prayed for their souls. He would even offer a prayer to St. Dismas, the Good Thief, then go out and steal food for them from under the noses of the Chinese guards. Once, he was caught, you on burial details and you hate it because it steals a little more of your strength.

The Chinese were always especially interested in men like Father Kapaun. The went out of their way to abuse and torment him, both physically and mentally. They felt that by breaking him who appeared to be the strongest link, the chain would necessarily shatter apart.

On Christmas Eve he offered Mass. "I've managed to salvage just this small chalice," he said, "but the implements aren't important. Our prayer is." His sermons were brief, simple, unpretentious and struck home. "Don't be afraid of those who can kill the body, rather fear him who, having killed, has the power to cast us into hell as well."

"In his soiled and ragged fatigues," remembers one prisoner who survived, "with his scraggly beard and his queer woolen cap, made of the sleeve of an old GI sweater, pulled down over his ears, he looked like any other half-starved prisoner. But there was something in his voice and bearing that was different—a dignity, a composure, a serenity that radiated from him like a light—giving men hope and courage and a sense of peace. By his very presence, somehow, he could turn a stinking, louse-ridden mud hut, for a little while, into a cathedral."

He fashioned a cross out of two rough pieces of wood, and compared it to the wood of a stable in Bethlehem two thousand years ago. "Like Him we are all born to die. But like Him we should also think thoughts of life and have only words of hope spill from our tongues. Soon we'll be free."

On a wet day in April of 1951, Father Kapaun died. He had contracted dysentery and pneumonia on top of a serious leg infection, and soon fell into delirium. He died in a great deal of pain but never whimpered. Not long afterward, the little daughter of the Chinese commander danced by the compound tossing up and catching something that glittered in the sunlight. Some of the prisoners recognized it as Father Kapaun's gold chalice.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By

YOUR CONGRESSMAN

BRAD MORSE

Last week the House of Representatives enacted amendments to the Manpower Retraining Act that will make possible the retraining of more than 200,000 workers during each of the next three years.

Originally enacted in 1961, the Manpower Retraining Act was the first significant effort to enable unemployed workers help themselves to new jobs and new dignity. Although the program is expected to reach its goal of 400,000 retrained workers by the end of 1964, limitations in the scope of the program prompted important amendments at this time.

Specifically the new legislation, which has already been approved by the Senate in similar form, opens up the retraining program to more young workers. These are the ones most seriously disadvantaged in the labor market. Often without the skills necessary to our increasingly technological age, younger workers have an unemployment rate more than four times that of adult workers. The new legislation lowers the age limit for participation in the retraining program from nineteen years to seventeen and increases the percentage of funds available to younger workers from five to twenty-five percent. Special safeguards are included to prevent young people from being encouraged to leave school. A year must elapse before a school dropout becomes eligible to participate. In addition local authorities are to use all appropriate procedures to encourage the youth to return to school. In many cases special occupational training programs will be developed for disadvantaged youth whose motivation and ability to adjust even to basic work situations has been impaired through years of deprivation.

As the program has developed in the past two years, it has become apparent that many of the unemployed most in need of retraining have been unable to participate due to their inability to adapt to the training itself. The Labor Department reported last summer that the unemployed with high school diplomas in the prime working ages were the chief beneficiaries from the program. But because they are harder to retrain and less in demand by employers the most severely disadvantaged—the oldest, the youngest and the uneducated—were often passed over.

The amendments seek to remedy this problem by providing for basic education programs to prepare the unemployed for occupational training programs. Thirty-six per cent of the unemployed in America have an eighth grade education or less—many have difficulty with the English language, many are illiterate. Without the possibility of training directed at their particular needs, such men and women face the bleak prospect of a life on relief—without hope and self-respect. A demonstration project undertaken in Cook County, Illinois proved extremely successful not only in educating the workers themselves, but in giving them a new realization of the importance of education to their children.

With each day bringing new scientific advances calling for new skills, the expansion of our retraining programs assumes greater importance. The operation of the program to date indicates that not only does retraining save people, but the public treasury as well. Lifelong dependency involves a cost to society about $30,000—retraining, perhaps $1500.

This new boost to our retraining effort provides Fifth District communities with increased opportunity to attack unemployment and the tragic waste and despair it breeds.

New Year's Eve Party At Legion Home

The American Legion Post 97 is having a New Year's Eve party at the Legion Home on Vine Street. There will be a catered buffet and dancing from 9 to 2 to a fine orchestra.

The hard-working committee has everything well organized. Anyone who has attended any of the recent social affairs conducted by the Legion knows that it will be well run with a fine time had by all.

Tickets may be obtained by calling the Legion Home, PA 9-0967.

Democratic Town Committee

The sympathy of the Town Committee has been tendered to the family of the late Mrs. James Cullen, 86 Loring Avenue. Mrs. Cullen's daughter, Mrs. Mary Doherty, and Mary's husband, Neal, are members of the Town Committee.

The Town Committee and her many other friends will be pleased to know that one of our most active members, Mrs. Helen Gaynor, 6 Ardley Road, is well on the road to recovery after a very serious illness.

We anticipate a large attendance at our meeting in early January. As far as we know now, the members are all in good health, and those who have been cruising in Southern waters will all be back with us, tanned and refreshed. They include Jack Hogan, secretary of the Town Committee, Bill Dailey, treasurer of the committee, and his wife Mary, also a member, and committee members Bette Hill and Margaret Donohue, whose husbands, Charlie Hill and Andy Donohue, also enjoyed trips to the Caribbean.

Our Town Committee chairman, Elizabeth McDonald, is receiving congratulations on her appointment by Governor Endicott Peabody to serve a two-year term on the important Council on Metropolitan Planning. Another Winchester resident, Franklin Patterson, 3 Herrick Street, has been named to a one-year term on the committee. He is an excellent selection.

The council, advisory in function, would study and make recommendations in transportation, redevelopment, sewerage and recreation, and various other social and economic interests affecting the metropolitan area. This is a new council created this year by the Legislature.

This will be a happy holiday time at the home of committee member May Sericka when the family gathers for the Christmas season at 3 Middlesex Street. Not only will son Dan be home from New Hampshire State College but Edward (Jocko), his wife and small sons, will be home from Xavier University in Ohio, where Jocko is doing a superb job of coaching and teaching.

In next week's issue of the Star we will have more news about the college sons and daughters of several of our other members.

Chairman McDonald has received from Congressman Brad Morse a copy of the Congressional Record of December 5 which contains the six-hour series of eulogies to our late President. Our sincere thanks to Congressman Morse.

BOOK REVIEW

by Ann M. Anderson

Winchester Public Library

THE FAIL-SAFE FALLACY

by Sidney Hook

This should be required reading for anyone who has already read Fail-Safe by Eugene Burdick and Harvey Wheeler. It is not a literary criticism in any sense of the word, but a devastating attack on the so-called "message" of the book.

The plot of Fail-Safe is as follows. Through a mechanical failure—a defective condenser in an activating machine, a nuclear attack on Russia is dispatched by the United States. Six bombers set off heading for Russia and all efforts to recall them fail. In an attempt to prevent an all-out war the Kremlin is warned, and the President orders an American plane to drop a hydrogen bomb on New York City to convince the Russians of the genuineness of the error.

The authors hold that this book is not meant merely as a piece of exciting science fiction, but as a presentation of an important truth—that some disaster similar to this is almost inevitable under our present set-up of retaliatory defense.

Sidney Hook, in the Fail-Safe Fallacy, deplores this viewpoint. He holds that the possibility of mechanical failure occurring is so extremely remote as to approach the zero point. The breakdown of any part of any machine is electronically checked and instantly reported. The malfunctioning of a small condenser being responsible for a full-scale war is absurd, and the climax of the story, the inability of the President to recall the bombers, is fantastic. The truth of the matter is that once the mission reaches the fail-safe point it would automatically turn back unless specifically ordered on by the President. The result of a breakdown would result only in the President's being unable to give a positive order to attack even if he wanted to. Hook feels that the authors of Fail-Safe should not have disregarded in their "truthful" novel the many safeguards the U. S. Government has devised against any possibility of such an occurrence. He hopes that Russia is as vigilant.

In Fail-Safe the American military is pictured as a group of trigger-happy fanatics looking for an excuse to exercise their wartime powers while Khrushchev appears as a humanitarian more sinned against than sinning. That both these impressions are erroneous can be easily checked by reviewing a little recent history.

The net result of Fail-Safe, which has been on the best-seller lists since its publication last fall, is that a mood of defeatism and appeasement is generated which the Communists will not be slow to seize and act upon. Professor Hook's expose of the absurdity of Burdick and Wheeler's theses should do much to combat this attitude.

Panel to Discuss Overcrowding At The High School

Editor of the Star:

Because of the references in last week's Star to overcrowding in the Winchester High School, this seems an appropriate time to announce the McCall and Lynch Jr. High Schools' joint mid-winter meeting on February 11th at Lynch.

There will be a panel discussion to bring forth the ideas and progress that has been made in plans for alleviation of the overcrowding in the High School. Four men who are intimately involved with consideration of the subject will present aspects of the current town thought. They are Austin Broadhurst, member of the School Committee; Howard Niblock, principal of the High School; Dr. Harry Gilson, superintendent of schools; and Arthur Schmidt, chairman of the Permanent Building Committee. Mrs. Felix Palubinskas will be the moderator. Over the years she has demonstrated her interest in Winchester, young people and education.

In order to make the discussion of the panel most effective, pertinent comments or questions will be welcomed. They should be addressed in writing to Panel Discussion, 4 Overlook Way, Winchester.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Robert Millican,
McCall Jr. High Associates
Mrs. D. Reid Weedon, Jr.

Petition Sponsors Thank Signators, Helpers, Media

Editor of the Star:

The citizen's initiative petition to shrink the Executive Council's powers and privileges to a manageable minimum has been signed by an unprecedented 125,407 registered voters.

There is little need to thank these thoughtful thousands—for they were acting to strengthen their own government. So, too, were the hundreds of persons who circulated our petitions, but their offerings of time and toil were often sacrificial.

The local registrars of voters deserve praise for efficiently and promptly certifying these thousands of names, despite the avalanche of added paperwork.

News media coverage, reportorial and editorial, was accurate and indispensable in explaining this petition to the public.

The Jaycees, the League of Women Voters and the Taxpayers Federation had the unique privilege of sharing equally the considerable task of organizing and assuming major roles in this campaign. Their role was that of a citizen's catalyst, fusing the energies of many willing hands, including those of other organizations.

We are grateful indeed to all who worked on this drive, and the three organizations pledge their co-operative efforts to insure that this petition is pondered carefully in 1964 by the Legislature and by the voters statewide next fall, if that ultimate step should become necessary.

Nicholas Fitzgerald, Jr., chairman of the Christmas Spirit Committee, said he estimated this year's total cost as somewhere between $500 and $700; substantially below what it had previously cost.

Ed Williams, president of the local merchants association, said not only was a great saving realized this year by the purchase of the lights rather than the renting of them, but the town now owns them to use in future years as well.

Mr. Williams also noted that the lighting used is more efficient, and, while the arrangement is not entirely up to what he thinks is appropriate this year, next year more can be added and more time can be spent on design arrangements. "Nevertheless," he said, "the men in the Park Department did a tremendous job with what they had."

Perspicacious observers may have noticed that the bulbs this year are a little smaller and of less wattage. Last year bigger but fewer 25-watt bulbs were used on the strings draped around the trees in the Common. This year, smaller but more 9½-watt bulbs were used, which gave a greater multi-colored effect to the highlighted trees. In addition, the smaller watt bulbs cost less in electrical running expense.

Mr. Williams said he hoped that in the next year or so that the Christmas Spirit Committee and the merchants who contribute to the decorative beautification of the town's center at this season would continue to build on what they have already purchased to complete the lighting program in a tasteful but effective way.

He said desirable extensions might include more trees lighted on the Common, with some reindeer and maybe a manger scene near the walkways there, a little lighting on the Center area, and developing more the naturally lovely area by the Mill Pond and behind the Town Hall.

Appeal Board

petitioner's lot (and which then constituted Lots 653 and 652 on the Plan) did 'adjoin other land of the same owner available for use in connection with said lot'—namely Lots 650-651 and 658. The petitioner's lot does not, therefore, come within the scope of the exemption which is afforded by the proviso on page 184 of the By-Laws."

The reasoning behind the exemption written into the By-Laws is to save a person who, at the time the minimum area Zoning By-Law requirement took effect, had a vacant tract with a total area less than 6,500 square feet, from the hardship of not being able to use it at all for residence purposes.

But in this case, since the owner could not include adjacent land which previously was a part of that land in order to minimize the nonconformity, he could not avail himself of the nonconforming exemption.

Roland H. Boutwell, II

Roland H. Boutwell, II, of 20 Foxcroft Road, died on Monday, December 16, at the Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, at the age of 74.

A native of Lowell, Mr. Boutwell was the son of Roswell M., and Jeannie (Russell) Boutwell. He had made his home in Winchester since 1922. He attended the Phillips Andover Academy and Amherst College.

He was associated with the H. P. Hood & Sons from 1913 to 1951. He served as a director and later as chairman of the Board of Executives of the Hood Co. He was a member of the Winchester Country Club.

Mr. Boutwell leaves his wife, Marion (Hood); a son, Roswell M., III; a daughter, Mrs. Harry Hood; all of Winchester; seven grandchildren, a brother, R. Murray Boutwell, II; of South Lyndeboro, New Hampshire; and a sister, Mrs. Elsie B. Tompkins of Winchester.

Services are to be held in the Bigelow Chapel, Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge today, with the Reverend Wesley A. Mallery, associate minister of the First Congregational Church officiating. Interment is to be in the family lot at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

Mrs. Hattie L. Emery

Mrs. Hattie L. Emery, of 16 Winslow Road, died on Tuesday, December 17, in a nursing home in Stoneham, after a long illness.

Mrs. Emery was the daughter of Charles Marble and Harriet G. (Chamberlain) Adams. She was born in Cambridge, on June 30, 1880.

She came to Winchester in 1929 and for the past five years has lived on Winslow Road. She was a member of the First Baptist Church. Her husband, the late Frederick S. Emery, died on March 26, 1956.

Mrs. Emery leaves four daughters, Mrs. Howard R. Clark, of Weymouth, Miss Doris Emery, Miss Harriet A. Emery and Mrs. Walter Y. Josephson, all of Winchester.

Services will be at the First Baptist Church tomorrow, Friday, at 2 p.m. The Reverend Joseph E. O'Donnell, Jr., will officiate. Visiting hours will be at the late residence today, Thursday, from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. Interment will be in the family lot in Wildwood Cemetery.

George Nardin

George Nardin, a former well known resident of Stowell Road, died last week in Greeley, Colorado.

Before his retirement and while living here, he was in the editorial department of Houghton Mifflin Co., publishers in Boston.

Walter K. Hutchinson

Walter K. Hutchinson of 22 Wildwood Street, died Tuesday night of a heart attack at the Algonquin Club in Boston. He was 68 years of age.

Mr. Hutchinson had arrived at the club to attend a Christmas reception given by his brother, Charles F. Hutchinson of Lexington. He was stricken as he entered the club and died immediately.

Mr. Hutchinson was born in Arlington, the son of Fannie and Walter K. Hutchinson. He was graduated from the Arlington High School and from Harvard College in the class of 1917.

While at Harvard he played the trombone and helped to organize the now internationally known Harvard University Band. For two years subsequent to graduation he was its graduate assistant director. He always sustained a high interest in music and played for several years with the Harvard Alumni Orchestra in Boston.

In World War I, Mr. Hutchinson served with the U. S. Navy as a Lieutenant. He was a member of the American Legion.

In 1924 he became treasurer of the Walter K. Hutchinson Company, a 15 unit chain of grocery stores with headquarters in Arlington, which was dissolved during the depression. For three summers he then operated, with his brother, the Barclay at Falmouth, Inc., well-known restaurant and night club on the Cape. He then turned back to engineering and food brokerage as a free lance business man. For many years he also operated the Hutchinson Market in Winchester Centre.

He was a former president of the Arlington Rotary Club and was well known here as a member of the Winchester Country Club. He was also a member of the University Club in Boston.

Mr. Hutchinson is survived by his wife, Ruth (Brown) Hutchinson, a daughter Ruth Anne Hutchinson, by three brothers, Charles F., of Lexington, Paul C., of Bridgeport, Connecticut and John G. of Centerville and New York City and by a sister, Mrs. Cynthia Reynolds, of Winchester.

Services will be held tomorrow, Friday, at 2 p.m. at the Church of the Epiphany here, with the Reverend Dr. John W. Ellison officiating. Visiting hours are today, from 7 to 9 p.m., at the Kimball Funeral Home.

Veteran's Pin For Service

Rony Snyder Receives Special Masonic Award

On Friday evening, December 13, Rony Snyder, U. S. Navy, retired, was presented a Veteran's Pin and a gold membership card, in recognition of his 50 years of continued membership in Army and Navy Lodge No. 306, Fort Monroe, Virginia, at the request of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, through the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

Commander Snyder, in his 79th year, with 40 years service in the United States Navy, retired from active duty in 1946, having seen service in World Wars I and II. In all his years of service and travel, Rony has considered 59 Highland Avenue his "home port" where he has resided since 1918.

During World War II, Commander Snyder served as Commander on a combatant ship in the European, South Atlantic, and South Pacific Theatres of Operations, and is the holder of the Commander's Bronze Star Medal as well as the Legion of Merit which was presented to him while on active duty in Brazil.

The Masonic presentation was made by Richard P. Nyquist, District Deputy Grand Master for the Somerville Sixth Masonic District, who extended the congratulations of both Grand Lodges to Commander Snyder.

Also present were Harvey C. Haag, District Deputy Grand Marshal; Floyd H. Horn, District Deputy Grand Secretary; Robert E. Lawson, presiding Master of Mystic Valley Lodge, and Commander Snyder's grandson, Bob Wright, a student in the School of Mechanical Engineering at Northeastern University.

All Our Yesterdays

• WHEN PEOPLE deprecate the "sentimentality" attached to our traditional funeral service rites, it is obvious that their detached and "reasonable" attitude comes from non-involvement. They are not making their own farewells to someone beloved. When that time does come they quickly realize that it is not cold clay to which they desire to pay homage, but the memory of countless Golden Yesterdays when love and tenderness were mixed with shared heartaches and hardships. And then they find that the only soul-satisfying way of indicating their high regard and love for the departed is with the "sentimentality" that did not seem "reasonable" when their own emotions were not involved.

Don Folkers To Head January March of Dimes

Donald L. Folkers, of 79 Yale Street, has been appointed for the second year to head the Winchester March of Dimes Drive, scheduled for January.

In accepting the position Folkers said, "The March of Dimes is doing more than any other private organization has ever done to fight two of the nation's greatest cripplers, birth defects and arthritis."

"Anyone who doesn't believe declared Mr. Folkers. "More than these health problems are important should look at the figures," 250,000 babies are born each year with significant birth defects, many of which cause permanent disability. Some form of arthritis or disabling rheumatic disease afflicts more than 11 million Americans, many thousands of them being children who suffer from particularly severe conditions."

Until recently, said Mr. Folkers, little was being done to provide uniformly excellent treatment for these victims of crippling disease. Now the March of Dimes has established nearly 70 treatment centers across the nation where such treatment is available and where trained specialists in these medical areas are developing improved techniques which can benefit all disabled persons.

The March of Dimes is also leading the battle against birth defects and arthritis on the research front. The same kind of research program that developed the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines is now supporting many of the world's leading scientists to the extent of 4 million dollars as they search for possible means of prevention.

"The American people have come to expect success from the March of Dimes," said Mr. Folkers. "Their continued support—private, voluntary support—will make possible even greater victories over disease and disability."

Winchester Rexall Announces Twelve Lucky Winners

Twelve prizes, all of them pretty "grand," were announced with their winners Monday by David A. Klein, proprietor for the Winchester Rexall Drug Store.

The announcement came at the conclusion of a nine-week personal vote contest for young people sponsored by the store, which had been preceded by three weeks of nominations and which generated a lot of interest.

The top grand prize winners for girls and boys were Karen Ryerson and James Barry, respectively. Each won a Columbia "Thunderbolt" bicycle.

The five follow-up winners among the boys were, in order of their vote totals, Roddy Munroe, first, an Indianapolis 8 Autorama set; Kit Adams, a 1901 Ford pedal car; Teddy Sullivan, a six-transistor radio; Paul Griffin, an electronic rifle range; and Joseph Dalton, a P-63 King Cobra gas-powered plane.

The girls' winners, one to five, were: Cherier Hanes, a 4-speed phonograph; Kathy Falzano, an automatic player piano; Sylvia Cerulli, a Singer sewing machine; Jane Martell, an English pram coach; and Pam Galloway, a lady's Cavatina model watch.

Sachems Extend Winning Streak To Three; Meet Woburn Monday

Trim Arlington 44-37

Forward Vic Papadinis collected 15 points and Pete Fahey 13 in leading the Sachems to a 44-37 come-from-behind win over Arlington last Friday night at Winchester. The game, as cautiously defensive as the score indicates, marked the Sachem's second victory in as many starts.

Winchester's JV five also won their second game in the preliminary by the similar score of 45-37.

With hefty center Ray DeMaris controlling the backboards and guard Bruce Hall hitting twice from twenty feet out, Arlington got off to a quick 6-0 lead in the opening minutes and led 12-7 at the end of the first period, before forward Bill Hilfinger came in and sparked the Sachems to tie it at 14-14 with three minutes left in the half. A three-pointer by guard Bob Branley gave the Sachems the lead for the first time 18-15. Patterned outside shots by Papadinis and Fahey increased it to 22-17 at half-time.

Team captain Rich Sheehan took the visitors in the third period, and kept Arlington in contention with six of his twelve points. Behind 32-30, with 1:52 remaining in the same period, Arlington installed a control type of game to set themselves up for one final shot. DeMaris got loose under the basket with four sceonds left and knotted it at 32-32.

Now, repeating their rebound control that had held Arlington to five points in the second period, Papadinis and Fahey gave the Sachems a 40-34 lead with 3:30 left in the game. Of Winchester's 39 rebounds, Fahey pulled down 18 and Papadinis 12. A free throw by Arlington's Sheehan narrowed it to 40-35. But with 1:50 left in the game Papadinis hit a fifteen-footer and put the game out of reach at 42-35.

Burlington Overpowered

Burlington's Red Devils took a step out of their class Tuesday afternoon at Winchester and found that they still had a few years to grow. Paced by forward Vic Papadinis, who notched 16 points, the Sachems began building a lead with 3:18 left in the first period and never relinquished it until the gun had sounded with the visitors on the short end of a 90-44 count. At one point the Sachems led by as much as 48 points.

SACHEM GUARD RAY RIGNEY (14) drives for basket in third period of Tuesday's romp over Burlington. Rigney helped spark Sachem offense with valuable assists and collected eight points. Red Devil Defenders are Bill Bishop (41) and Jack Kirkland (11).

In the JV contest Burlington ran into the same kind of competition, succumbing 42-20.

With Papadinis and Pete Fahey controlling the boards, Burlington could do little in the way of mustering any concentrated attack. Center Steve Carling tallied 15 points for the Red Devils, guards Walt Pienkos and Jack Kirkland hit for 12 and 10 points respectively, and Cliff Skelton had his share of rebounds, but the Sachem guns were too big and they shot too often. It seemd that every time you looked up, somebody was swishing from 15 and 20 feet out.

For the second consecutive game the Sachems received that spark of enthusiasm from forward Bill Hilfinger, who may soon be regarded, like the Celtics' Frank Ramsey, as the best sixth man in the Middlesex circuit. Bill was inserted late in the first period, promptly hit a 15-footer with 3 seconds showing, then, in the second period, ran off two twenty-footers and a jumper from the key. An assist he made to Fahey with 1:20 left in the half was a beauty to watch.

Leading 49-25 at the start of the third period, the Sachems put on their most dazzling display of the afternoon when they ran off a string of nine baskets for 18 points before Burlington's Steve Carlin hit a free throw with 2:10 remaining. Hitting on 13 out of 17 for a shooting percentage of seventy-six, and running up a 75-31 lead, the third period also marked the return to form of guard Steve Kajander who collected 8 of his 10 points.

YOUR Pharmacist SPEAKS

By: Fred McCormack

Mankind first experiences pain in infancy, and it is usually no more than a short twinge away thereafter. Despite a great deal of preoccupation with the subject, few fully know the nature of pain, and fewer still can explain its many paradoxes.

Why, for instance, does a minor injury cause extreme suffering in one person and little or none in another? Superficial injuries are often more painful than serious ones, as witness the fact that bullet wounds seldom hurt. Pain is not cumulative. It is not increased by a lesser injury elsewhere in the body; in other words, pain does not "add up."

Also, have you noticed that pain is invariably worse at night?

You're not about to get hurt, however, when you count on McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY for your prescriptions. Fast, efficient and thoroughly accurate filling of your prescriptions is our main stock in trade at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700.

SACHEM GYMNASTICS COACH ISIDORE BATTINO is looking forward to his team having another successful season.

They were the second strongest in the state last year. On December 20th they will stage an exhibition for the students and faculty of McCall Jr. High between 11 and 12 p.m. at the High School Gym. Then at 2 p.m. on December 31st they will meet Winthrop here for a practice encounter. Winthrop, by the way, is coached by former Winchesterite Pete Coon . . . Gymnastics, since its conception in 1955 by Battino, has grown steadily more popular each year at Winchester . . . WINTER TRACK, UNDER COACH ROGER RAWDEN, opens its season December 27th against Melrose at 2 p.m. All meets are held at the Andover Academy Cage, and are timed for 4:15 p.m., unless otherwise noted. The schedule:

December 30 St. Mary's (Lynn) 2 p.m.
January 6 Lynn Classical January 13 Lawrence Central
January 20 Woburn
January 27 Wakefield
February 3 Lynn English

HENRY KNOWLTON, Winchester's Director of Athletics and football coach, was elected President of the Massachusetts State Coaches Association a the 39th annual fall meeting of the organization held last Saturday at Massachusetts Institute of Technology . . . TAP OFF FOR THE ALUMNI BASKETBALL GAME is slated for 7:15, Friday, December 20th. There will be two separate games; one between the recent alumni and this year's varsity squad, another between the older alumni and the high school faculty . . . Some of the former hoop stars who will make their reappearance are: John Lynch, Max McCreery, Mike Callahan, Vandy French, Roger Symmes, Rod Gay, George Neville, Paul White, Joel Peckham, Jim Flaherty, Jim Devaney, and Bob Watson.

RADIO STATION WHIL announces the establishment of two trophy awards to be presented to players in the Middlesex Hockey League. One, the WHIL trophy, will be given to the highest scoring player. The second award is the Parker Pen Trophy which will be presented to the league's most valuable player, in the opinion of the league coaches . . . The awards will be presented to the winning players in a special ceremony to be broadcast at the conclusion of the final game of the season by WHIL sportscaster, Al Festa . . . MIKE BRINK was awarded his varsity football letter this week at St. Lawrence University, Canton, New York. Mike, a sophomore, played guard there this fall.

THERE IS NOTHING VERY BEAUTIFUL ABOUT BOXING, but writer and former boxer, Rod Serling has written what has to be the most poignant description of the "sport" thus far: "Writers have always found a strange haunting fascination in the idea of the pure personal combat of boxing. Ranging from Jack London to Ernest Hemingway, each decade has produced a literary chronicler of the sport and the man. And notable in all prizefight fiction has been the recurrent theme—the strange and mystifying quality of tragedy that permeates the profession. This writer is no esthete, nor is he this decade's translator of the "mystique" of the manly art. And certainly he has neither the temerity nor the immodesty to pick up the gauntlet of the departed Hemingway. But he does see an indescribable kind of beauty in the aged mustiness of St. Nicholas' Arena or the smoke-filled cavern that is Madison Square Garden. An odd beauty, really, like a black and white penciled drawing of a tenement in a snowfall, or the sorrow-etched face of a panhandler exchanging a fragment of dignity for a hot cup of soup in a mission house. This kind of beauty—the strange poetry of human anguish, the mystifying gentleness of pain" . . .

HOW COME DEPARTMENT: That Aubrey Flagg, Rindge Tech's rifle-armed quarterback, who threw twenty touchdown passes this season, and was named to almost everybody's all-scholastic team, failed to find himself even among the honorable mention of one Boston daily? No less than five different teams were picked, but Flagg's name was no where to be found . . . That the Boston Patriots, behind 7-3 against Kansas City with 1:50 left in the first half, chose to run the clock out? Maybe they wanted a chance to get reorganized, and felt that KC was too tight on pass defense anyway, but this observer can't conceive of any professional team that fails to take advantage of any offensive opportunity—especially when nothing is going right for you and you're down four points.

Burlington basketball coach, Dick Garibotto, claims his team has no long-range plan of entering the Middlesex League. "We would like first to win a couple of championships in our own league" the personable young coach says. "Beating Chelmsford is what we look forward to. Afterward we may find time to think about teams like Winchester, Melrose and Wakefield." Burlington has added two Middlesex teams to their schedule this season. They dropped the first to Winchester Tuesday, 90-44, and run up against Stoneham next week . . . Only a guess but the way towns are growing to the west of us we may eventually see two separate divisions of the Middlesex League

Sachem Gymnasts Open New Season January 4th

The Winchester Gymnastic season officially opens January 4, with an away meet at Needham. The first home meet will be Saturday, January 11, at 7:00 p.m.

The team has many vacancies to fill due to the loss of six lettermen last graduation; but with five returning lettermen this void will be satisfactorily filled. Especially noteworthy is this year's captain, Mike Hammel.

Mike was second in free exercise and third in tumbling in last year's state individual meet. He also was fourth in free exercise in the senior men's category at the New England AAU open meet held last year at Holyoke. This year Mike is adding the parallel bars to his other competitive events.

Other returning lettermen are Frederic Babakian, side horse; Francis Donovan, high bar and parallel bars; Richard Halverson, high bar, parallel bars and long horse; and Kevin Cullen, long horse.

Unlike last year's team there will be many who will be competing for the first time. Almost all of the second and third men will be taken from juniors and sophomores who have a strong potential but haven't been tested by participating in a competitive meet.

Among the varsity men are Colin Grey and Bob Hudson, still rings; Steve Burnham and Peter Blaisdell, tumbling; and Scott Cunningham and Alan Eugley, side horse.

Gymnastics is a sport of individual competition and a test of strength, flexibility and coordination. One of the hardest problems to overcome is the pressure put on a person in a meet, because of this the spectators are an important factor.

The Winchester Gym team would appreciate a large attendance. This would be a moral boost which is greatly needed and one that will be welcomed by the team.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

The second half of the schedule got under way this past week and ironically enough no team shut out its opponent in the first games of the fourteen team schedule. The first five teams in the win-and-loss columns won by 6-2, the sixth to ninth spots are taken by teams splitting at 4-4 and the final five positions are occupied by two wins and six losses.

In the St. Mary's win of 6-2 over California Capt. John Mangano of the victors led his pack with strings of 124-111-128 with some help coming from Phil Ardagno 110-107-97 and Rudy Fiore 118-93-102. Top performer for losing California was Capt. Dick Trabucco with 104-109-103 with Charlie Gangi missing the magic mark with 89-106-101.

Alabama took Holy Cross 6-2 with excellent bowling by Jay Cammarata who hit for 136-133-95 and Capt. Dick Tofuri did well with 96-108-106. The big gun for the loser was Al Repucci who finished up with 102-108-97.

Having a big hand in Georgetown's 6-2 victory over Maryland were Joe Marrone 116-107-103 and Capt. Tony Chefalo 99-106-95. Tony Babuso did his share in a losing cause with strings of 90-102-126.

Yale had no 300 hitters in the lineup but won 6-2 over Army, who had two hitting that much. Coming close for the winners were Capt. Richie Bucci 112-96-91 and Chick Vespucci 92-92-112 while the losers had Jack MacIsaac doing best with 98-94-118 and Correction Fiore 92-105-105.

Navy defeated Bates 6-2 with Capt. Richie Riga continuing in a big way with strings of 116-106-120. Capt Bob Fiore of the losers tried in vain to match Riga but fell short with tallies of 96-124-91.

Capt. Moose Bellino keeps knocking them over for Notre Dame although his team split 4-4 with B.C. Moose did superbly with scores of 121-122-117 and helping him considerably was quiet Dan Gattineri 117-110-97. Capt. Tony Saraco had a good night for B. C. with strings of 127-101-128 as did Andy Buzzotta 106-106-104, Giro Cerulli 89-98-128 and Max LaCarubba 108-100-90. Had it not been for Moose's strong arm B. C. could have cleaned up but that's the way the pins go.

In Penn and Harvard's 4-4 split, competition was between Carl Bertolucci's three strings of 90-108-126 for the former and Capt. Joe Capone's 107-95-112 of the latter. Tony Lentine just missed for Harvard with totals of 91-102-106 as did Hokie Procopio 111-83-104.

S.O.I. Women

Last week's bowling fell the night after the S. O. I. Women's Christmas Party. The Christmas Party committee did a fine job. The roast beef dinner was yummy, the entertainment was fine, and a good time was had by all. The gals were still in the party mood by Wednesday night and attendance was perfect. A Merry Christmas to all.

The first half came to a close at Strike Lanes with the Kools taking first place with flying colors. Congratulations. We understand the Kools members were giving their sweater measurements. Now come, girls, don't you think you made a few errors in the measurements? I'd say check again, Rose Fiore.

The Newports are to be commended. Their fighting spirit was most evident, keeping them in second place. Good luck for the second half.

At this time I'd like to talk about the Alpines. Here's a team, with Marge Gambino captain, that has top pinfall figures, 15981. Lady Luck sure teased them. With 164 pinfalls more than the top team, we can't understand why this team did not end up in a higher position than sixth place. Better luck next half.

In spite of the snow last Thursday night, all but five girls arrived to bowl.

The Diamonds had some good bowling. Rose DiTucci tied high single with a 114, and became the second bowler to join the 300 Club with a 306 triple. Blanche Crocker also had a good night for the Diamonds, bowling 82-93-88.

The Hearts had some good bowling too, Mary Thorne boosted her team by bowling an 89-82-76. The Hearts took three out of a possible four points.

Omitted from last week's write-up was Jean Luongo's single of 105. Nice bowling Jean.

Too bad, Merle, on the third string it started to look like a big one. Hey, Leo B., what's the matter, letting Dick C. take two points all alone. Nice eight points, Rudy. What's the matter, can't anyone beat the L & M's? Well, it looks like the Winstons are starting to show a little life again.

Franny Mawn's sharpshooting led Bowladrome to a six-point win over Alan Motors. Nice to see Billy Joyce moving up in the average standings. This boy really wants a trophy. George MacMillan starting to get hot now. George was second big man for San-O as they took six points from Cradock. Doug Cromwell beat out Danny Winn by five pins as they led Woburn Carpet to a six-point win over Esso. Phil Dresser blaming his slump on the heavy Yuletide mail. Jim Callahan and Bob Johnson the big guns for Trefrey in their win over Peterson. Suburban swept eight points from Olsen.

Sachems Whip St. John's 8-1; Rowe, Murphy Share Honors

Forwards Dave Rowe, with four goals, and George Murphy, with three, paced Winchester's hockey squad to a decisive 8-1 win over St. John's Prep of Danvers in an exhibition game last Friday night at the North Shore Sports Center, Lynn.

Murphy started the offensive barrage at 1:19 of the first period. His second goal came four minutes later.

Rowe made it 3-0 with just fifteen seconds gone in the second period. Less than a minute later St. John's got on the scoreboard when McManus rifled one past Jerry Hills. Rowe, however, lit the red lamp twice more before the period ended, giving the Sachems a 5-1 lead after two.

In the third, Barry Johnson, Murphy and Rowe tallied to cap the one-sided contest.

3 Women Champs In Sportsmen's Show Jan. 18 - 25

Boston—Three famous women sports personalities will top the spectatular program at 1964 New England Sportsmen's Show in Commonwealth Armory January 18-25.

The three attractive girls invading the male sports domain inculde beautiful Ann Marsters, holder of 11 national championships in archery; Carmel Gowen, world's lady roping champion; and Loral I. Armstrong, nationally famous dog trainer.

Ann Marsters, known as "Sweetheart of bow and arrow," was talent winner in 1960 Miss America Pageant. She competed as Miss Michigan. Her talents with the bow and arrow are matched only by her beauty. Ann's father was former archery champion of England.

The world's lady roping champion, Carmel Gowen, will fly to Boston direct from Europe for her only appearance in the U. S. this year. She is so popular in Europe that she has been booked for the entire year on the Continent. The Boston engagement was made almost a year ago so this roping artist felt an obligation to fill it.

The third woman champion, Loral I. Armstrong, has trained and exhibited hunting dogs since she was six. She once trained a family of brush wolves and also a bear to water ski. She is woman's trap shooting champion of Minnesota.

In addition to these three outstanding women sports personalities, several other exciting attractions will be featured daily at the stage shows. Included will be Zippy, the greatest chimpanzee performer in the world; the Canestrellis, family of trampoline comedians; Hank and Joe Peters, Nova Scotia guides in canoe and log rolling matches with Fraser Whynot and Don Wamboldt. Ralph Quinlan will be master of ceremonies.

The show will feature a Katch 'em and Keep 'em trout pool, casting pool for exhibitions and testing equipment, archery range, golf clinic and driving range, junior rifle tournament, and complete array of the latest camping and sporting regalia.

Margaret Padelford, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Norman J. Padelford of 6 Ravenscroft Road is an alto voice in Denison University's 90-voice Concert Choir which presented its biennial performance of Handel's "Messiah" on Tuesday, December 17, in Swasey Chapel at Granville, Ohio.

Sumner T. McCall

Son of War-Time Governor Died at Williamsville, Vermont

Sumner T. McCall, a native and former resident of Winchester, died suddenly Monday night, December 9, at his home in Williamsville, Vermont. His death was not expected though he had not been in good health for the past two months.

Mr. McCall was the son of Samuel Walker, and Ella E. (Thompson) McCall. He was born May 30, 1882, in Winchester and came of a family widely known hereabouts. His father, after serving three terms in the State Legislature, was elected to Congress from the Eighth Massachusetts District and served for several terms in the House. He was also the wartime Governor of Massachusetts during World War I.

Sumner McCall prepared for college at St. Mark's School in Southborough. He was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1903, and from Harvard Law School, cum laude, in 1906.

After his graduation he practiced law for a time in Chicago, then joined the Manganese Steel Company before going to the American Brake-Shoe Company in New York, becoming vice-president and treasurer of the firm, and continuing in this capacity until he retired 16 years ago. Upon retirement he took up residence in Williamsville, remaining there until his death.

Mr. McCall married Charlotte Gardner, February 3, 1903. His wife died 21 years ago.

He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Chappell, of Williamsville, Vermont, and Mrs. Katherine Rudolf of Arlington; four daughters, Mrs. Alexander H. Ladd, Jr., of Dover; Mrs. Alexander L. Dommerich and Mrs. Dudley H. Dommerich, both of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. Gordon L. Foote of Cincinnati, Ohio; nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Services were held Wednesday at 11 o'clock in the forenoon at the late residence in Williamsville. Family services were held Thursday in Greenwich, Connecticut. The burial was in Greenwich.

Mrs. Elizabeth MacWha

Matron at Home for Aged Stricken on Church Street

Mrs. Elizabeth MacWha, widely known in Winchester as Matron at the Home for Aged People at 110 Mt. Vernon Street, died suddenly Friday, December 13, after being stricken with a heart attack at the corner of Church and Dix Streets. She was removed to the nearby office of Dr. James Lamphier and the Police ambulance rushed to the scene, but all efforts to revive her proved of no avail.

Mrs. MacWha was born in Orford, New Hampshire, November 3, 1888, daughter of Eugene, and Roseltha (Preston) Smith. She grew up in Pike, New Hampshire, and was educated in the Pike schools and at business college in Manchester, New Hampshire.

She lived later in Nashua, New Hampshire, and joined the staff at the Home about 30 years ago under the former matron, Mrs. Maude Wolloff. When Mrs. Wolloff died in 1945, Mrs. MacWha was appointed her successor, and had discharged her exacting duties to the satisfaction of everyone, especially the members of the family by whom she was greatly beloved. She was a member of the First Congregational Church.

Mrs. MacWha leaves her husband, Hugh, and a son, Robert W. MacWha, of Washington, D. C.; also four grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 1:30 at Ripley Memorial Chapel of the First Congregational Chruch. The Rev. Wesley Mallery, associate minister of the church, officiated. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery, Nashua, New Hampshire.

Albert Vincent Cordice

Albert Vincent Cordice of 9 Raymond Place, a native of Winchester and veteran of World War II, died Monday, December 16, at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boston. His hospitalization covered three weeks but his illness was of much longer duration.

Mr. Cordice was the son of Florence (King) and of Conrad Cordice. He was born March 3, 1927, in Winchester, was educated in the Winchester schools and was a truck driver, driving for the Attucks Disposal Company of Boston.

He served in Germany during World War II as a private in the 41st Engineer Company, General Service Regiment. He held the World War II Victory Medal, and the Army of Occupation Medal.

Mr. Cordice leaves his mother and father, his wife, Elizabeth Lindsey Cordice; a son, Albert Vincent Cordice, Jr.; a sister, Constance Jackson of Marshfield; and a brother, Richard Cordice of Jamaica Plain.

Services were held Wednesday forenoon at the New Hope Baptist Church at 11 o'clock. A former pastor of the church, the Rev. Oscar Phillips, officiated. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

John Davidson Stevens

John Davidson Stevens, retired member of the Guidance Department at Winchester High School, known familiarly to pupils as "Jay Dee," died in the Prince Edward Island hospital at Charlottetown, P.E.I., Canada, after a lingering illness. He met disease with courage and patience, his attitude in the face of his affliction winning him the respect of all who knew of his courageous struggle against ill health.

JOHN DAVIDSON STEVENS

It was only recently that he submitted his resignation to the School Department though he had been on leave of absence since June. Members of the faculty sent Henry King Fitts to the hospital in Charlottetown with greetings to their ill colleague.

Mr. Stevens was the son of Fred E., and Miriam (Davidson) Stevens. He was born April 12, 1905, at Wells River, Vt., prepared for college at Wells River High School and was graduated from Norwich University, where he was a member of Theta Chi fraternity.

He graduated from college in 1927 and the next year he commenced his graduate work at Harvard. In 1932 he received his Master's degree from the Bread Loaf School of English at Middlebury College, and he continued through the years to take graduate studies in the administration and counseling fields at Harvard and Boston Universities.

Before coming to Winchester, Mr. Stevens served for three years as teacher of English and assistant principal at Bradford Academy, Bradford, Vt., where he coached hockey. He was also for six years head of the English Department and assistant principal of Bellows Falls High School, Bellows Falls, Vt., where he again coached hockey.

Mr. Stevens came to Winchester in 1936 to teach English. He was appointed assistant to the principal of Winchester High School in 1951, and became acting principal of the school upon the resignation of the then principal, Wade L. Grindle.

He served the school and town in numerous capacities, assisting in coaching football, hockey and cross country at high school, as faculty advisor to the "Red and Black," the student newspaper, and as senior class advisor.

He coached some of the Junior-Senior class plays and was for several years publicity director for the School Department, filling this important post in exemplary fashion. For some years he was in charge of the annual graduation exercises of the school.

For three years he served as director of the Young People's Fellowship at the Church of the Epiphany and he was also actively identified with the Cub Scouts, the Civil Defense and the Community Fund.

He was a Mason, a member of the Winchester Teachers' Club, National Education Association, National Council of Teachers of English, American Personnel and Guidance Association and the United Services Officers' Club. He was a captain in the United States Cavalry Reserve.

Mr. Stevens suffered a heart attack in 1959, and, after three operations, in 1960 resigned his position as assistant to the principal, because of his health. He was appointed a supervisor of guidance at the High School in 1960. He had the respect of the pupils with whom he worked and the liking of his faculty colleagues. He was a member of the Winchester Unitarian Church, and on April 11, 1963, he was made an honorary member of the Winchester Rotary Club.

In 1938 he married Charlotte Morey of Winchester, who survives with a daughter, Jane. He had summered since 1946 at Stanhope Beach, Prince Edward Island, and he loved the beautiful country there.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the MacLean Funeral Home at West Covehead, P.E.I. Memorial contributions in his name May be made to the Winchester Scholarship Foundation.

Alfred Nathaniel Denley

Alfred Nathaniel Denley of 29 Maxwell Road, a long time resident of Winchester and retired mechanical engineer with the Boston engineering firm of Charles T. Main, died early Friday morning at the Winchester Hospital after a short illness. He underwent an operation on Monday, December 9.

Mr. Denley was the son of Charles W., and Mary Ella (Folsom) Denley. He was born September 6, 1886, in Rockland, but came to Winchester before his fifth birthday and had since made his home here, growing up in the old homestead that stood on the present site of the Schrafft house on Myopia Hill.

He attended the Winchester schools and went two years to high school in the class of 1906. He then entered Rindge Technological Institute in Cambridge, from which he was graduated in the class of 1906. He completed his education in mechanical engineering at Lowell Institute in Boston, graduating in 1908.

Mr. Denley first worked for the Blake Pump Works in 1906, and entered the employ of the Charles T. Main Company in the mechanical engineering department in 1909. He spent 52 years in the firm's employ and upon his retirement, May 15, 1963, he was tendered a complimentary luncheon, at which members of the firm and associate workers were present.

For 52 years he took the 7:50 a.m. train to Boston each day unless it became necessary to take an earlier train.

He had been a member of the Unitarian Church since 1914 and had served on both the standing and building committees of the church. He held the 50 year medal of William Parkman Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; was past high priest of Woburn Royal Arch Chapter, a member of Medford Council, Royal and Select Masters; and Winchester Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. He was a member of the Engineers' Club of Boston and served as assistant chairman of one of the previous building committees of the Winchester Hospital.

His hobbies were photography and walking, and many in Winchester enjoyed his beautiful color shots of flowers from the former Downs greenhouses and his artistic color photographs of places and scenes about town. He loved to walk and in his more active years he covered on foot much of the west side hill district.

Mr. Denley was twice married. His first wife, the former Martha Sharon, died in 1923. On April 30, 1943, he married Margaret Ellen (Horn-Sharon), who survives, with Miss Elizabeth Sharon of Melrose, Mrs. Alfred H. (Eleanor) Hovey of Stoneham, Mrs. Sally S. Nichols of Melrose, Robert K. Sharon of Winchester, Mrs. James S. McClelland of Indio, California; Richard P. Sharon of Stoneham and 13 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Unitarian Church. The minister, Dr. Robert A. Storer, officiated. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Capt. Thomas M. Sharry

Capt. Thomas M. Sharry of 14 Sheffield West, a retired captain of the Somerville Police Department, died Thursday, December 12, suddenly, after a brief illness with heart disease. His death was wholly unexpected as he was in excellent health on Wednesday.

Captain Sharry was the son of Thomas M., and Susan (Fitzpatrick) Sharry. He was born October 12, 1890, in the Spring Hill section of Somerville and for 42 years served as a member of the Somerville Police, being attached as Legal Officer to the City Solicitor's Office and to the office of the Somerville Licensing Board, among other duties. He retired in 1955.

He leaves his wife, Mary; two daughters, Mrs. David White of Winchester and Sister Ann Rachel of Somerville, a member of the Sisters of Notre Dame; also two sons, Dr. Thomas Sharry and Dr. John Sharry, both of the University of Alabama Dental School; a sister, Mrs. Ann Donovan of Arlington; and a brother, Dr. William Sharry; also four grandchildren.

The funeral was held Saturday morning from the Frank E. Flaherty Funeral Home at Union Square, Somerville, followed by Requiem High Mass celebrated at St. Mary's Church at 10 o'clock. Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

Leo Donovans Lose Family Member

The Leo A. Donovan family, until two months ago residents of 12 Dartmouth Street, were saddened last week, when Mrs. Donovan's brother, Walter F. Foley, 48, passed away very suddenly on Wednesday, December 11.

The funeral was held Friday morning from the D. W. Grannan Funeral Home in Arlington. Interment in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington, followed a requiem high Mass at St. Camilius' Church there.

The Donovans are now living in their newly built home on Fox Run Road, Lincoln.

Dr. Ross M. Cunningham

Dr. Ross MacDuffee Cunningham, 56, of 100 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, an associate professor of industrial management at Massachusetts Institute of Technology since 1937, died Sunday, December 15, at Winchester Hospital. He had been living in Cambridge for only about a year, and previously had been a resident of Jefferson Road for 23 years.

Dr. Cunningham was the son of William James, and Emily Hutchinson (MacDuffee) Cunningham. His father was a professor of transportation at the Harvard Business School. He was born April 26, 1907, in Scranton, Pennsylvania, prepared at the Browne and Nichols School and was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1928. He received his Master's Degree from the Harvard Business School in 1930 and his Doctorate in Commercial Business in 1934.

From 1932 to 1934 he was a research assistant and instructor at Harvard and from 1934 to 1937, he taught at the University of Tennessee before coming to M.I.T.

Formerly president and secretary of the American Marketing Association, he was the founder of its New England chapter. He was active in the Sales Executives Club and was a member and former vice president of the National Industrial Advisors Association.

He was a member and active in the Market Research Council of New York, and had been a consultant with Arthur D. Little Company of Cambridge.

He was a town meeting member for Precinct 3, and a member of the First Congregational Church. For many years he had a summer home at Freedom, New Hampshire.

He leaves his wife, the former Mary Elizabeth Hormell; a son, Scott M., of Winchester; and a daughter, Mrs. Lynn E. Santner, also of Winchester. There are four grandchildren.

A memorial service was conducted Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the First Congregational Church by the Rev. Wesley Mallery, associate minister of the church. After cremation, burial will be at Freedom, New Hampshire. Memorials may be sent to the Pulmonary Disease Unit of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Luther A. Pattee

Luther A. Pattee, 72, of Abington, formerly of Winchester, died suddenly at his home on December 5. He was born in Lawrence and lived in Winchester from 1936 to 1945.

Mr. Pattee was a graduate of Dartmouth College, Class of 1914, and was employed by the Howard Johnson Company. He is survived by his widow, Arceneth M. Pattee, and by two daughters, Mrs. Victor Voges of Winchester, and Mrs. John Lambert of Chappaqua, New York; a son, Luther A. Pattee, Jr., of Seattle, Washington; a sister, Miss Gladys Pattee of Boston; and nine grandchildren.

The Reverend George Miller of Abington conducted a service on December 7 at 2 p.m. at the Quealy Funeral Home, North Abington.

Mrs. Agnes S. (MacDonald) Eaton

Mrs. Agnes S. Eaton of 23 Fletcher Street, widow of Charles N. Eaton, died Friday evening, December 13, at the Winchester Hospital.

A resident of Winchester for many years, Mrs. Eaton was the daughter of Eugene and Ida E. (Sterling) MacDonald.

She is survived by two sons, John S. Eaton of Winchester, and William T. Eaton of Monte Lereno, California; two brothers Alexander S. MacDonald of Winchester and Roderic N. MacDonald of Duxbury and by seven grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at the Parish of the Epiphany on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 p.m., with Rev. Stephen C. Walke officiating. Interment was at Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett.

In Memoriam

C. Norman Noonan, water registrar for the Town of Winchester, died December 15, 1963 having served the Town in this position since June 1953. His service to the Town was highlighted by faithfulness, integrity and conscientiousness. The high standard set by Mr. Noonan will be a goal to strive for by those who succeed him.

Mr. Noonan's concern for his fellow men, and particularly for those with whom he worked, is well known, and will never be forgotten. His foremost concern was for others rather than himself.

The scores of townspeople who had contact with Mr. Noonan through his office were treated with respect and understanding. His death is deeply felt by all who knew him.

The Water and Sewer Board expresses its sympathy to Mrs. Noonan and members of the family.

C. Norman Noonan

C. Norman Noonan, water registrar for the Town of Winchester, a lifelong resident of the town and a veteran of World War II, died Sunday morning, December 15, suddenly at his home, 48 Woodside Road. He was 57 years old and had not been in the best of health for some time.

A native of Winchester, Mr. Noonan was born September 13, 1906, the son of James H,, and Mary E. (Sullivan) Noonan. His father was for many years a member of the town's Highway Department and a captain in the Fire Department.

Mr. Noonan had been water registrar for 14 years and was ex officio clerk of the Winchester Sewer Board. He was also secretary for the Winchester Contributory Retirement Board.

He was a veteran of World War II and was a member and former adjutant of Winchester Post, 97, the American Legion. He was also a member of Winchester Grange, No. 343.

Mr. Noonan attended St. Charles School in Woburn, and was graduated from Boston College High School, continuing his studies at St. John's University in New York City. He was a member of the Boston College High School alumni association.

He leaves his wife, the former Ida (Mellon) Noonan; two sisters, Mrs. Eugene (Leona) O'Sullivan of West Yarmouth and Miss Marion C. Noonan of Winchester; also a brother, J. Edward Noonan, retired Fire Department captain.

The funeral was held from the Lane Funeral Home Wednesday morning, December 18, at 8:15, followed by solemn requiem high Mass celebrated at St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Charles R. Egan

Charles R. Egan of 4 Wildwood Terrace, a former resident of Lowell and Los Angeles, California, died Thursday night, December 12, at a nursing home in Woburn after a long illness. He was 63 years old.

Mr. Egan was the son of William F., and Cordelia (Hebert) Egan. He was born in Lowell and lived in that city for many years.

He then went to Los Angeles where he was in the furniture and refinishing business until six months ago when he retired because of his health. At that time he came to Winchester to make his home with his sister, Mrs. Helen E. Chaput.

Besides Mrs. Chaput, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Marion Laskey of Westfield, New Jersey; Mrs. Margaret Theriault of Nashua, New Hampshire; and a brother, Paul Egan of Lowell.

The funeral was held from the Lane Funeral Home Monday morning with requiem high Mass at St. Mary's Church. Burial was in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Lowell.

Martha H. Shaffer

A memorial service will be held for Miss Martha H. Shaffer on Monday, December 23, at 4:45 p.m. at the Winchester Unitarian Church.

Miss Shaffer, the twin sister of Mrs. Philip P. Wadsworth, of 66 Oxford Street, passed away suddenly at her home in Cambridge on December 12. She had been associated with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company for ten years. Funeral services were held at her family home in Woodsfield, Ohio, Monday.

Friends are requested not to send flowers. Memorial contributions may be made to the Diabetic Foundation, Camps for Diabetic Children, 170 Pilgrim Road, Brookline.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks and deep appreciation to our relatives, friends, the Winchester Police Department, employees of the Winchester Country Club, the Woburn Lodge of Moose and neighbors who by their words of consolation and acts of kindness, helped to lighten the burden of our recent bereavement.

Also for the large number of floral tributes and spiritual bouquets, we are very grateful.

Marycliff Glee Club to Sing On Boston Common

On Sunday, December 22, the Marycliff Glee Club will sing on Boston Common. This is one of the traditional programs given by the group.

Accompanying the girls will be Mother LeBlanc, R.C.E., director of music at the academy. Included in the half-hour program will be the traditional carols and a special adaptation of the "Drummer Boy."

Parents and friends are invited to attend the concert, which will be given at 2 p.m.

Mary Clair Wins Marycliff Student Gov't Honor

Last week the high school students of Marycliff Academy of Winchester had elections for student representative for the Student Government Day at the State House, April 10, 1964.

Mary Clair, treasurer of the class of '64, won the elections. Mary is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Clair of 8 New Meadows Road. Mary has been active in school activities throughout her high school days. Mary is also prefect of the Sodality and a cheerleader.

Other girls who campaigned for the honor were Katherine Bubser of Winchester, Dianne Bouley of Woburn, Kathleen Porter of Everett and Sheila Tipping of Medford.

Mutual grooming plays an important part in the social life of chimpanzees, the National Geographic says. A pair sits quietly for hours, searching through each other's black coats for dirt, grass seeds, or ticks. Some students of animal behavior see in this activity the first beginnings of true social and altruistic behavior in the whole animal kingdom.

Antarctica's glaciers often move at the unusually swift pace of 600 yards a year, the National Geographic says. The icy surface is so jumbled by ridges, crevasses, and snow bridges that even helicopters can't land.

Whales do not spout fountains of water from their nostrils, the National Geographic says. What appears to be a stream of water is moisture from the whale's breath condensing as it meets the cooler outside air.

Stolen Checks

This man was arrested on July 31 by a security officer at Sears and Roebuck on the Fenway in Boston and was charged with forgery, larceny, and receiving stolen property. The case is still being continued in court.

Many checks were passed on the Cape by John and Leo Curran and John Colbath during July and August. On October 12 they were arrested in San Francisco while attempting to hold up the Security Savings and Loan Association Bank for $2,700. John Curran and Colbath received seven year sentences, and Leo Curran received an indeterminate sentence.

On November 3, Fonda, New York police notified Winchester police one of the checks had been passed in that town.

On November 5, Hartford police arrested a Frank Truscello, who had two of the stolen Winchester checks in his possession when trying to pass another phony check.

On November 23, Chicopee, Massachusetts police notified the local department that a $50 missing Travelers check had been passed at a hotel in that town.

Sgt. Crawford says he is amazed at the brazen carefree way some of the illegal passers go about cashing some of the checks. He has on file about 15 pictures of some of the passers—taken when they went to department store cashier windows and were knowingly photographed, along with their identification papers and the check they were passing. "It's unbeatable evidence when they are caught," Sgt. Crawford said, "but they don't seem to worry about it."

Chief Amico

Keep attics and basements free of combustible trash. If using a natural Christmas tree, pick a firm fresh needled tree. Keep it away from heat and fireplaces and keep the base in water. Place it in such a place where it will not block the exits from your home. Remove the tree promptly after Christmas or sooner if dried out. Check tree lighting equipment for frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets. Turn off all tree and indoor lighting before retiring or leaving the house. Do not overload electric circuits. Use only non combustible decorating materials. Keep matches, lighters and lighted candles away from small children. Dispose of gift wrappings promptly and safely.

Three quarters of all fires in this country are caused by carelessness, the Chief indicated, but ordinary common sense about fire can make your Christmas a merry one and your home firesafe the year round.

Living With Your Heart

("Living With Your Heart" is a community service of the Massachusetts Heart Association Greater Boston Chapter).

The tremendous advances made in the recent past in prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the heart and circulation have excited the wonder and admiration of mankind.

They are even more impressive, the Massachusetts Heart Association said today, when the last 20 years are compared with the slow advance over many centuries in knowledge in this vital area of human health.

Man has always been fascinated with his heart, and from the earliest days of recorded history has tried to learn more about it. Nearly 5000 years ago Imhotep, the earliest physician of whom any record remains, associated the heart with the pulse. In 400 B.C., Hippocrates described correctly the heart's valves and principal blood vessels.

His contemporaries — Plato and Aristotle—studied the circulation, and Plato described the blood's constant motion and he linked the breathing pumping action that let the blood circulate. Aristotle, who originated comparative anatomy, named the aorta, the large artery to the heart.

A 13th century Egyptian healer-teacher, Ibn an-Nafis, determined that the blood flows from the right side of the heart to the lungs to be aerated and then returns to the left side of the heart to be sent through the body.

The first doctor who might be classified with the moderns to make a significant contribution to cardiovascular lore was the great William Harvey, an Englishman who became the first person to describe clearly the entire process of the circulation, in 1628.

It was in the 1600's, too, when a Professor Bellini of Pisa noted the hardening of arteries with advancing age and put forth the proposition that hardened arteries might be more easily blocked than healthy channels. In doing so, he put his finger on one of the heart's chief diseases.

One of the best-known medicines for treatment of heart trouble was originated in England in 1785, the result of a Shropshire "wise woman," Mother Hutton's herbal brew and the tenacity of Dr. William Withering in isolating the potent agent—foxglove—from the porridge with which she helped victims of dropsy. Future scientists found, of course, that digitalis was the active force in foxglove, and they use it liberally to this day.

One of the doctor's most helpful diagnostic tools, the stethoscope, was born of the ingenuity of a French doctor, Rene Laennec. A very fat, very modest young woman came to his office with chest pains in 1819. Since he could not examine her heartbeat otherwise, he rolled paper into a tight cylinder, placed it against her chest and was astounded at the clarity of sound.

Only a few years before this, in Vienna, Joseph Auenbrugger, a doctor and innkeeper's son, recalled how his father had been able to estimate how nearly full a barrel might be by thumping on it. He began wondering whether one could learn anything useful by tapping the human chest, and discovered it was indeed so.

So, through the years, slowly, painfully, often in error, the ancients and the Renaissance men stockpiled their horde of knowledge about the heart and circulation.

Their contributions were important to humanity, but when compared with the breakneck pace at which the sum of knowledge and technique has been amassed in recent years, they were made at a snail's pace.

Were one of them to witness the modern miracle of open heart surgery, with its forest of sophisticated equipment—even including decrompression chambers and deep-freezes—he would certainly be convinced that the age of medical miracles is here.

It is not—not yet. But research is bringing it closer every day.

OH, SUSANNAH,
DON'T YOU CRY
FOR ME . . .

WHAT MAKES THIS FELLOW SO CAREFREE, COCKSURE AND CONFIDENT? MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE HE'S GOT OIL HEAT. NOTHING LIKE IT TO BOOST A FELLOW'S MORALE AND GIVE HIM THAT SECURE, READY-FOR-ANYTHING FEELING. THINGS WILL LOOK BRIGHTER TO YOU, TOO, WITH OIL HEAT.

Living With Your Heart

The housewife who is a wizard in the kitchen is justly celebrated at Thanksgiving time.

But it's a rare family gathering these days without at least one member who is fighting the Battle of the Bulge or is, at the very least, quietly concerned about overweight.

So, the Massachusetts Heart Association suggests, Mrs. Massachusetts may do well to apply some of that kitchen wizardry to calorie-cutting, even at this festive season of the year.

Those painful dining-room decisions can be minimized and your weaker-willed, food-loving relatives will thank you for removing temptation if you use your ingenuity to help cut down on excessive fat.

And, the Heart Association points out, this doesn't necessarily mean that your Thanksgiving dinner will be gastronomically dull. Not at all—with some creative imagination you can come up with a fresh new version of traditional holiday fare, one to please both the plump and the lean.

Here are some ideas, and you'll find they apply for any time of the year.

Try new methods of cooking meats and vegetables. Broil, roast or steam them. Make stew the night before so it can be chilled and the fat skimmed off before you reheat it—stew is always better the second day, anyway.

Let your holiday bird be turkey or chicken rather than goose, which is rich in fat. Moisten the stuffing with fat-free bouillon and don't serve poultry skin to any of your obese guests.

Poultry in general has less fat than beef or pork but if your group prefers a roast, carefully choose veal, loin of pork, leg of lamb, rump or eye round of beef, all of which are relatively lean.

You can skip calorie-loaded sauces and still produce a gourmet meal. Spices and herbs can add flair, flavor and, best of all, minimal calories, to your meals. Many of these suggestions, incidentally, can be helpful for persons on salt-restricted diets.

Instead of rich sauces, then why not try some of these ideas?

—With green vegetables: lemon juice, mace, mint basil, ginger, dill seed or parsley.

—With beef: bay leaf, dry mustard, marjoram or nutmeg.

—With poultry: paprika, poultry seasoning, thyme or sage.

—With lamb: garlic, mint, rosemary or curry.
applesauce.

—With veal: ginger, oregano or marjoram.

—With fish: lemon juice, paprika or dry mustard.

Finally, eat wisely but not too well, holidays or not. And a happy Thanksgiving from your Heart Association.

West Berlin has grown up like a miracle from the ruins left by Allied bombings of World War II. Some 200,000 new residences have been provided—enough to house more than half a million people, says the National Geographic Magazine. Every usable scrap of rubble went into the rebuilding. The rest, piled in huge mounds, was planted with flowers and grass to provide hilly park scenery.

The finest quality of tea grows at altitldes of 3,000 to 7,000 feet where temperatures are moderate. Slower growth of these heights produces a smaller leaf with less water content and more flavor.

Australia has an average of only 3.6 persons per square mile, compared to 349 in India, the National Geographic reports.

The daily high temperature in one of the world's foremost political hot spots—Saigon, capital of South Viet Nam—averages from 87 to 95 degrees the year round, the National Geographic says.

Bushmen of the Kalahari wasteland in southern Africa use an arrow poison so potent that one drop can kill a man if it enters the bloodstream, the National Geographic says. The primitive tribesmen get the poison from the pupa of a beetle (Diamphidia simplex).

Northern Minnesota Indians still harvest wild rice in the time-honored way of bending the stalks and flailing the grain into their canoes, the National Geographic says. But these days the canoes are aluminum not birchbark, and the scarce rice often retails for as much as $4 a pound.

Mutual grooming plays an important part in the social life of chimpanzees, the National Geographic says. A pair sits quietly for hours, searching through each other's black coats for dirt, grass seeds, or ticks. Some students of animal behavior see in this activity the first beginnings of true social and altruistic behavior in the whole animal kingdom.

Tribute Paid To Past Leadership

Past Grand Knights Given Rousing Salute At K of C

On Saturday evening, December 7th from 7 p.m. until midnight, the Winchester Council No. 210 of the Knights of Columbus honored its Past Grand Knights with a dinner-dance and presentation.

Festivities started with a catered baked him dinner with all the trimmings aided no little by Bob Fiore's orchestra entertaining with pleasant dinner music. Following the repast, wherein wives and lady friends of the members renewed old acquaintances or made new ones, Grand Knight Edward McManus introduced those seated at the head table in this order: Past Grand Knight John Mulrenan, coordinating chairman with the Grand Knight made his brief address of welcome, and then turned the program over to the Grand Knight who called the most recent Past Grand Knight, Frank Farley forward to be presented his Past Grand Knight's Jewel and pin with the latter expressing his sincere thank you.

Deputy Grand Knight Len Sortino then took over the rostrum to inaugurate a most novel presentation which the Council had ever witnessed. First a most beautiful large plaque was unveiled, a gift to the Council from G.K. Ed McManus containing all the names thereon of the Past Grand Knights of the Council, suitably inscribed to be conspicuously mounted in the Council Hall as a permanent memento for all time. Next D.G.K. Sortino called each Past Grand Knight to the front of the hall beside the plaque while delivering prepared tributes extolling each one's qualities as exemplified in his tenure of office.

As each Past Grand Knight moved to the front of the hall, he was serenaded by a few bars done by Dick Burke at the piano and by singers Al Lawton, Joe Lynch, Joe Cullinane and taken from popular songs applicable to him. These were a source of much merriment as evidenced by the spontaneous handclapping of those present.

When all were assembled, Grand Knight McManus presented each with a certificate of merit suitable for framing and signed by Luke Hart, Supreme Knight in New Haven, the order's headquarters.

District Deputy Curran had high praise for Winchester Council in his remarks to the gathering, highlighting the council's success in its undertakings and the spirit of the membership. He paid specific tribute to this first affair, honoring the Past Grand Knights, pointing out how in many cases these gentlemen are all too soon becoming forgotten.

Dancing until midnight followed this section of the program to Bob Fiore's popular musicians. Past Grand Knights honored were as follows: Frank Dineen, Joseph Cullen, L. C. Thibeault, Charles Haggerty, Alfred Barnard. Walter Prue, Henry Murray, Everett Kimball, John Nowell, Vincent Erhard, Stergio Vangel, Charles Doucette, John Mulrenan, James Wharf, Richard Fiore, Frank Farley.

Allstate Motor Club Bail Bond Card

A bail bond certificate in the traffic arrest field is being brought to the attention of police officers countrywide. It's the Allstate Motor Club bail bond card, which is offered in lieu of cash bail up to $200. It guarantees the appearance of the club owner in any court of competent jurisdiction. The guarantee is backed not only by the Allstate Motor Club, but also by the Allstate Insurance Co.

The police have a written guarantee that the Allstate Motor Club will pay any forfeiture levied (not in excess of $200) should the motorist fail to appear. All public officers are authorized and requested to accept the certificate in lieu of cash bail. The bail bond certificate aplies in the case of all traffic arrests except where the motorist is charged with manslaughter or driving under the influence of alcohol or narcotics.

When the club member surrenders his card in lieu of bail, he must notify the motor club and agrees to reimburse it for any expense incurred on his behalf. If the motorist fails to appear in court, the authorities contact the nearest Allstate regional office for prompt action in paying the amount of bail.

The Santa Gift Fund Needs Your Toys and Dollars

The Winchester Police Headquarters is the collection point for a pet project of one of its officers—the collection of toys and funds for distribution to needy children and large families in the town.

Officer David Greel of 3 Salem Street started the project back in 1959 and has spearheaded it ever since, assisted by Sgt. Daniel Reardon, who is treasurer of money collections, and by other members of the Police and Fire Departments who have held collections of their own toward this cause.

In addition, many civic organizations are contributing to the cause and have in the past given it a good solid boost.

Right now good used toys are piling up at Police Headquarters. Officer Greel takes them home and paints and refurbishes them before the big day. The sooner he gets them the better.

Anyone with good toys still in strong, usable condition, is invited to bring them to the department just as soon as possible. Anyone wishing to make a money contribution to this cause is asked to mail checks to Sgt. Reardon, Winchester Police Station, c/o Police, Firefighters Santa Gift Fund. They may be made out to either Officer Greel or Sgt. Reardon.

Jehovah's Witness Group to Meet In Boxford

Robert S. Jones overseer of the Wilmington Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses said Boxford has been chosen as the location for the next religious seminar which is scheduled for December 27-29. The Masconomet Regional School has been engaged for the three-day assembly.

Congregations from Maine and New Hampshire in addition to eleven congregations situated in the northeast corner of Massachusetts will assemble for the event. More than 1100 ministers are expected to attend including 14 delegates from Winchester.

According to Mr. Jones the theme of the assembly is "Feed My Little Sheep." "The entire program," Mr. Jones said, "is prepared to help us in our ministry. For example, the Saturday evening session has the theme 'Skillfully Feed Sheeplike Ones.' It will consist of Bible talks, discussions and demonstrations showing us how we can improve our teaching ability."

Highlights of the assembly will come Saturday and Sunday. Saturday's highlight will be the baptism of new ministers which follows the talk on "Dedication and Baptism" by Charles V. Henry, district supervisor for the Witnesses in New England. Henry will also deliver the public lecture "The Bible Triumphs in a Scientific World" which is scheduled for 3:00 p.m. as Sunday's highlight.

Matthew Krzyzanowski, who has just been appointed as circuit supervisor for Massachusetts Circuit 4 will also be one of the principal speakers at the convention. His main talk, "Speaking the Truth Unites," will be delivered Sunday evening during the closing session of the assembly.

Prof. Anderson Gives Talk After Unusual Journey

Professor Robert H. Anderson of 8 Winslow Road, a professor of education at Harvard School of Education, arrived safely at State University College in Geneso, New York, last Wednesday to deliver a speech after the American Airlines plane he was traveling in became disabled in flight.

As the aircraft approached Rochester Airport at about 7:10 p.m., one engine stopped functioning. The aircraft was directed to proceed to Buffalo where it landed safely. Professor Anderson had high praise for both the crew and his fellow passengers for remaining calm throughout the incident.

From Buffalo he took a United flight back to Rochester, where about 33 education administrators from Western N. Y. State were awaiting his arrival in Geneso to speak on the subject "The non-graded elementary school in the United States." Professor Anderson is a leading proponent of the new type program which is gaining rapid acceptance in the U. S. today.

A police motor escort was arranged for Professor Anderson from Rochester to Geneso, where he was scheduled to take part in an interstate conference of college and public school administrators designed to bring educational leaders in contact with administrators of Western New York State schools.

Professor Anderson received the first full professorship of education at Harvard University on January 1 1962. He is a U. S. Navy veteran of World War II. From 1949 to 1954 he served as superintendent of the Park Forest schools in Illinois. Since 1954 he has served in various educational and administrative posts at Harvard.

Holidays at Home

The local Navy Recruiter in City Hall Medford, announced that new recruits that enlist in the Navy during the period of 19-31 December 1963, who so desire will be granted advance leave which will allow them to spend the holidays at home, before reporting for Recruit Training. The local recruiter further stated that the granting of the "Holiday" leave will not preclude the granting of regular leave on completion of recruit training.

Christmas Jingle Or Last-Minute Jangle

Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun has come up with some interesting research which shows that the modern custom of sending Christmas cards began in London in 1843. Although their origin in this country is not clearly dated, a "very early" card found by a Boston collector indicates the United States was not far behind in their use.

Today, Americans send far more Christmas cards than citizens of any other nation. The greeting card industry has estimated 6 billion cards of all kinds are sent annually and of course, the bulk of them are at Christmas.

Postmaster Gilgun predicts his office will handle more than 750,000 pieces of mail during the Christmas rush in December, and he has appealed again for help from residents of Winchester, who can assist our 60 postal employees in handling this great mail volume by depositing cards and gifts promptly.

The postmaster points out, quite sensibly, that one of the best Christmas presents we can give ourselves is to get our cards and gifts bought and mailed early. This will give us the gift of more free time to enjoy the holiday ahead.

He suggests that we develop an accurate mailing list with ZIP Codes. And, to help beautify our cards, he has plenty of the new Christmas stamps on hand. This stamp portrays the giant National Christmas Tree that will adorn the Eastern Ellipse behind the White House. The Christmas stamp on front and Christmas seal on back of Christmas card envelopes make an attractive holiday mailing, he notes.

So, let's help our postmaster and the faithful postal employees who help us all year long by shopping and mailing early with Christmas stamps and ZIP Code. Winchester ZIP Code is 01890.

Animal Rescue League Invites Contributions

At the Animal Rescue League, as shelter attendants exchanged Christmas greetings, the outside door was opened hurriedly to admit a man who stepped up to the counter and placed twenty dollars in the amazed clerk's hand. "Here!" he exclaimed. "This is for the League," and started to leave without further explanation.

Astonished, the clerk recovered sufficiently to stop the retreating figure and ask, "Just a minute, please, won't you tell us what this is for?"

Reluctantly the stranger paused with his hand on the doorknob. "Three years ago," he said, "when I didn't have even the carfare to get here, you returned my lost dog to me. That dog was all I owned then. Now I have a good job, and I just want you to know that I appreciate what you did for me at that time."

Good Santas, like the man above, know that the dollars they give to the League are used not only for dinners and blankets for horses, but, also, to purchase feed and medicines and for other animal relief projects that extend all through the year!

Better Business Bureau Warns On Unordered Goods

E. W. Gallagher, manager of the Better Business Bureau of Boston, said today the irksome practice of sending unordered merchandise through the mails continues to flourish and advised the public that it is generally under no obligation to pay for or return unsolicited goods. The Bureau executive said housewives and business and professional people report the receipt of a wide variety of goods they didn't order and don't want, including books, aprons, ties, handkerchiefs, fountain pens, wallets, stationery and other items.

Many of them, Mr. Gallagher said, are uncertain whether they are obliged to comply with the shipper's request to pay for the merchandise or return it.

Suggesting that the best way to end this merchandising evil is to make it unprofitable for the senders, Mr. Gallagher set forth these guidelines on the care and treatment of unsolicited goods:

Recipients of unordered merchandise generally are NOT obliged:

1. To acknowledge its receipt.
2. To return it.
3. To pay for it, unless used.
4. To give it particular care.
5. To keep it beyond a reasonable length of time.

They ARE obliged:

To surrender it to the shipper or his agent, if called for in person within a reasonable period of time. In this event, the recipient may demand the payment of storage charges before relinquishing the merchandise.

"As a practical matter," said the Better Business Bureau, "senders of unordered merchandise are rarely in a position to institute suit for the petty amounts involved and they know it. Nevertheless, some shippers make nasty threats designed to frighten the timid into remitting or returning the goods."

The Bureau also reported that those who ship unordered merchandise through the mails do so at their own risk. They cannot collect from the Post Office if the goods are allegedly lost or damaged because goods sent through the mails without an order are not insurable.

Charles Plays "The Boys From Syracuse"

The hit musical of the New York season, "The Boys From Syracuse" by Rodgers and Hart with book by George Abbott will be presented at the Charles Playhouse from Dec. 26 through Feb. 2. Producers Frank Sugrue and Michael Murray announced today the cast of this sparkling musical comedy, which is based on Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors".

Bes-Arlene is cast in the role of Adriana, the confused wife of one of a pair of identical twins; Antipholus of Syracuse, played by William K. Covington and Antipholus of Ephesus, played by Fred Gockel. These twins have identical twin servants, to further complicate the plot! They are Dromio of Syracuse, played by Thom Molinaro and Dromio of Ephesus, played by Richard Kinter. Travis Hudson portrays Luce, Joanna Lester is the mixed-up sister Luciana, Sally Lee the Courtesan and Bernard F. Wurger the sorcerer.

Morgan Memorial Christmas Gifts To The Elderly

Members of the Junior League of Greater Boston are busy all of this month at Morgan Memorial playing the part of Santa Claus in wrapping thousands of gifts which will be distributed to 1200 aged without friends or family in Greater Boston rest homes.

Morgan Memorial has been designated for the fifth consecutive year by the United Community Services Clearing Bureau to complete this project of remembering elderly folks in 100 convalescent homes who are alone in the world.

The names of these lonely folk, all confined to bed or wheel chair, who have outlived all their relatives and friends is solicited by Morgan Memorial from proprietors of rest homes so that a little Christmas cheer and joy may be brought to them.

Morgan Memorial's Santa and the bag of special items will be the only direct contact they will have during the Yuletide season. The gift bag will contain special assortments of candy, fruit, drugs, toiletries, a jig-saw puzzle, games and other useful necessities.

Henry E. Helms, executive director of Morgan Memorial, expressed generous thanks to more than 50 Junior League leaders who have toiled for many days in sorting and wrapping the gifts for the elderly. He said donations toward the expenses for this big project would be greatly appreciated.

The All-American Cacti

Cacti are one of the few Families of plants which are indigenous exclusively to the Americas. In 1807, 37 different species of Cacti were known; today, there are over 1500 species in 140 different genera.

Cacti are thought of by most people as "those big spiny things that never need water." This is really a good description, since Cacti are big — some species grow as high as telephone poles, they do have spines, and they don't require a great amount of water.

The Cacti plants are constructed so that they can take advantage of the heavy rains which are few and far between in the desert regions. Their stems are built like an accordion—they absorb water by expanding their pleated stems quickly. While most Cacti store water in their stems, a few have thickened roots.

For the most part, Cacti are leafless; this is so that the exposed surface area is kept to a minimum. The stomata, (breathing pores), are almost entirely closed to prevent excess evaporation.

There has been little or no hybridizing work done on Cacti except on those plants which flower. The work which has been done has produced flowers in an extended array of colors.

Cacti are, if you will excuse the pun, at home on the range. They thrive where the air is warm and dry and water in the soil is scarce. The worst enemy of a Cactus plant is a cold rain. For this reason, it is not a good idea to put Cacti out in the garden during the summer. While some species yellow if the light is too bright, most Cacti are sun-loving plants.

Although it is the common belief that Cacti thrive in sand, they actually require a more nutrition-rich soil. One-third leaf mold, one-third alkaline loam and one-third sand would be the ideal soil. As mentioned before, a lot of cold water is the worst enemy of these plants; good drainage is necessary for all Cacti.

The 1500 species of Cacti have been sub-divided into three "tribes" Pereskia, Opuntia and Cereus.

Cereus Cacti are the ones with long slender stems. They are found on the summits of mountains in Mexico and Brazil, and on our own Western Plains. This tribe contains 75% of all Cacti. The Cereus giganteus, the state flower of Arizona, grows 40 to 50 feet tall. It has arm-like branches which give the plant a shape like that of a candelabra.

The Opuntia tribe contains more than 400 species; the common name for this grouping is the Prickly Pear. The fruit of this variety is edible, having a cool, refreshing flavor.

Pereskia Cacti are the ones which, unless put through a rigorous examination, would not appear to be Cacti at all. One member of this tribe is the Pereskia aculeata, or Barbados Gooseberry.

Make World's Fair Plans Now, Advises ALA

Now is not too early to ask the boss for specific vacation dates next summer if you are thinking of going to the New York World's Fair say the travel experts at the Automobile Legal Association.

Predicting a demand for rooms within a 75-mile radius of New York City, Earl Marryat, ALA National Travel manager, says that tentative planning for the trip should be done now with actual reservations made right after the first of the year.

"We expect the greatest demand on travel facilities in history for any single event," said Marryat, "and fully expect that overnight accomodations as far away as New Haven, Connecticut, and Philadelphia will be in short supply. The ALA is already feeling the impact of preliminary planning although the Fair does not open until April 22, 1964."

December Safety On the Highways Means Happy Yule

We're getting around to that time of December when the most envied man or woman in town is the one who can say, "I've finished all my Christmas shopping, and all my holiday preparations are complete."

But don't get exasperated with your efficient friends, Chief of Police Joseph Derro advises. Instead give credit where credit is due, and then, in a friendly way, of course, maybe check up on them just a little bit by asking a few questions like:

Have you remembered the fact that accident-prevention is a part of holiday planning? When you shopped did you remember seat belts? Tire chains for bad going? New windshield wiper blades to prevent smeared vision? Have you neglected that car tune-up and safety-check you intended to get a long time ago?

Have you "winterized" your driving habits? Do you always slow down on slippery streets?

If you plan to entertain, have you planned it so that your guests can drive home wide awake and sober?

If your friend has included all such items as the above in his Christmas and New Year preparations, there's not much to do about it but admit he's a real winner—and make him your good example.

"I've seen pain in the eyes of people who have just had an accident," explained the chief. "Even if there are no serious injuries, there's the pain of plans rudely interrupted, cherished activities and opportunities postponed temporarily or lost permanently. We always hate to see it especially at this time of year."

Chief Derro is well aware that, all sentiment and wishful thinking aside, the Christmas holidays are traditionally among the most dangerous of the year. (The National Safety Council lists 805 Christmas holiday traffic deaths throughout the nation last year the highest death toll for any 1962 holiday period). He promises that his officers will be on extended duty helping to prevent unnecessary holiday accidents—by arresting you for a dangerous moving violation if you make that step necessary.

Incidentally, the best Christmas gift the Police Department could ask for would be the cooperation of every driver and pedestrian in making this the safest holiday season Winchester has ever enjoyed.

20 Brownies Give Cookies to Fire, Police, Postmen

Twenty girls from Brownie Troop 520 baked cookies for the firemen, policemen, and post office men of Winchester and delivered them personally on Tuesday, December 10. The Brownies decorated their boxes of cookies with gold paint and glitter.

The troop consisted of: Priscilla Read, Nancy de Natale, Kimberly Spencer, Susan Broadhurst, Cynthia White, Elizabeth New, Carol Bryson, Catherine Karp, Patricia Eaton, Katherine Mallon, Linda Britten, Betsy Mahoney, Judith Burns, Laura Downs, Nancy Higgins, Lexine Hoag, Margaret Morton, Katherine Raleigh, Amy Westwater and Nancy Eaton.

Mrs. Edward S. Read, Jr., troop leader, and Mrs. Robert Westwater, assistant leader, were very grateful for the help of members of the troop committee which consisted of Mrs. Edward Higgins, Mrs. Austin Broadhurst, Mrs. Roderick Hoag, and Mrs. Arthur Mallon.

Colorful Xmas Seals Fight TB, Respiratory Ills

The little top-hatted snowman waves aloft the end of his scarf in a saucy view—halloo, as if saluting the oncoming Christmas season.

Before him is a tiny Yule tree topped by a brilliant star. Beside him, framed in another panel, is a snug-looking little house, its window Christmas wreathed, its chimney emitting a curl of smoke.

You've recognized the dual picture! The jaunty snowman and the festive little house, gaily colored in bold reds and blues against a background of big snowflakes, are enlivening this year's Chrsitmas Seals. With the color and gaiety they contribute, festooning your mail with 1963 Christmas Seals is sort of like greeting and gifting your friends in technicolor.

But of course Christmas Seals do more than just decorate. For nearly six decades the Christmas Seal has been a rallying banner in the fight against tuberculosis and other respiratory diseases. The gift of health, hope and happiness goes with your Christmas card when the postage stamps on the front of the envelope are accompanied by lavish strips or blocks of Christmas Seals on the back.

And speaking of postage, this year for the second time the Post Office Department has its own messengers of Christmas gaiety in the shape of cheery, colorful Christmas stamps. Both Christmas stamps and Christmas Seals belong on your mail. One to pay for carting it to wherever it's going, the other to carry on the fight to eradicate tuberculosis and control other respiratory diseases.

So if you haven't yet responded to the Christmas Seal letter from your local association, right now is the moment to do so!

Branley Warns Of The New Driving Learner's Permit

A new law approved this fall and which will become effective January 1, 1964, prohibits juveniles over sixteen years of age to drive an automobile without a learner's permit, and without an experienced licensed driver over 21 years old accompanying him, according to William Branley, director of driver education at the High School.

Mr. Branley called attention to the new law as outlined in a Registry of Motor Vehicles announcement this week so Winchester parents of youths desiring to learn how to drive would be fully acquainted with the new regulations which will be in force after January 1.

The Registry's announcement of the new stipulations on unlicensed drivers learning to drive states:

"Any person who is at least sixteen years of age, excepting persons who have been licensed and whose licenses are not in force because of revocation or suspension, and persons whose right to operate is suspended by the registrar, may apply to the registrar for a learner's permit. The registrar in his discretion after the applicant has successfully passed all parts of the examination other than the driving test, may issue to the applicant a learner's permit which shall entitle him, while having such permit in his immediate possession, to drive a motor vehicle upon any way when accompanied by an operator, licensed by the registrar, who is twenty-one years of age or over, who has had at least one year of driving experience and who is occupying a seat beside the driver. Such licensed operator shall be liable for the violation of any provision of this chapter, or of any regulation made in accordance herewith, committed by such person with a learner's permit; provided that the examiners of operators in the employ of the registrar, when engaged in their official duty, shall not be liable for the acts of any person who is being examined. Any such learner's permit shall be valid for six months from the date of issue or until the holder shall have received a license to operate, whichever first occurs.

"If the applicant is under eighteen years of age, said learner's permit shall not entitle him to operate a motor vehicle between the hours of one o'clock antemeridian and five o'clock antemeridian, unless he is accompanied by his parent or legal guardian, who is a licensed operator with at least one year of driving experience and whose license or right to operate is not revoked or suspended.

"Each application for a learner's permit shall be made upon a form furnished by the registrar, and shall be accompanied by a $2 fee. Each holder of a learner's permit may take not more than three driving tests within the aforesaid period of six months, upon payment of the fee for examination of an applicant for an operator's license, as required in said section, for each such driving test."

Pease Describes New B.U. MBA Program Features

Increased attention to the "human factor" in business and industry is one of the keystones of Boston University's recently announced Master of Business Administration Degree program at the College of Business Administration, which got underway this fall.

DR. DONALD A. PEASE

"Today, a major element of business management involves the process of working with individuals and groups in order to accomplish organizational objectives," says Dr. Donald A. Pease of 6 Wilson Street, a program director. "Our program attempts to give proper emphasis to this important matter, not only through formal course work, but also through outside seminars and conferences."

In its current first year of operation, the new MBA program has enrolled 53 candidates, according to Dr. Pease, who is also an associate professor of business administration.

A unique feature of this new human relations emphasis is the two "live-in" human relations weekend laboratory sessions in which each student participates, once during the first semester, and again in the last semester of his program.

Held at the University's Osgood Hill Conference Center in North Andover, the larger group divides into small groups of 8-10, which meet with a staff member for a series of sessions beginning Friday evening and ending Sunday afternoon. During these laboratory studies of interpersonal relationships, the students attempt to learn more about people as individuals and as members of groups and study some of the factors which affect group behavior.

Lectures and exercises are also presented in order to deepen the participant's understanding of group behavior and to help students bridge the gap between their own group experience and similar situations in organizational life.

Why a weekend session to study this type of material? "By dividing into small groups and eliminating outside influences, these sustained blocks of time provide the opportunity for relationships and understandings to develop between individuals," says Dr. Pease. "Six to eight productive meetings and two or three more sessions of theory can be covered in the course of a weekend. The same things would take weeks in a classroom situation."

The director was happy with the faculty and staff reaction to the first laboratory session, held in October, and sees it as an "important start for something that will be a key part of the graduate program."

The total MBA program is a two-year full-time pursuit, but the regular faculty also conducts evening sessions through which the same program may be studied on a three year basis.

The course of study includes classes in accounting, economics, finance, quantitative methods, industrial relations, marketing, administration, advanced quantitative controls and industrial logistics.

"We are looking for breadth and scope in our new MBA graduate," says Dr. Pease. "The business administrator of today must be competent in general management and we stress this in our course work. Our emphasis on human relations throughout the program is consistent with the recognition that the effective executive must be able to understand and work with people.'

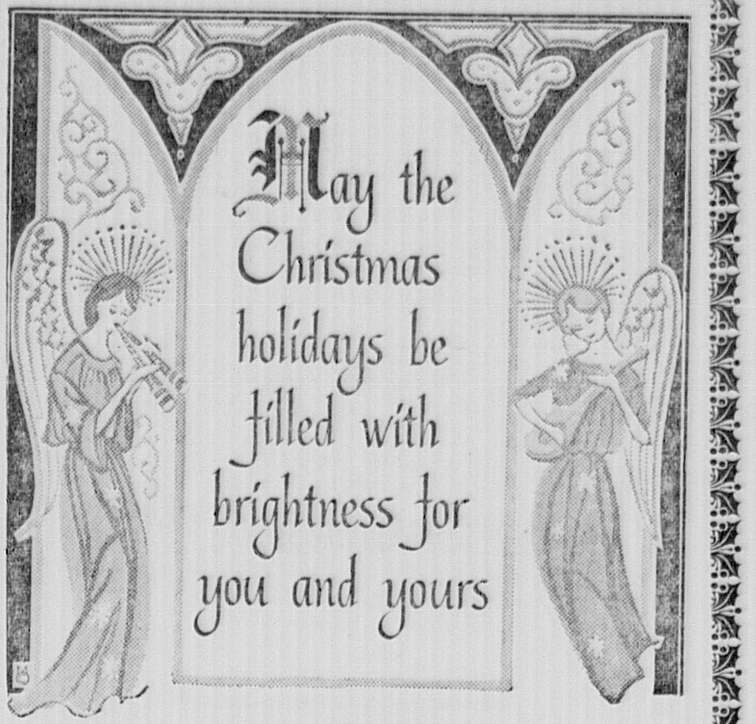
Bay State Tops Hunting Safety Record

Massachusetts deer hunters have just completed the best safety record for deer seasons to date. Only one accident, a self-inflicted wound to a hunter's hand, was reported to the Division of Law Enforcement during the deer season which ended December 7. For the second year in a row, no accidents involving anyone being mistaken for game, or unseen in the line of fire, were recorded. This is the second year that deer hunters have been required to wear fluorescent red or orange.

While demonstrating that hunting is a safe sport, Bay State hunters also apparently had a better deer season this year. As of 1 p.m. December 10, 2568 kills had been reported to the Division of Fisheries and Game as required by law. This figure is far from final; reports are expected to continue coming in for several days. The figure includes 23 taken by bow and arrow during the archery season.

The state's eight checking stations examined a total of 696 deer, compared to 658 checked through the same stations which operated on the same Monday and Saturday only schedule last year. Prognosticators of deer hunting success are warned that any conclusions from this figure are pure speculation, since checking stations depend on hunters voluntarily bringing in their deer.

Final deer harvest figures will be released as soon as available.



May the Christmas holidays be filled with brightness for you and yours

Sons Of Italy News

First and very important, the officers and members of the Sons of Italy wish all a very Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year!

Chairman Art Dunbar of the Kiddies Xmas Party urges all members and their registered tots to be at the club hall on Sunday, December 22, at 2 o'clock to meet Santa Claus during this annual function. Working diligently for this committee with Chairman Dunbar are Boss Dattilo, Nick Ronzio, Joe and John Peonessa and Pat Bruno.

Chairman Richard Penta and Tony Melaragni have completed plans for the Bloodmobile, which is to be at the club hall on Swanton Street on Monday, January 20, from 1 to 7 p.m.. There was an encouraging number of donors a year ago, and an even more successful participation is anticipated next month. Mark your calendar now and if you are in doubt as to whether you are able to give this precious life-giving blood, allow the medical staff to help you decide. Remember Jan. 20. Anyone wishing to give, member on non-member, is most welcome.

Congratulations to Bob Gilberti and John Stavros on being elected high school football captain for next year!

The program and entertainment committee of chairman Frank Provinzano, Carl Bertolucci, Boss Dattilo, Bob Fiore, Mel Fiore, Greg Sacca, Randy Kazazian, Frank Antonuccio and Joe Paonessa has arranged for ringing in the New Year. As you read this column, there may not be any tickets left but if you wish to try you may call Frank at 729-3633. Tickets were limited and went real fast. The party will be held at the club hall on New Year's Eve with dancing from 9:00 - 2:00 a.m. Reserved tables will be set aside for groups getting five tickets.

Fourteen Here Are Honored By Heart Fund Gifts

Heart Fund gifts honoring 14 late residents of Winchester, have been received by the Massachusetts Heart Association's Greater Boston Chapter, president Dr. David Littmann said recently.

The memorial gifts, given in tribute to departed relatives and friends, make possible substantial additions to Heart Association programs of lifesaving research, education and community service.

"It is particularly heartwarming at this holiday season," said Dr. Littmann, "to receive such impressive proof that our people not only pay thoughtful tribute to those no longer with us, but that in so doing they help pave the way for longer, healthier lives for those to whom heart research will mean so much."

Tipsy Transport Service Needed For Xmas Parties

A Tipsy Transport Service should be included in the plans of every group or organization planning a Christmas party where liquor will be served, the A.L.A. Safety Department urged today.

According to the Automobile Legal Association, a Tipsy Transport Service is an appointed or volunteer committee of non drinkers formed for the purpose of getting fellow employees home safely after the office or group Christmas party.

A.L.A. safety officials have been waging an all-out campaign to drastically reduce the number of drinking drivers who take to the road during the Christmas season. Statistics have shown that Christmas has the worst record of any holiday for highway fatalities.

Israeli Soprano To Make Debut In Boston

The Boston Opera Group's January 29th presentation of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," at the Boston Donnelly Memorial Theater will introduce to Boston, in the role of Pamina, the kidnapped daughter of the Queen of the Night, a young Israeli soprano who beeame an overnight sensation in New York last December when she made a Town Hall recital debut, virtually unknown and with little advance fanfare. She was acclaimed the next day in The New York Times as "a singer of extraordinary gifts" and in the Herald Tribune as "a consummate artist." She is slender, dark-haired Netania Davrath and she is currently doubling as a busy concert and opera star and the official hostess for the Israeli government in Chicago, where her husband, Ephraim Davrath, is his country's Consul General.

Actually Miss Davrath's career has been a uniquely international one, for she was born in Russia, educated in Israel and Italy, and started on the road to singing fame in the United States. Another unusual fact about her career is that, prior to its present operatic and art song phase, she was well known as a singer of folk songs under the Vanguard recording label.

In her native Ukranian city of Kiev, Miss Davrath played the piano and cherished vague ambitions about becoming an actress. But at the war's end, when she was only fourteen years old, her parents moved to Israel. There a local voice teacher, also a Russian, heard the girl warbling a folk song one day and suggested that she enter a singing contest sponsored by the Ministry of Education. As winner of the contest, Netania received a scholarship for the Academy of Music, but she immediately encountered a problem: She was the only student in the school with no musical background. The studies were advanced and she was close to desperation when she told one of her professors: "I need private lessons; I cannot keep up with the studies. I think I ought to go home." The professor, aware of her unusual voice, suggested a pianist and conductor on the school staff who might be available to teach her. Netania was introduced to Ephraim Davrath and, as she puts it, "I paid for the first three lessons—after that they were free. I married him."

It was doubly fortunate that Netania decided to remain at the Academy, for not only did she find a husband, but she received prizes which entitled her to a six-month study period in Italy and a year and one-half in the United States. Here, she worked under the renowned Madame Freschl at Juilliard and later became a private pupil of Jennie Tourel in Aspen, Colorado, where she made her operatic debut as Fiordiligi in "Cosi Fan Tutte" during the Aspen Summer Festival. Since then she has returned to Israel to sing the roles of Aida, Mimi in "La Boheme," Donna Anna in "Don Giovanni," and Suor Angelica for the Israeli Opera and to appear as soloist for the London Symphony on its visit to Tel Aviv. In the United States, she has sung with the New York Philharmonic both at Lincoln Center and on CBS-TV and has appeared at the famous Hollywood Bowl.

RICHARD F. CLARK of 3 Olde Lyme Road, widely known contractor, has been named head class agent for the nationwide Tufts University annual giving fund campaign, for half a million dollars. Graduated from Tufts in 1924, he is a director of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts and a trustee of the East Cambridge Savings Bank.

Mail Early For Christmas

"The time has passed to talk about 'Mailing Early for Christmas,'" Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun said today, "but you can still help us to avoid a tremendous last minute pile-up of Christmas mail if you'll send all your gift packages and Christmas cards right now!"

To the inevitable last minute mailers he suggests that you use Air Mail for every Christmas card or gift going to distant places out-of-town. He points out that even a few hours delay at this critical time may mean disappointment for your friends and loved ones on Christmas Day.

The Postmaster says that he expects the 1963 Christmas mails will break all records, and that the mail load will undoubtedly hit its peak within the next few days. The flood of outgoing Christmas cards and gifts is being matched by a like torrent of incoming mail that is becoming greater every day.

Postal employees are digging in harder than ever, and for your convenience the Post Office will remain open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily and on Saturdays from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. There's still time for local deliveries, but all Christmas cards should be sent by First Class mail. Be sure to include your return address on all Christmas card envelopes and package labels.

The Postmaster expressed his thanks for the fine cooperation from the public so far, and asks your continued help so that all gift packages and Christmas cards can be delivered before Christmas Eve.

IRS News

"Reports of an unprecedented collection campaign by the Internal Revenue Service just prior to Christmas are unfounded," Director Alvin M. Kelley of the Boston office stated today.

"If the Service anticipated such action, we certainly would not schedule such action during the Christmas season. In a large office such as Boston, there is always a considerable flow of work in process, including collection action on unpaid accounts of individuals and businesses. All year long, the records of the office are under review to identify taxpayers who have broken agreements and have ignored repeated requests for payment of everdue taxes. Only in instances where there has been a complete disregard of requests for voluntary cooperation is the payroll levy used.

"As in other years, we have made every effort to complete routine collection operations as early as possible before Christmas. In no case," the Director added, "do we knowingly proceed in such a manner as to cause hardship to individuals. In any case of this nature, if people disclose their circumstances to us, we meet the situation with proper consideration."

Politics Ushers Red Cross Year At Washington

Not politics as usual but politics as unusual was the order of the day on December 9 when the Washington School chose student leaders for the year to head its chapter of the Junior Red Cross.

Competition for office brought lessons in elections, elocution, and Red Cross objectives as aspirants for the top four offices (coming from grades four through six) presented their conceptions of the organization and their own qualifications for the responsibility and leadership in the jobs. Subsequently elected by ballot were Dennis Rotondi, grade 6, president; David O'Leary, grade 4, vice president; Mark Lombardi, grade 5, secretary; and Sally Hayes, grade 6 treasurer.

Nominees also heard in talks and though defeated for top offices, but chosen later for room representatives were: Jay Barry, Stephen Boodakian, Michael Varley, Judith Rainha, Leonard Johnson, Anne Gattineri, Wendy Harvey, Jan Peterson, Tim Fahey, Patricia Lanni, Theresa Salerno and Martha Gaythwaite.

Chosen from the lower three grades as class representatives were: Prudence Barker, Billy Penna, Gloria Gattineri, Pete Wakefield and Nancy Norton.

Winchester Duplicate Bridge Club

The WDBC will celebrate Christmas week by holding its game on Thursday, December 26th, at the K. of C. Hall. Please note this 24-hour postponement and pass the information along to your friends. There will also be a New Year's Day party on Wednesday, January 1, with Section A played as a partnership draw game.

The December 11 game saw Col. and Mrs. Grove back up their open pairs win with a NS victory in Section A, while Miggs and Darrell Root topped the EW field by an even larger margin. In the eleven-table field which completed 22 boards, the leading pairs were:

North-South

Col. and Mrs. Neil Grove	134
Richard Smith and David Littleton	127
Lee Mitchell and Robert Haskell	119½
Fred Gove and Henry Morgan	117
Mr. and Mrs. George Kimball	114½
Mr and Mrs. Chester Davis, Jr.	114½
Alta Stewart and Donna Redpath	112½

East-West

Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Root	137
Ruth Blackwood and Marge Hakanson	124
Bill Duryea and Clarence Woodward	122½
James Byrne and Samuel Burwen	116
Fredna Perkins and Barbara Sawyer	114
William Johnson and Luther Hayes	113

In Section B, Drs. Muggia and Grady held a brief diagnostic conference, then used their best "tableside" manner to apply the cure to the opposition, and led both fields with a 79½ point game on a 63 average score.

North-South

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lorris	76
Barbara Shea and Margaret Jackson	74
Alan Friot and Steve Haseltine	71
Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnson	67
Martha Walker and Guy Mingolelli	64½

Local Teachers Join in Seasonal Tea and Singing

With John Woodworth, string instrument supervisor, at the violin and Wendell S. Withington and Jeanne Loudon of the music department taking turns with Leonor Rich, Washington principal, on the piano; the faculty and staff of the School Department opened the season with singing last week at the Lincoln School.

The occasion was the annual Christmas Tea held by the Winchester Teachers' Association with the Lincoln teachers and Miss Martha Cunningham, principal, as hostesses this year. Special guests were Mrs. A. R. Brink and Mrs. Robert Grenzeback of the School Committee.

The music and singing, which has become a tradition at these parties, kept the guests around the piano 'til close to supper time.

Pourers at the festive tables were officers of the Winchester Teachers' Association: Miss Sybil Daniels, Miss Charlotte LeClair, Miss Phyllis Roberts, and Mrs. Eleanor Thistlethwaite.

Methodist Youth Carollers Ready For Christmas

Two groups of the Methodist Youth Fellowship of Crawford Memorial Church will go out this Sunday evening to sing Christmas carols for the sick and shut-ins.

The Junior High MYF will go out from 5 to 6:30 o'clock and will then return to the church.

The Senior MYF will be making their rounds from 7 to 9 o'clock after which they will go to the home of one of their members.

Miss Jo Anne Gulley, educational assistant, will be in charge of both programs.

Boston Safe And Trust Appoints O. Guinn Smith

Among sixteen recent appointments announced at the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company by William W. Wolbach, president, was that of O. Guinn Smith of 38 Rangeley Road, to be administrative assistant to the president.

Mr. Smith, who joined the company staff in June of this year, is a former assistant dean at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration and a director of that school's Associates Program and Fund.

He resides here with his wife, Nancy, and sons Stephen and Mark.

Week at a glance appointment books showing day and time schedules. Excellent for professional people. At the Winchester Star.

Captain Rochford Marine Reserve Executive Officer

Captain Richard D. Rochford of 231 High Street and of the United States Marine Corps Reserves, has assumed the duties of Executive Officer of the Second Engineer Company, FMF, in Lynn.

The 2d Engineer Company is comprised of six officers and 153 men from the North Shore area with the home armory in Lynn. The unit was initially organized in 1947; it was called to active duty during the Korean Conflict, and then re-organized in 1952. The primary purpose of the unit is to train to maximum proficiency Marine Engineers so that the unit may contribute to the aim of the Marine Corps Reserve program always to be ready.

Captain Rochford, a graduate of the Babson Institute has been associated with the Marine Corps since 1953 and with the 2nd Engineer Company since May 1953. He and his wife, Betsy, reside here with their two children.

Labor Secretary Lauds Fair Labor Standards Act

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has called attention to an increase in the Federal minimum wage which went into effect September 3.

For employment covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act prior to 1961—employees engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce—the minimum wage advances from $1.15 an hour to a new minimum of not less than $1.25 an hour.

About 2.6 million workers in a covered work force of almost 28 million received wage increases, and the increased rates of pay added about $365 million to their annual incomes.

The Secretary also pointed out that a 44-hour maximum workweek standard became effective September 3 for employment in certain large enterprises engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, principally retail and service establishments, which was made subject to the overtime provisions of the act for the first time by the amendment of 1961.

The 40-hour maximum work week continues for other covered employment. Overtime hours in excess of the applicable maximum work week must be compensated for at not less than one-and-one-half times the regular rate of pay.

"We have come a long way since the Fair Labor Standards Act was enacted about 25 years ago with a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour," the Secretary said.

"Gains since that time have contributed to a higher standard of living and a stabilized national economy.

"The Fair Labor Standards Act in 1963, as in 1938, remains a beacon of human progress identifiable with the American way of life."

3 Years in Army Offers a Chance Of Junior College

The educational opportunities now available to young men in military service are almost unbelievable: enlisting after graduation from high school, a young man can leave the military three years later with the equivalent of two years of college.

That's the latest picture of educational developments in the Armed Forces according to Sergeant Fred Nixon, Army recruiter in Winchester. Discussing the chances for advancement in the Army, Sgt. Nixon stressed the fact that, through testing, off-duty courses, correspondence courses, and other means, a three-year enlistment can become the equivalent of a junior college.

Sgt. Nixon said that, for example, the so-called "College GED" test is recognized by many colleges as the equivalent of one year of college. In addition to this, he pointed out, almost every college and university in the country will give up to six semester hours of credit for three years of active duty.

The more difficult-to-earn credits—the "extension" courses and correspondence courses—are also available to the interested soldier, Sgt. Nixon said.

"Many young men enlisting in the Army for assignment to Europe are surprised to discover that they still have university courses available over there," Sgt. Nixon said. However, almost every major Army post in Europe offers courses taught by members of the faculty of the University of Maryland, "and these courses are given full credit by leading colleges and universities across the country."

Correspondence courses are always available to persons interested in improving themselves," the sergeant said, but they're especially attractive in the Army. After an initial payment of five dollars, the enlisted man can take as many courses as he wants—at no additional cost. The only requirement is that he complete one course before starting another. These courses vary from basic English to advanced mathematics and electrical engineering.

So—those young men who have been looking on a three-year enlistment as a three-year pause in their "climb to the top" can get more information about the opportunities in the Army by visiting Sgt. Nixon in his office at 49 High Street, Medford, or by giving him a call at EX 6-5777.

Living With Your Heart

Bay State parents were warned today to be alert for symptoms of streptococcal infection in their children.

Dr. Benedict F. Massell, secretary of the Massachusetts Heart Association and research director of The House of The Good Samaritan, reminded Massachusetts residents that winter is the season in which "strep" infection increases. cause of rheumatic heart disease, childhood's invisible crippler.

However, proper recognition and management of "strep" infection can prevent the occurrence of rheumatic fever, Dr. Massell said.

He issued the following precautions for parents of young children:

1. If the child has a sore throat or appears generally unwell, keep him quiet and take his temperature four times a day.

2. If fever 101 degrees or more, is found, it is important to call your family physician immediately.

The two symptoms most likely to signal the presence of strep infection, in order of their importance, are: sore throat with fever and, fever alone. Most sore throats and head colds without fever are not due to strep infection, Dr. Massell said.

If strep infection is suspected, the doctor will use the clinical symptoms and have throat cultures taken—the only sure ways to diagnose the presence of strep. Often, Dr. Massell pointed out, strep infection is relatively "silent" and cannot be definitely established without the aid of cultures.

Streptococcal infection is usually best treated with penicillin, unless the patient is allergic to it, and with the help of this antibiotic a high degree of success has been attained in preventing rheumatic fever a long term and potentially dangerous illness.

The Massachusetts Heart Association has been in the forefront of the medical effort against rheumatic fever for many years. The MHA has underwritten substantial research projects which have been valuable in the detection, treatment and prevention of rheumatic fever.

AAA Warns About "Dangerous December"

The American Automobile Association today warned motorists and pedestrians alike to beware of "Dangerous, Deadly, Dark December."

Pointing out that 79 persons were killed in highway accidents in Massachusetts last December, Richard W. Hoover, safety director for AAA's Massachusetts Division, said: "Early darkness decreased visibility, winter driving hazards, the excitement of the holiday season, and drinking all combine to make this month the most dangerous of the year for the person behind the wheel and the person on foot.

"December is a particularly dangerous time for children. So, we are making this special safety appeal to parents: Make sure your youngsters are extra careful.

"Snow, sleet, ice, heavy rains, and all the interesting holiday activities often cause children to forget their safe walking rules. Hurrying to escape bad weather and daydreaming about Christmastime can make a child oblivious to traffic hazards."

To remind children of traffic dangers, the new AAA safety poster now on display in the schools has the slogan "Be Extra Alert in Bad Weather." This is part of the Triple-A's monthly safety education program. The December poster, a winner in AAA National Traffic Safety Poster Contest, was designed by Donna Rickel, age 17, of the Warren Harding School, Bridgeport, Connecticut.

International Correspondence Makes Friends

There are thousands of people throughout the world who would like to correspond with Americans, with anyone who will write them regularly.

There are about 50,000 now awaiting a link to an American who would enjoy receiving their letters written in English and answering them, according to word received from the International Friendship League, 40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts.

With top flight diplomats having trouble reaching an accord, it might be that the really profound diplomatic effort must be made from the grass roots—for the little people around the world to write to each other of their hopes and fears, their joys and ambitions. The opportunity is open for ages 7 to 60. A small contribution for life membership helps defray expenses and details may be had by sending a stamped envelope to Boston.

What good could come out of our town? Write and see, and tell people all about yourself and then sit back and read what others, like you, born in little places in hidden parts of the world yearn for and hope for. Maybe all you can do is pray with them that their hopes may come true, but you can push back your horizons.

John Sullivan's Design Is Picked For Naval Emblem

John J. Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Sullivan of 30 Wildwood Street, and a member of the Atomic Energy Commission in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, was recently congratulated by A. L. Hoffman, captain of the U. S. S. Oak Ridge.

The occasion was the selection of his design as the official emblem of the floating drydock commissioned last month in Portsmouth, Virginia.

The U. S. S. Oak Ridge is the first vessel of its class to join the Polaris fleet.

Except for pre-school children there will be no sessions of the Church School on Christmas Sunday, so that all (grades 1-12) may attend one of the worship services with their parents.

Midnight Service Christmas Eve

The traditional Christmas Eve Service of Carols and Candle-lighting will be held at the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church on Tuesday evening at 11:15 o'clock.

The pastor, the Rev. H. Newton Clay will trace the Christmas story, from the Prophets to the Wise Men, interwoven with appropriate Christmas Carols and anthems by the Sanctuary Choir.

Prelude: "Sleepers Awake, A Voice Is Calling" — Bach
"Lo, How A Rose E'er Blooming" — Brahms
Julie Collins, organist
Anthems: "Noel" — Titcomb
"In Dulce Jubilo" — German Carol
"How Far Is It to Bethlehem?" — Shaw
Gloria Maifeld, director
Organ Postlude: "In Dulci Jubilo" — Dupre

The service will conclude with the beautiful, symbolic ceremony of the lighting of the candles, symbolizing the spread of the "Glad Tidings" of Him who was the Light of the World, from the first Christmas to the present time.

Local Gift To Bentley College Honors Mr. Lewis

Thomas L. Morison of 4 Bruce Road, president of Bentley College of Accounting and Finance, Boston, stated today that a recent major gift will make possible the complete restoration of the 22-room, red brick mansion on the college's new 100-acre campus site in Waltham.

The home of the late Ronald T. Lyman, Sr., at 500 Beaver Street, Waltham, will be converted to college purposes through the generosity of Helen Lewis Gilpatric, wife of Dr. Paul A. Gilpatric of 1 Everett Avenue, and Thomas M. Lewis, II, of Westwood, in memory of their father, Harold M. Lewis of West Medford.

The late Mr. Lewis was associated with H. P. Hood & Sons for 38 years as a financial officer, serving on the executive board as one of the original members, and as chairman of the finance committee until his retirement in 1952. He was also a member of the Hood board of directors from 1936-1952. President Morison announced that the Bentley trustees have voted to name the renovated mansion "Lewis Hall."

Traffic Safety

Nearly nine out of every ten casualties on the nation's highways in 1962 were caused by human error and lack of judgment. And the speedster still ranks as the Number One Killer on the road.

Of the 40,500 persons who lost their lives in traffic accidents last year, 32,300 died in accidents caused by driver error and traffic law violations. Moreover, according to the report, nearly 3,000,000 persons were injured in auto mishaps blamed on drivers' mistakes.

The fast driver continued to be the greatest menace on the highways. Nearly 13,000 deaths and more than 1,145,000 injuries were directly attributable to excessive speeding.

A Travelers spokesman pointed out that—like the majority of accidents—most highway casualties could have been avoided. They were caused by human failure, he said, and it is clearly evident that our biggest task is to get this message across to the American public.

"If we can do this effectively," he added, "we have an opportunity to make dramatic improvements in the field of traffic safety."

Program For Garden Club Has Beauty And Talent

The severe snowstorm did not prevent members and guests from attending the meeting of the Winchester Garden Club on December 12 at the home of Mrs. Deran Hintlian.

The Christmas decorations throughout the house were indescribably beautiful. Mrs. Harold F. Meyer, president, and Mrs. Royal B. Wills presided at the coffee table. The centerpiece was a composition of chamaecyperis and pine cones with green and gold Christmas balls on a gold cloth. Members of the club brought presents in attractive wrappings which will be given to children at the Metropolitan State Hospital in Waltham. By unanimous vote Mrs. J. Edward Downes was made an honorary member.

For the program several members of the club made arrangements suitable for the holiday season by spelling out Merry Christmas:

"M," by Mrs. W. Campbell Ross, showed a carved Italian Madonna outside a wooden house from which a light shone on the face of the figurine. For "E," Mrs. Angelo W. Ghirardini had little elves with pine cones; "R" was a scene with reindeer by Mrs. Edward B. Mansfield; another "R" was a kissing ring by Mrs. Chandler W. Symmes; "Y," a yew tree with a treasure box and candles as accents by Mrs. Royal B. Wills and a dried arrangement signifying the Yule season by Mrs. Robert M. Stone.

For "C," Mrs. Hazen H. Ayer had a three-part arrangement of cones with candles, and Mrs. Maurice T. Freeman had white chrysanthemums and red carnations in a silver compote. "H," by Miss Corinne Mead, was a composition with holly in a mortar and pestle with a heritage wine bottle and little glasses. Mrs. Ghirardini took the three next letters, "R," rattan and ribbon with grapes, "I," an iron container with ivy and ilex, and "S," a sleigh filled with satin balls. "T" was a tree hung with cookies decorated by Mrs. Percy Bugbee as she alone can do, "M" was a Hummel Madonna before a cathedral window by Mrs. Ghirardini, "A" was an unusual angel by Mrs. Richard J. Clark, a gold artichoke wreath by Mrs. Ghirardini and exquisite little angels by Mrs. John B. Wills. The final letter "S" was a shell wreath by Mrs. Symmes.

It was a delightful informal meeting with real talent displayed by the arrangers.

Attractive desk accessories, pencil holders, letter holders, envelope openers, stamp dispensers and desk pens. These items can be purchased at the Winchester Star.

Children's Museum "Blue Bird" Under Local Direction

Carlene Samoiloff of Highland Avenue, is directing and Mary B. Todd of Main Street, assisting in the preparation of Maeterlink's "The Blue Bird" which is to be given for children on Saturday, December 21, at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Children's Museum, Jamaica Way, Boston.

Both Mrs. Samoiloff and Mrs. Todd are associated with the Winchester Children's Theatre; and last year Mrs. Samoiloff directed the Rose Hawthorne Catholic High School group of Concord, which is presenting the play Saturday, to top honors in the Diocese Drama Festival.

A delight with its colorful costumes and imaginative scenery, "The Blue Bird" tells of a brother and sister on Christmas Eve, who in their dreams searching for the "Blue Bird" of happiness through the lands of memory, of night, of the future, with their companions dog, cat, bread, fire, sugar, water, light, the fairy, milk and more.

Nurse About Town

Mrs. Richard Neilssien, a warm, radiant personality and a capable senior nurse, is the most recent addition to the staff of the Winchester Visiting Nursing Association.

She has come to Winchester from a staff position with the Lynn Visiting Nursing Association, where she worked for two years, following a year at the Rochester Olmsted County Health Unit in Rochester, Minnesota. Mrs. Neilssien was graduated from the College of St. Scholastica in Duluth, Minnesota, receiveing a B.S. in nursing in 1960.

A native of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, Mrs. Neilssien is an enthusiastic supporter of that beautiful state. She came east after her marriage to a Reading resident, who had formerly lived in Winchester. The Neilssiens now reside in Malden. Mrs. Neilssien's principal outside interest at present is raising tropical fish, her specialty being black sulfin mollies. She also enjoys knitting and bridge in her spare time.

Mrs. Neilssien's special field here is her responsibility for the student nurses that come to our Visiting Nursing Association for experience in field work. There are six students coming from Boston University this year for eight weeks training in Winchester; and Newton College is sending sixteen students in February for one day apiece.

MRS. RICHARD NEILSSIEN

In addition to supervising student nurses, Mrs. Neilssien is in charge of health guidance at Wyman and Lincoln Schools and does bedside nursing and newborn care in these districts. She is most enthusiastic about the system here and enjoys the generalized program. She feels that public health nursing combines all the facilities to the best advantage in order to give comprehensive nursing care. Winchester is very lucky to have such a delightful and capable nurse added to its excellent staff.

Dr. Robert Smith Speaks to WVNA On Resuscitation

Dr. Robert M. Smith, chief of anesthesiology at the Children's Medical Center in Boston, told Board members of the Winchester Visiting Nursing Association last Friday, December 13 that resuscitation is now as important a part of the anesthetist's job as putting people to sleep.

Keeping a patient unconscious during surgery is, of course, a primary function of the anesthetist. Today, however, the anesthetist is often called upon to keep the post-operative patient alive. Dr. Smith said that in the recovery room or intensive therapy room the anesthetist may have to resuscitate the patient, thus helping his breathing and circulation return to normal.

Hospital procedures for resuscitation often require mechanical devices to breathe for the patient or to pump his blood. However, in an everyday emergency such as drowning or a heart attack, there are two effective and safe procedures that may be used, Dr. Smith said. First, the air passage is opened by tilting the head back, and then mouth to mouth breathing and closed heart massage are used.

To illustrate these techniques Dr. Smith showed a film strip demonstrating drowning, asphyxiation from fire, a heart attack, and electric shock; in each case a lay person using mouth to mouth breathing coupled with external heart massage restored the victim's breathing and circulation.

Then, using a dummy, Dr. Smith gave a demonstration of mouth to mouth breathing and closed heart massage. He assured the board that these techniques for resuscitation are safe and effective and after practicing on the dummy, board members felt that in an emergency they would not hesitate to perform these maneuvers.

A short business meeting conducted by Mrs. Bradford M. Bentley, president, preceded Dr. Smith's talk. Committee Chairmen gave their annual reports. Mrs. Gordon L. Sidebotham announced that the annual meeting will be held on Friday, January 24, at the home of Mrs. Edward W. Little, 5 Lakeview Road. Coffee will be served at 1:15 p.m. with the meeting to start at 1:45. The speaker will be Dr. Harry L. Mueller.

Winchesterites To Spend Christmas Across The Globe

David Mawdsley, son of Mrs. Carol Mawdsley of 22 Bonad Road, completes a two and one-half year teaching contract of teaching mathematics in Uganda, East Africa, this week and will be leaving Africa to meet with his mother in Cairo on January 1.

Mr. Mawdsley, a WHS graduate of 1957 and a Ripon College, Wisconsin graduate of 1961, has been in East Africa under the auspices of U. S. A.I.D., a pilot program there directed by Columbia University and the University of London. He took special orientation courses at both universities prior to his teaching assignment.

Mrs. Mawdsley is leaving Logan Airport this Saturday on the first leg of a four-month trip around the world with her son.

Mrs. John Quincy Adams, the former Ruth Hutchins of Winchester, is accompanying Mrs. Mawdsley as far as Athens, both of them stopping en route in Southern France, Italy and Greece, then flying to Amman, Jordan, where her daughter, also a former Winchesterite, June Hutchins Ruppert, and her husband and family are living. June's husband, Farrell, is the U. S. deputy director of A.I.D. for Jordan. A highlight of their trip will be Christmas Eve and Christmas Day in Rome.

Mrs. Mawdsley and David will fly to Jordan to join them for a few days, then to the Holy Land for a few days. On January 12th, the Mawdsleys will board a freighter at Port Said, and will travel to Hong Kong via Djibouti, Penang, Port Swetenham, Singapore and Bangkok, taking about a month.

They plan 10 days in Hong Kong, three weeks in Japan where they hope to visit the Very Rev. Dr. Hayashi, father of the organist of the First Congregational Church here, who is the Dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Tokyo, from there they plan two weeks in Hawaii, and then to San Francisco, where they will pick up a car and spend a month driving home, arriving back in Winchester about the first of May.

The virgin birth of Christ Jesus will be explained in this Sunday's Bible Lesson at all Christian Science churches.

Readings from the Bible will include the angel's message to Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God" (Luke 1:35).

From the Christian Science textbook, these lines will be read: "The illumination of Mary's spiritual sense put to silence material law and its order of generation, and brought forth her child by the revelation of Truth, demonstrating God as the Father of men" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 29).

The Lesson-Sermon is entitled: "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?"

Living With Your Heart

At least half of our male population over the age of 45 has significant narrowing of the coronary arteries.

In the light of this fact, how does one determine the part played by 50 years of normal living as against a decade of, say, lifting milk cases?

This is a problem which continually plagues labor, management, workmen's compensation officials worksmen's compensation officials and the courts. There has been an increasing tendency to warp workmen's compensation into overall coverage for disease, a development disturbing to much of the medical profession, which is inextricably involved in the situation.

This is particularly so in the field of heart disease, where existence and acceleration of sickness are rooted in causes where the doctor still must deal in the inexact field of probabilities, despite intensive research by our Heart Associations.

Although the step from aggravation of pre-existing disease by employment to blaming the job for the initiation of heart disease seems a long one, there is a tide running in this direction. Massachusetts, among other states, has a "Heart Law" applying to certain categories of public employees, in which development of heart disease is presumed to be related to the job.

This permits retirement by virtue of "accidental" disabliity, with special pension privileges. Incidentally, North Carolina has found such a law unconstitutional.

The fact is that coronary disease is present in all occupations and such evidence as exists indicates that hardworking, physically active men are less susceptible than loafers or those in sedentary jobs. There is no basis for the belief that any kind of work makes one more liable to the development of cardiovascular degeneration than any other.

It seems impossible to isolate the stresses of a job from those existing during the other 16 hours of the day . . . or to believe they can be worse than the stress of having no job at all.

There is, however, a simultaneous trend in the opposite direction: workmen's compensation litigation is often avoided by the re-employment of those who have had heart attacks.

Consolidated Edison has a cardiac driving an emergency truck and some handle cable underground.

At Eastman Kodak, 95 per cent of those able to work after a heart attack return to their old jobs.

Many industries have found this policy superior to the transfer of heart victims from challenging to light-duty jobs, where they feel put on the shelf.

The trend has been a happy one, because it has demonstrated the fact that most cardiacs can work successfuly, and it has reduced workmen's compensation claims for management.

The evils of the trend toward classifying heart trouble as job-related are obvious: labor tries to convert the law into a sickness and disability insurance scheme; management fears to hire older workers or cardiacs; the medical profession is squarely in the middle; and only the lawyers profit.

If claims for aggravation of pre-existing heart disease are to remain in the field of litigation, I would offer the following suggestions:

No type of work, physical or mental, causes atherosclerosis, coronary artery disease, or high blood pressure.

Each case should be considered on its scientific merits. Something unusual in the employment, followed directly by heart failure, is the only situation in which a causal relationship may be suspected.

The testimony of doctors must be as scientific and objective as possible.

Lawyers should remember their broader social obligations in aiding the employment of older workers and heart patients. Joblessness is one of the most heartbreaking situations of all.

The caridac is often physically able to work.

Labor and management should realize that blaming the job for a heart attack is not the way to relieve an unfortunate situation.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

At this Christmas season, the stores are bulging with nice gifts. And I've noticed an interesting trend — the tendency to "personalize" gift items.

An ad on luggage, for example, said "three initials free"—your luggage is personalized.

A bank, too, points out the distinction of "personalized checks." A store selling billfolds offers to stamp the "name on in gold." A builder's supply firm features a fancy name plate for a mailbox, or for use near the front door of a home.

While Christmas shopping, the emphasis on "personalizing" articles made me think of insurance. Each family's situation is different. No two families own exactly the same things, nor live exactly like another. And every business involves special risks and is operated differently from other businesses. That's why Insurance should be "Personalized" to your own needs and conditions. Doesn't that sound logical?

One more logical, yet personal, thought is this: We wish each and every one of you a "personalized" MERRY CHRISTMAS and the best of good fortune and happiness in the coming New Year.

St. Mary's Holy Name Turkey Festival Successful

The annual turkey festival of the St. Mary's Holy Name Society was held at the Parish Hall on last Wednesday night with an encouraging number of about 250 in the audience.

The more than 160 prizes to be distributed during the course of the evening were on display on the platform and the excellent decorative appearance caught the eye of all in attendance as they entered the hall.

Chairman Gregory Sacca did a magnificent job of preparing for the affair and lost no time in making many people, young and old, happy that they participated. As the program got rolling the "fever" caught on and those prizes were highly welcomed by all winners as all can come in handy on the Christmas table.

During intermission time president John MacDonald welcomed and thanked all for attending. He explained that the proceeds are to be used to assist in giving the opportunity to some boys and girls to further their education if they qualify for the Holy Name Scholarship.

Rev. Fr. Martin Dolphin, the spiritual director of the Holy Name, and co-chairman Gregory Sacca and Leo Roche wish to extend their thanks to all who attended the affair. Thanks are also extended to the fine working committee of Fred Fiumara, Frank Antonuccio, John MacDonald, Frank Provinzano, Richard Hines, Vito Giarizzo, James Henry, John Looney, Bernard Delorey, Vincent Erhard, Ed Sanford, George Ross, Ernest Cantella, Hugh Fay, Robert Costello, Gene Rotondi and John Fitzgerald.

"Christmas For The Duchess"

Friends and families of the Nonagon group of the First Congregational Church are invited to attend a Christmas Play on Sunday, December 22, at 7:30 p.m. in Chidley Hall.

Their two-act comedy, "Christmas for the Duchess" is under the direction of Mrs. James Hollinshead, and included in the cast will be: Anne Rozelle, Nancy Millican, Terry Hessler, Debbie Ericson, Joyce Kell, Betsy Hollinshead, David Andresen, Paul Robinson, William Canfield and Riddy Sawyer.

Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Harold Pyne and her committee. There will be a small admission charge for use by the Service and Benevolence Committee.

An excellent study help, world replogle globe, including record of Mr. World. At the Winchester Star.

Forum Carolling And Dancing To Mark Holidays

This Saturday evening the annual Mistletoe Dance will be held in Chidley Hall. It is a semi-formal party and for several years has been a colorful highlight of the holdiays for high school young people. Music will be furnished from 8 p.m. to 11. Arrangements are in charge of the co-chairmen, Jeff Strout and Kandy McConnell, of the social committee. Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Pyne will be chaperones.

On Christmas eve at 7 p.m. Forumites will gather at the church to go about town to sing carols at the homes of shut-ins. The buses will return to the church where a social hour will be held around the fireplace in Chidley Hall, with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Keppler, Forum superintendents, acting as hosts. Later that evening, Forumites will attend the Eve Service in the church where the Forum Choir will sing.

Chadwick Is Named To Planning Council For Greater Boston

Representative Harrison Chadwick was formally sworn in as Winchester's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council on Monday morning in the Town Hall at 11 o'clock by Elsie Nelson, town clerk.

The ceremony followed the Board of Selectmen's appointment of Rep. Chadwick to the post at its regular Monday night meeting of December 16. The Selectmen, aware of Rep. Chadwick's personal interest in the planning functions of the council—he was the originator of the bill which led to the State's creation of the special planning agency—unanimously voted to have Rep. Chadwick fill the important post.

The appointment was made by authorization of Governor Endicott Peabody, who requested the Town's executive board to name a local citizen to serve with nearly 50 other city and town representatives in the vital task of planning for the entire Metropolitan Boston Complex. Each member of the council is appointed to serve for a term of three years.

In the late 1940's and early 1950's there were several spasmodic but unsuccessful attempts to have the state create a regional planning agency. In the fall of 1955, Rep. Chadwick delivered an address before the Boston College School of Business Administration in which he spoke about "The Missing Link," and promised to file a bill to establish a regional planning council. At that time, Boston was the only one of the 12 large U. S. metropolises which had no area planning agency.

He filed such a bill in the 1956 Legislative session, but it was turned down. Again he filed in 1958 and received more support, but it failed to pass. While support for such an agency grew with each filing of the bill, nevertheless, it was defeated in the 1959, 1960, 1961 and 1962 Legislatures.

The bill creating the Metropolitan Area Planning Council was passed and signed, after seven attempts, on August 26, 1963. (This State Agency is not to be confused with the Boston Area Planning Project—to which the Winchester Planning Board sends a representative, which was created last summer as a department under the Mass Transportation Commission to study transportation planning within the Greater Boston region.)

The Metropolitan Area Council will operate on funds supplied by the Federal Government, which for several years has offered 50 per cent financial assistance for urban-suburban regional planning as an incentive for more encompassing cooperative planning in providing needed public services and increasing the efficiency of planning land uses, and by a 50 per cent assessment on the approximately 50 cities and towns participating in the council — all those which are members of any of the three Metropolitan Districts: sewage, water, or parks.

The total dollar provisions for the council must not exceed by law, however, an excess of 10 cents per capita rate figured on the popoulation of the region encompassed. Thus, Wincehster's share would not exceed an estimated $1,000 a year when figured within the region.

Rep. Chadwick described the council as a full state agency in so far as it is both a creation and extension of the State Government, much as the Registry of Motor Vehicles, Department of Banking and Currency and others are state departments.

Rep. Chadwick said Father W. Seavey Joyce has been designated as temporary chairman of the council until its first meeting early in 1964, at which time permanent officers will probably be elected and an executive council appointed to hire a staff of experts as needed in the various professional fields of planning.

Although the decisions of the Metropolitan Area Council will be strictly advisory and carries no authoritative power as such, nevertheless, opinions rendered by it will undoubtedly bear tremendous weight.

Schools Reopen Thursday, Jan. 2

The public schools have been on Christmas vacation one week tomorrow; but they all reconvene again on Thursday, January 2, at regular morning hours.

Due to the closeness to the end of the week, some parents have requested restatement of the opening date of the winter term. It is a week from today.

PART OF ANNUAL CROWD OF OVER 300 CAROLLERS AT COMMON ON CHRISTMAS EVE

1963: A Year Of Controversy, Construction In Winchester

1963. This was the year that was...in Winchester a year of controversy: the more than three year long dispute over zoning land use at Mahoney's Rocky Ledge Farm was climaxed by an Appeal Board granting of a building permit; the wrangle between the Town, the Boston and Maine Railroad and Construction Machine Corporation over the upkeep and maintenance of the Wedgemere Depot, which still is in the process of being resolved, although progress has been made; The Town Meeting disputes over the overtime at the Incinerator, the debate over whether to build a West Side Fire Station, and the question of whether the Town should establish a Public Works Department in lieu of the several service departments.

1963. This was the year that was...in Winchester a year of accomplishment: the firefighters won their battle to reduce their work week from 56 to 48 hours; the center section of the Town Hall basement was renovated; the Town Hall tower was repaired when it was found to be unsafe; the Park Department installed an underground irrigation system beneath the Common; a new Memorial Honor Roll was built beside the Town Hall to honor the Town's veterans; Chapter 90 Ridge Street construction was furthered; and the Town accepted and filled the post of Town Comptroller.

1963. This was the year that was . . . in Winchester a year of construction: with the completion of the Trust Company's new wing; the dedication of the newly finished Hospital addition; the building of the Station Cleaners on Swanton Street; the new Kirsten Travel Agency office; the new Waterfield Street Bootery, Hair Designer, and Barber and Camera Shops; the new Joy Chinese Restaurant; the new Anderson's Store; the completely remodelled McCormack's, the remodelled fronts on the Winchester Shoe Hospital, Harold's Shoe Salon, and others on Main Street; and other face-liftings around town.

1963. This was the year that was . . . in Winchester a year of planning; the Planning Board now has a representative on the Boston Regional Planning Board, under the supervision of the Mass. Transportation Committee; Rep. Chadwick has been appointed Winchester's representative on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, a newly created State planning agency for the Greater Boston area authored by Rep. Chadwick himself; a new Advisory Committee on Home Rule was established to study and report to the Town on State-local relationships; a Conservation Commission study committee was created, which may lead to conservation planning in Winchester: a Permanent Building Committee was established, which, theoretically, will better the planning and efficiency of community building projects; a Transportation Committee was created to study the transportation needs within the Town.

1963. This was the year that was . . . in Winchester a year of sadness: the Town experienced its first fire death in 23 years with the passing of an elderly citizen in a house fire, followed by a child's death due to fire; the Town mourned the sudden passing of its re-

Mrs. Manzie New Water and Sewer Registrar, Clerk

Olcott L. Hooper, chairman of the Water and Sewer Board, has just announced the appointment of Mrs. Janet E. Manzie of 809 Main Street, to be Registrar and Clerk of the Department.

Mrs. Manzie will fill the vacancy left by the recent death of C. Norman Noonan.

Mrs. Manzie was born in Winchester and is a graduate of the Winchester High School, class of 1932. She went to work for the town-even before graduation as an assistant in the Library. She worked there until 1943, holding in turn the positions of circulation and catalogue librarian.

She left the employ of the town at that time but returned to employment with the Water and Sewer Board in 1953 as senior clerk. She has just this year completed 25 years of service with the town.

Winchester's Christmas Celebrated In Churches Carol Sing, Giftgiving

The crescendo of shopping which built to climax on Monday evening and defied the storm on Tuesday, quieted on Tuesday evening as citizens turned to their homes and to their churches.

The hard working highway crews contributed their share to the holidays by keeping Winchester passable and relatively clear after the big storm. Winchester was white but weary come Christmas eve.

The proper focus of Christmas, thoroughly set in all the town's churches on Christmas Sunday, led many of the citizenry back into church for Christmas Eve and midnight services.

From every chancel this week has come a relighting of the glory of the birth of Christ in music. Organs, choirs, soloists and brass quartets have told it in words and harmonies written over the years from Pergolese and Bach down through Ralph Vaughan Williams and Randall Thompson. Carols from France, Norway, Russia, Italy, Negro spirituals and contemporary native works have been prepared and presented by youth choirs and experienced soloists.

All of the enrichments of Christian worship accumulated over the ages have played a part in the churches of the many denominations.

Town's Reserve Fund Of $70,000 Down To $17,453

The 1963 annual Town Meeting last March appropriated $70,000 to be set aside for Reserve Fund contingencies to be administrated by the Finance Committee for use in extraordinary or unforeseen emergencies. Of this amount, the same as appropriated for the Reserve Fund in 1962, $52,547 had been spent by the end of November—leaving $17,453 still available, of which $8,533 has already been spoken for and earmarked for use—leaving a mere $8,920 balance in the Town's reserve account.

Each year it is interesting to note where these funds have gone and for what "extraordinary or unforeseen emergencies" they have been used. Some critics argue that more money should be appropriated for the Reserve Fund so there won't be any emergency overdrafts at the end of the year, as there were the past three years; conversely, other critics say a large Reserve Fund invites town departments to overspend and simply dip into the reserves. In either case, unforeseen emergencies or not, the Reserve Fund is depleted to the bottom of the bin almost every year...with the Finance Committee (an appointed body) determining which departments or accounts shall receive the final precious reserve dollars.

The expended Reserve Fund money for 1963 has gone to: Town Hall tower repair ($10,500); school lunch ($9,500); highway ($5,400); pensions ($5,278); veterans benefits ($5,000); snow and ice removal ($4,000); public assistance, or welfare ($3,018); cemetery ($2,500);

Jaycee Christmas Tree Collection Saturday, Jan. 4

The Winchester Junior Chamber of Commerce has scheduled its annual Christmas tree pickup for Saturday, January 4.

As in past years, all Winchester families are strongly urged to take advantage of this unique opportunity to have their Christmas trees disposed of safely and conveniently. Jaycee members participating in the pickup will gather behind the Town Hall at 8:30 a.m. on the morning of January 4. Trucks will leave immediately for initial tree pickups and will make continuous round trips to the town dump until every street in the entire community has been covered.

Residents should leave their trees out early, in plain sight, next to the street curbing. Time will not permit backtracking to pick up trees that are put out late. Last year an estimated 2000 trees were collected from all parts of the town.

As part of this year's Christmas tree pickup, the Jaycees are soliciting voluntary contributions of 25 cents for each tree collected. Each 25-cent contribution should be placed in an envelope and tied securely to the trunk of the tree. The Jaycees will turn over all proceeds to the Winchester Home and Garden Club and to the Estates Home and Garden Club.

These organizations, in turn, will use the money to plant new trees and shrubs around town and thus make the community a more beautiful place in which to live. "Your tree to replace a tree" has been chosen as this year's pickup slogan.

Winchester Fire Chief I. Francis Amico points out that old and dried-up Christmas trees are an

Town Officials' Travel Ceiling On Expenses Set

Earlier this month the Board of Selectmen established a new policy for travel by town officials outside of the Commonwealth, setting a new maximum of $150 reimbursement for round-trip expenses.

The departments under the Selectmen's jurisdiction, Police and Fire Departments, Town Comptroller, and Civil Defense, are now under this new ceiling on travel.

On December 10, the Finance Committee communicated with the Selectmen, saying that that board concurred with the Selectmen's allowable sums for out-of-state travel — and thus, by implication, brought many other town departments under the same travel restrictions, including the Public Library, the School Department, Town Treasurer and Clerk, Water and Sewer and Park Departments, and Public Welfare.

Until this month there had been no established policy on travel by town employees and officials. Each request for reimbursement was generally under an eight-cents-a-mile limitation, with eight to ten dollars a day for accommodations and seven to eight dollars a day for meals.

Property Taxes Pass $800 Million In Massachusetts

Property taxes in Massachusetts will pass the $800 million mark for the first time this year—up $28 million or 3.6 per cent since 1962. The total burden will exceed $156 per capita, an increase of some $6.

Despite the record levy of $803 million, this year's increase is one-quarter or some $10 million under the annual increases of the past several years.

Roughly two-thirds (207) of the 351 cities and towns have raised their tax rates. In 23 communities there were substantial increases of $10 or more—up to a $30 jump in Tyngsboro. Rates were down in 78 places (Winchester's down 40c) and stayed the same as last year in the other 65.

The 1963 average tax rate is $70.70. Though slightly above the 1962 figure of $70.09, this is still under the 1961 high of $71.36. The 39 cities continue to levy taxes on property at a higher rate than the towns. The average of their tax rates climbed to a new record of $76.90, an increase of $1.95.

The almost negligible rise in the average town tax rate is explained in part by the revaluations in some 13 towns with the resulting tax rate decreases of as much as $80 in one place. If these communities are excluded, the average rate for the towns would be at least $2 higher than last year.

Cities particularly held the line on new spending—going up 1 per cent compared to the town levy increase of 7 per cent. But the tax rate impact on the cities and larger communities is greater, not being offset by higher or new property values gained by the smaller communities.

Prospects are good for another below-average increase next year. The plan for accelerated collection of income and corporation taxes (from quarterly to monthly payments), adopted this fall by the Legislature as a budget-balancing device, is scheduled to produce a $20-million windfall of state-distributed taxes for cities and towns in 1964.

The one-shot bonus represents more than two-thirds of this year's low local tax increase and well over half of the regular increases of $35 to $40 million of recent years.

Another $7-million windfall is due from the same gimmick in 1965, but this smaller amount is unlikely to postpone further the steady rise in local taxes.

Individual's Tax Burden Fairness Tied to Locality

The over-all local property tax burden has been stabilized in the last seven years, but the fairness of the individual's load depends strictly on the community where he lives.

The effective or "full value" tax rates, based on State Tax Commission estimates of actual property values, range from $9.70 in Truro to $78 in Chelsea.

The average full value rate for the state is about $32.50—a rise of only $1.50 since 1956.

A healthy growth in the value of new and existing property has helped in large measure to hold down the average full value tax rate increase, despite a 50 per cent increase in the annual levy—from $525 million to $803 million.

But less than 20 per cent of the communities have an "average" tax rate.

The smaller and largely rural towns, where property taxes increased sharply between 1956 and 1961, have managed to hold the line or even reduce the total tax burden this year, thanks to this growth in the tax base.

Towns in the 3,000 to 10,000 population group, which includes some of the fastest growing suburban communities, have experienced a slightly above-average rise in taxes in the last two years.

The more than 100 towns with populations between 10,000 and 50,000 — accounting for half the state's population and most of the large suburbs — show remarkably stable tax burdens.

So most suburban and rural towns are coping with the pressures of rapid growth and expansion of services without reaching critically high property tax levels.

The city picture is drastically different. The cities continue to suffer from heavier demands for services, the move to the suburbs, and shrinking tax bases.

The spread between low rates in the smallest towns and high rates in the big cities has increased in the last seven years, accentuating the long-standing and acute problems.

These cities have not been able to meet demands for improved municipal services, or even to maintain existing service levels without increasing the already critical tax burdens.

A notable exception this year is Boston. An increase in property values, an economy-minded administration and the new sewer service charge has resulted in a drop in the estimated full value tax rate from its 1961 high of $67.10 to a still high $59.

The underlying problem of over-reliance on a single local tax source remains unsolved. Even in the "fortunate" 20 per cent of the communities with an average full value rate of $32.50, the burden is onerous if viewed this way:

The average is equivalent to a 3-percent sales tax on the full value of your home each year.

PERSPECTIVE: From Winchester Taxpayer's View

Theoretically, the State can tax an individual's person, property, and/or privileges. With the abolishing of the Massachusetts Poll Tax this year (a tax on all males over 21 years of age for the privilege of voting), only the individuals property remains taxed by the State: i. e., his real and personal property, including income.

Constitutionally, the tax burden within the Commonwealth is prescribed to be proportionally uniform on all classes of property. This means that all segments of the economy are supposed to be taxed on the same assessment basis, without differentiation within a city or town. However, in many cities and towns, as in the South, the principle of proportional taxation has been and is violated when differing ratios are attached to residential, commercial and industrial properties according to when and how they are assessed.

The Legislature, by statute says assessments must be on a true, or fair cash value. This means assessments should be based and rated on what a willing buyer will pay to a willing seller to purchase a piece of property. However, in almost every city and town, assesments are not true reflections of what fair cash values of properties are worth; and hence, the tax rating structure is wildly askew from what the actual values are.

Here in Winchester then, the taxpayer pays mostly according to his property holdings (land, building and contents, motor vehicles and boats). Two out of every three dollars spent by the Commonwealth's municipalities, or 66 per cent, is raised on and by the property tax. The other third is raised through individual and business income taxes, licenses, and service charges. A more equitable spreading of the burden of maintaining government through taxation is achieved in the City of Philadelphia, where individual and business taxes account for a large part of the city's income at 40 per cent. Property tax in Philadelphia is 38 per cent (almost half the Massachusetts rate), other taxes, license fees and other revenues account for 21 per cent, and service charges and other funds is one per cent. By taxing income more heavily than real property, Philadelphia taxes its citizens more according to their ability to pay than does Winchester, which places a heavy burden on the assessed value of their holdings.

A hypothetical example of how there is a lack of proportionality in Winchester's taxation of property will show precisely how the Constitutional tax principle is violated here—as it is in just about every other city and town in the State:

Consider two homes constructed in Winchester; the first in 1940 at a cost of $5,000, and the second in 1950 at a cost of $10,000. The Constitution explicity requires that both be proportionately assessed and taxed. But actual practice differs. Allowing for home values to increase in time (relative to construction cost, and with slight inflation), the first home might now be worth $10,000, and the second house about $20,000. However, disproportionately, the first home would probably still be assessed at its original $2,500, or thereabouts, while the second is assessed for something like its 1950 setting of $7,500, or about one-third more relative to the only doubled value, with commensurately higher taxes than would be its proportional share. The reason for the disproportions here is due to the fact that assessors do not normally reassess property after an original rate is set until the property changes hands, and a new owner claims title to the property. Thus, the 1940 homeowner pays according to a 1940 assessment, while the 1950 homeowner pays on 1950 assessment ratios.

A hypothetical example of how there is a lack of true or fair cash valuation on property in Winchester will show precisely how the statutory tax principle is violated here—as it is in every other city and town in the State with the exception of five towns (North Reading, North Brookfield, Randolph, Holbrook, and Maynard) where the actual tax rates are based upon a 100 per cent assessment ratio of the true, or fair cash value as established by the State Tax Commission:

Consider a 1938 home assessed at $5,225. In that year, with a $27.20 tax rate per thousand dollars of valuation, the property tax would have been $142.12. Twenty-five years later, in 1963, with a $70.40 rate on the original assessed valuation of $5,225, that homeowner pays a property tax of $367.84. However, if the Constitutional principle of proportional taxation were enforced, and giving that home a present day true, or fair cash value (again, as determined by the State Tax Commission, an objective and independent evaluator judging upon current standards of value as a prospective buyer or seller would see that house's value), the house would probably be assessed today at $15,000, and the property tax would end up being something like $1,056!

Needless to say, if the whole Town were reassessed according to present day true or cash values, hundreds of persons living here now would be financially forced to leave town, especially older folk living on limited incomes, and those younger couples who might have overextended their budgets a bit to buy a home (or mortgage) in Winchester. Also, possibly, some of the smaller businesses might be forced to move out because the commercial property tax "overhead" would be greater than the business could manage. The neighboring town of Lexington faced just such a problem when it was forced to raise its property tax assessment ratio to the high percentage of valuation it now employs . . hundreds of families and several

(1) THE ASSESSMENT RATIO is the ratio of the local valuation of taxable property to the full market value of such property as estimated by the State Tax Commission and reported in House Document No 3303, April 1963.

(2) THE ESTIMATED TAX RATE AT FULL VALUE is the rate at which taxes would be levied if property were assessed at its estimated full market value (i.e., "What a willing buyer would pay to a willing seller").

(3) THE PER CAPITA DIRECT TAX is the total tax assessment in 1963 on real and personal property and polls divided by the 1960 population in households as reported by the U. S. Bureau of the Census.

Paul N. Maiullari

Paul N. Maiullari of 19 Holland Street, a retired carpenter and resident of Winchester for over 45 years, died Saturday, December 21, at his home after several months of failing health.

Mr. Maiullari was a native of Italy. He was a carpenter by trade and for 20 years worked as a carpenter and maintenance man at the J. O. Whitten gelatin company plant on Cross Street. Leaving Whitten's, he had his own business, from which he retired three years ago because of failing health.

Mr. Maiullari was a member of the Christopher Columbus Society and of the Ciacola O Perrio Torresi Society of Boston.

He leaves his wife, the former Lucy M. Peluso; two sons, Harold of Winchester and Anthony Maiullari of Stoughton; four daughters, Mrs. Lawrence (Mary) Orsillo of Winchester; Mrs. Leonard (Rosalie) Champa of Billerica; Mrs. John (Anna) Lisacki of Woburn; and Mrs. Samuel (Lucy) Roberto of Burlington; also twenty three grandchildren. He was also father of the late Paul H. Maiullari of Winchester. There are two brothers, Guy, of Winchester, and Frank N. Vincenza, living in Italy.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning from the Lane Funeral Home with solemn requiem high Mass celebrated at St. Mary's Church. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

William B. Warner

William Birdwhistle Warner, a former resident of this town, died recently in Evanston, Illinois, Hospital. He was a graduate of Winchester High School and Dartmouth College.

He had been in and out of the hospital for several years with a heart ailment. He died from the strain of an operation.

Mrs. Catherine Shinnick

Mrs. Catherine Shinnick of 556 South Border Road, widow of John D. Shinnick, a long time member of the Winchester Highway Department, died Saturday December 21, at the Woburn Nursing Home, where she had been since last August. Previously she had been living with her daughter, Mrs. Agatha Tully on South Border Road.

Mrs. Shinnick was born July 5, 1885, in County Cork, Ireland, but had lived for half a century in Winchester and was widely known among older residents of the town. She was a member of St. Mary's Sodality and of the Guild of the Blessed Mother.

Besides Mrs Tully, she leaves two sons, Jeremiah, of Michigan; and Edward C. of Woburn; and three daughters, Mrs. Margaret Chaplin of Houston, Texas; Mrs. Katherine Conkling of New Jersey; and Mrs. Virginia Curran of Beverly; fourteen grandchildren, and a sister, Miss Frances Lucey of Brookline.

The funeral was held Monday morning from the Costello-Moffett Funeral Home. High Mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Mary's Church. Interment was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Christmas

The young people in town, out of schools as of the end of last week, have been drawn to the centre to shop as well as kept busy with home chores and the shovels

As the servicemen and women, college students, aunts, uncles and grandparents came into town for the holidays the myriad preparations, the tired feet and the ragged tempers that went before began to make sense and Winchester found itself ready again to joyfully celebrate that world-wide day of wonder known as Christmas.

Taxpayer's

businesses eventually ended up having to move to other towns. Such an event would be a tragedy of no mean consequences, and this is one reason why Massachusetts' cities and towns have become generally inured in the system as it evolved.

The tax rate in Winchester is set by the Board of Assessors, a group of three salaried officials elected for terms of three years and supervised by the State Commission on Taxation.

After Town Meeting, the Assessors know the total of planned expenditures and the estimated receipts and available funds for the coming year. After all items of town income have been subtracted from expected total expenditures, the remainder is the amount to be raised through real estate and personal property taxes. The tax rate on $1 assessed valuations is formulized to equal the amount to be raised divided by the total valuations of real and personal property. The result is multiplied by 1,000 to yield the offical rate per $1,000 property valuation. (Any taxpayer may appeal his assessment through the Assessors as a reviewing board, or through appeal to the County Commissioners or the State Appellate Tax Board.)

For example: this year the town needed $3,892,000 for governmental operation and services. With a valuation of $55,287,00 figured, the tax rate ended up at $70.40. However, if true valuations had been imposed, as figured by the State for Winchester at $153,575,000, the tax rate would then have been $25.80.

The above example provides another interesting point. The frequently heard idiom "The higher the tax rate in a community, the greater is the tax burden" is completely fallacious. The actual tax rate of a community is not any real reflection of the town's burden on real estate.

A look at the wide fluctuations in the per cent assessment ratios between towns [see chart (1) column] should show that the actual tax rates don't mean anything insofar as true or fair cash values are concerned. For example: Maynard, with 100 per cent assessment ratio, has fair true cash values on its $28 actual rate because it is equal to the tax rate at full value as established by the State. However, look at the difference between Concord and Wellesley, both with a 33 per cent ratio, but the difference in true fair cash values of $10.40 between the two, would be misinterpreted by anyone looking solely at the actual rates — which differ by as much as $31. In this case, the tax burden is heavier on residents of Concord than it is on residents of Wellesley, not because of the higher actual Concord rate, but because of the lesser full value rate in Wellesley.

According to the chart, then, a house constructed in Winchester at a cost of $10,000 would be valued at 35 per cent at $3,600. The exact same house in Wellesley would be valued at $3,300, in Lincoln at $2,200; and, going the other way, in Lexington at $9,300, and in Maynard at $10,000. It follows then, that the difference between Winchester's and Maynard's actual rates, with Winchesterites paying $43.60 more, is most significant when compared with the more real and important tax rate at full value table—which shows that in fact Winchesterites are paying $2.20 less in property taxes according to corrected or proper valuations than is Maynard, even though the actual tax rates are higher here.

Can You Identify These Massachusetts Cities?

A state is not made up entirely of cities, but in Massachusetts, 83.7 per cent of the people live in cities or towns. The state has 654.5 persons per square mile and ranks as the 3rd most densely populated state. Here are a few brief facts about some of the state's major cities taken from the extensive coverage of Massachusetts in the expanded 1963 edition of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia. Try to guess the names of these cities. Answers given at the end of this article.

1. All the traditions of this city are connected with the whaling industry. The Public Library lawn features the well-known Whaleman Statue. The Library has the largest and finest collection of whaling books and prints in existence, and the Bourne Museum exhibits a fully rigged whaling vessel. For many years this city was the principal whaling port of the world. In 1857 the city had 329 registered whaling ships. Soon after the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania in 1859, kerosene replaced whale oil as the main fuel for lighting, and the whaling industry fell off sharply.

2. This city was founded in 1629 under the Indian name Saugus. Its present name was adapted in 1632. Since early colonial days this city has been a shoemaking city: by 1700 almost every household had a shoeshop. When shoemaking machinery was introduced in 1848, this city became the nation's footwear center. Still a high-ranking footwear producer, it now also manufacturers many other things, such as electrical equipment, tanned leather and women's clothing. The city has more than 1,500 acres of parks and beaches. Here also the Mary Baker Eddy House marks the birthplace of Christian Science. One of America's first iron-works was built here in 1643.

3. This city, founded in 1822 by the Merrimack Manufacturing Company, is one of the oldest of the great American industrial cities, and was named for the man who originated cotton manufacturing in the United States. This city lost textile mills to the south in the 1920's; others closed after World War II. Yarn, thread, and fabric factories, however, remain the chief employers. Leather manufacturing, garmentmaking, printing, and publishing are other important industries. Its factories also turn out textile machines, electrical equipment, electrical appliances, and plastics. Two educational institutions located here bear the city's name. Artist James Whistler was born here and his home is now an art museum.

4. Although one of the most important manufacturing cities in New England, this city's chief fame is as a historical, educational and literary center. It was planned as the capital of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, but Boston was chosen instead. The first institution of higher learning in America was founded here in 1636. Many famous writers, teachers and scientists lived and worked here: James Russell Lowell, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Fiske, Louis and Alexander Agassiz, and Margaret Fuller. And it was here that George Washington took command of the colonial army.

5. The site of this city was first named Trimountaine for its three hills and came to be known as the Hub City. It acquired this nickname because it was the trade center of the early Massachusetts Bay Colony and roads from the surrounding towns led to it like the spokes of a wheel. Before and for a time after the Civil War the nation's chief poets, novelists, essayists, historians, philosophers, and scientists lived in or near the city. Today it is one of the great educational, medical and research centers in the United States.

6. If any city can properly call itself the "cradle of invention," it is this one. Within 15 miles of the city's Municipal Building were born Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin; Erastus Bigelow, inventor of the carpet weaving machine; Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine; Lucius Knowles, who perfected the modern loom; and Draper Ruggles, Joel Nourse, and J. C.; Mason, who perfected the modern plow and devised many other improvements on farming implements.

7. This city is the center of a network of highways and branch rail lines. Its modern industries include meat packing, other food processing, printing, automobile assembly, and the manufacture of structural iron and steel and furniture. It was at this site that the first ship built in Massachusetts, "Blessing of the Bay," was launched in 1631.

8. Two travelers, an Englishman and an American, were looking out over the Rhine Valley from the tower of the Strasbourg cathedral. "Have you ever seen anything more beautiful?" exclaimed the American. "Only once," said the Englishman, "from the tower in — —, Massachusetts." "Why," said the amazed American, "I live there, but I have never seen that view." The view referred to can be seen from this city's 300 foot campanile tower. This city has made firearms since the United States Arsenal was established here during the Revolution. The city also makes machine tools, machinery, valves, chemicals, rubber goods, electrical equipment, motorcycles, sporting goods, and toys. Many insurance companies have headquarters here and Webster's Dictionary has been published here since 1847.

9. Since its first cotton mill was built in 1811, this city was one of the country's foremost cotton-goods centers until cotton mills began moving south. Since 1925 many new and varied industries have developed here. It now produces in addition to cotton goods, clothing, thread and yarn, rayon and silk fabrics, curtains, rope and twine, paper boxes, felt and straw hats, jewelry and artcraft metal products, luggage and washing machines. Fire swept through this city in 1843 and again in 1928. After the last fire a city plan was adopted and streets were widened.

Choir Surprises Mrs. Sanderson With a Party

The home of Mrs. Richard Bates at 1 Woodside Road presented a gay and festive appearance on Tuesday evening when the members of the Cymbaline Ladies Choir planned a surprise cocktail party for their director, Mrs. Veronica Sanderson.

She was greeted at the door by the Choir singing, "We Wish You A Merry Christmas." Then Dorothy Hall's husband, Stephen, took photographs of the group.

This happy evening was the climax of weekly rehearsals held at the Harrison Street home of Mrs. R. Sproul, who is the accompanist for the choir.

Recitals of carols have been given to St. Mary's Sodality of Winchester, and others, which included the Golden Age Club of Arlington and the Baptist Missionary Society, also of Arlington. The choir group will meet again on December 31.

News from The Registry Of Motor Vehicles

1. HOLIDAY GREETINGS

Registrar James R. Lawton today wished all Massachusetts motorists seasons greetings, with the hope that the joy and merriment of the season would not interfere with safe driving during the holiday period.

During the 11-day period, December 20 to December 31, 1962, 33 men, women, and children lost their lives in motor vehicle accidents.

"I think we have made definite progress for highway safety this year, and I believe that we can carry this progress through the Christmas season," he said.

Registrar Lawton pointed out that the fatality statistics for the State at the beginning of September, when the last semi-annual inspection began, showed 35 more deaths than for the same period in 1962. As of December 20, the State now has had two fewer deaths than in 1962.

2. CHANGE OF REGISTRATION PLATES

All motorists are reminded that the final time for use of 1963 registration plates is midnight, December 31, if the car is not registered for 1964.

If the car is not registered for 1963, 1964 registration plates should not be attached until January 1.

If the vehicle is registered for both years, 1964 plates may be put on during the period from noon December 31, to noon, January 1, however, evidence of registration for both years must be carried in the vehicle during the change-over period.

Governor Peabody and Registrar Lawton joined in asking service stations and garages throughout the State to remain open as long as possible during the change-over period.

Senior citizens and handicapped motorists are also urged to make arrangements now for the changing of number plates.

Motorists are further reminded that a few drops of penetrating oil placed now on nuts and bolts will facilitate their being taken off later. Such penetrating oil is available at garages and filling stations throughout the State. For those motorists unable to secure penetrating oil, it is suggested that they try to purchase a can of some other inexpensive oil that can be used on the day when license plates are taken off.

In response to many requests that the 24 hours for the change be expanded in future years, Governor Peabody has directed Paul Levenson, executive director of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee, to conduct a study of whether such a proposal should be included in the Governor's 1964 highway safety message.

Wednesday evening testimonial meeting at 8:00 o'clock

Reading Room, 5 Winchester Terrace (off Thompson Street). Open daily except Sundays and holidays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Sunday, December 29

The scientific nature of Christianity will be explored in next Sunday's Bible Lesson at all Christian Science churches.

Scriptural readings will include this verse from Isaiah (51:4): "Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people."

Selections from the denominational textbook will include these lines: "Our Master taught no mere theory, doctrine, or belief. It was the divine Principle of all real being which he taught and practiced" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 26).

The Lesson is entitled, "Christian Science."

NE Council Urges People's Support Of Goddard Statue

The New England Council urges all New Englanders to support a joint resolution filed in the House of Representative calling for the erection of a memorial to the late Doctor Robert H. Goddard, the father of American rocketry.

The resolution, which was filed by Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R-10th District, Mass.), calls for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to erect a bronze statue of the inventor in the vicinity of his first launchings in central Massachusetts.

"In this age of rocketry it is only fitting that we honor the man whose two 1914 patents were not only basic to the future of rocketry but led to the world's first liquid-fuel rocket flight from a farmyard in Auburn, Massachusetts, on March 16, 1926," said Gardner A. Caverly, executive vice president of the New England Council, "let all New Englanders support Congressman Martin's joint proposal to honor one of our most distinguished inventors."

Dr. Goddard was a professor of physics at Clark University, Worcester.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late John O'Donnell wish to express their sincere thanks and deep appreciation to relatives, friends and neighbors, who by their kind words of consolation and acts of kindness, helped to lighten the burden during our recent sorrow. Aid to Church School Education By Federal Government Criticized

"All church groups have the right to operate their own school systems," a national association head declared in a speech in Boston last spring, but warned, "they have no right to ask the public to pay for their preference."

Speaking to over 800 public school backers at an Education Rally in New England Life Hall, Dr. Glenn L. Archer, executive director of the national Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State (POAU), vigorously attacked all proposals for government aid to church run schools as "the gravest threat yet to our guarantees of free education and free religion."

The rally was sponsored by the Boston Chapter of the organization, and was supported by numerous groups and representatives of Boston area Protestant churches and the Boston Council of Churches. Rev. H. Newton Clay of the Crawford Memorial Church in Winchester was among those present.

Dr. Archer charged that "clerical forces are moving in on our public treasury," and that as a result, "this is the most critical period in the battle to support separation of church and state."

He singled out "the Roman Catholic hierarchy" as "the chief threat to the continued growth of our public school system and the desirable balance between religion and education.

In defense of this stand, Dr. Archer stated that the Roman Catholic Church is committed "to oppose any federal aid program for public schools that does not treat Roman Catholic schools as equal to the public schools."

"In March, 1961, the Roman Catholic Bishops," he said, "led by Cardinal Spellman, undertook to kill President Kennedy's program for public schools unless it included Church schools; and later the Cardinal succeeded in defeating the program." Dr. Archer quoted Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon as referring to the Cardinal's action as a "hold-up."

"The Catholic people have been invited to attend public schools free and without discrimination," Dr. Archer said "They cannot plead discrimination if they refuse the invitation."

Creeping Demands

Dr. Archer told the hundreds of public school supporters at that time that the proposals in Congress for government aid to church run colleges was no exception.

"Fortunately, our Supreme Court is standing firm for the separation of church and state. It deserves our praise for its clear-cut defense of the First Amendment," he said.

"But there is a real danger of creeping clerical demands on the public treasury by way of college aid," he said at that time. "We must look out for the deadly progression from college loans and grants to church colleges, then special grants, then general grants, then loans to parochial high schools, and then the deluge of a fragmented educational system on sectarian lines," he added.

Dr. Archer specifically scored the recent proposal of two Harvard professors for tax paid tuition grants to parents of children attending private and parochial schools. (Printed in Feb. 20 advertisement, "What Price Public Schools?" "Such a plan," he said, would foster corrosive competition between church-operated private schools, leaving free public education to die a painful death."

Dr. Archer concluded with an appeal to the audience to support all plans for a more vigorous free public school movement and lauded the Massachusetts Council of Churches for its recent "Message to the Churches" in this regard. (The MCC asked members "to continue to seek for ways of relating religion and education in the life of the child without doing it either through statutory religious observvances....or through widespread substitution of parochial for public schools.")

Courier Service, U. S. Gov't, Is It for You?

The prospect of commuting between multiple world capitals has enticed some of the more adventurous of our young college men into entering the diplomatic courier serivce.

A fictitious member of this small group of approximately 80 men has often been the modern hero of romantic novels of adventure and foreign intrigue. However, this is not quite the true picture of life in the service. What is true is that each of our diplomatic couriers does travel approximately 130,000 miles per year.

Diplomatic couriers are dispatched from three regional offices. To illustrate how much ground these men cover: Couriers assigned to the Frankfurt office travel throughout Europe, including the Iron Curtain countries, to the Middle East and to Africa. The men in the Manila office are responsible for the areas from Saudia Arabia in the west to New Zealand in the east, including the Asian continent. The third area to which couriers are assigned is Panama from whence they travel throughout the whole Western Hemisphere.

A frequently asked question is "What does a courier really do?" simply, a diplomatic courier carries and safeguards diplomatic mail and correspondence. This calls for constant arduous travel by air, train, and sometimes jeep. The courier insures that the diplomatic immunity of the material he carries is respected by the customs officials of all countries and that it is at all times protected from seizure, tampering or loss.

The next question usually is: "Who can apply for a diplomatic courier position?" A candidate must be between 25 and 31 years of age, have a college degree, and must have satisfied his military obligations. He must be a single male with no dependents, and he will be expected to remain single for at least his first year overseas. A minimum typing speed of 35 words per minute is also required. He must be in excellent physical condition and must be available for duty anywhere in the world.

Preference is given to those candidates who have had a minimum of six months travel or residence overseas. The starting salary is $5,060 per annum, plus allowances, for a minimum two-year tour of duty.

The hours are long, often meals are on a catch-as-catch can basis and sleeping accommodations are frequently the seat on a jet, but the position of diplomatic courier is always one of the most sought after in the U. S. government.

Although vacancies are infrequent, U. S. Department of State recruiters are always alert for a potential candidate seeking a career in the diplomatic courier service.

Applications for diplomatic courier positions should be made through the U. S. Civil Service Commission, U. S. Post Office and Courthouse Building, Boston.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

"LOST: ONE FARM." Would you believe a Lost and Found ad like that? Chances are you'd shout "impossible."

Yet every now and then in our insurance magazines we learn of people who have lost a farm, a home, a business, or most of their future earnings. Lost it just as surely as if the earth had opened its mouth and swallowed it. Lost it in a court decision involving a damage suit. Lost it as a result of too little liability insurance.

Admittedly, these losses are spectacular — even if unfortunate. But for every dramatic loss of this kind there are dozens of other cases in which someone, somewhere, suffers a small loss in EXCESS of his insurance coverage.

The thing that makes these cases "tragic" is not only the loss, but the fact that they are unnecessary. Large amounts of liability coverages are available at comparatively low cost.

A type of liability protection exists which just fits your own particular situation. And its available in adequate amounts. May we tell you more about it?

Editorials:

Foreign Aid Commitment

Nearly three years ago President Kennedy proclaimed a "decade of development" for the countries of the world. He emphasized an increase in living standards, an improvement of public services and above all an attitude combining self-help with mutual aid as effectively as possible. He acknowledged that the great part of the support for international improvement must come from highly developed Western nations, and particularly from our own.

Is this proving to be a hollow dream?

It looks that way.

As this paper goes to press, a weary, bored and not-too-Christmasy Congress is desperately struggling to pass some imitation of a foreign aid bill, under pressure as intense as the new Administration can apply. Tuesday morning the House approved a three billion dollar measure that is an insult to the late president's memory and an affront to the nascent power of President Johnson's government. For Kennedy requested $4.5 billion in fiscal and military aid in his 1963 appropriations message—aid we feel is entirely necessary to maintaining our commitments to both our allies and the underdeveloped nations of the world. Through long weeks of wavering and legislative logrolling, the House cut the figure to $3.5, then to $2.8 billion, approving the final appropriation by a 249 to 135 vote, while the Senate, stampeded by a nucleus of "liberals" led by Senator Wayne Morse, Democrat of Oregon, pruned their figure to $3.7, then to $3.27 billion. The Morse contingent, which had previously supported foreign aid almost without reservations, is now motivated by a desire to eliminate the "shocking waste" that is allegedly part of the program's operation. Republicans, with very few exceptions, are fighting to defeat, or failing that, delay even the vastly disappointing $3 billion compromise measure which a joint House-Senate committee decided on late last week. Typical of the prevailing attitude toward the measure is House Republican leader Charles A. Halleck's recent remark: "Why all the heroics? . . . I cannot for the life of me see why it suddenly becomes so necessary to pass this bill . . ." He called the performance of the Democratic leadership of the Senate "completely ridiculous."

No doubt, the whole concept of foreign aid is ridiculous to Mr. Halleck, and as well to Otto Passman, Democrat of Louisiana, the unbelievably powerful chairman of the House appropriations committee that mangled the bill in the first place. What is far more ridiculous and shameful to us is the whole Congressional attitude toward measures as vital and meaningful as the foreign aid appropriations bill: an attitude combining apathy, tight-fistedness and irresponsibility in about equal proportions.

Now the rationale for foreign aid has been discussed in these columns before, and it is not our intent to repeat those frequently repeated but frequently ignored arguments at this time. The real issues are not whether this Congress will somehow manage to produce a bill compatable with our international obligations—for quite obviously it won't—or whether the underdeveloped nations of the world will continue to drift into anarchy and dictatorship — for quite obviously they very well might. The broader questions are more interesting—what does this failure of the legislative will mean for the future of our policy-planning leadership?

It seems that in the last thirty years the responsibility for introducing active and constructive measures has fallen more and more upon the executive branch of our government. Congress, conversely, has recently become less and less of a prime mover in matters of domestic and international policy. Its treatment of the two most important pieces of legislation of the year, and possibly of the decade,—civil rights and the tax cut—bears witness to a deadly "wait-and-see" approach toward pressing problems. And this eleventh-hour fumbling of foreign aid, especially when viewed in the context of changing administrations, is the punch line to a very bad joke. There was a day when our legislature could transact its business in six or eight months, but the age of year-round sessions is evidently here to stay, and it's beginning to seem as if the effectiveness of a Congress is inversely proportional to the time it spends in session.

What is the problem? Why is Congress eternally locked in an outmoded system of responsibility that continues to vitiate its potential for constructive action? Only Congress can provide an answer, and only by an acute reassessment of its commitment to national progress. The immense power wielded by its senior members, the ability of key committees and even key chairmen to bottleneck legislation for months on end, the impotence and sterility of a body so directly responsible to its constituency that cannot take decisive action for fear of rocking the boat—all these are causes that may call for some reorganization of our present system. But changes are always gradual, badly obstructed and somewhat disappointing.

The future of foreign aid is very, very dark. A policy of giving, however cynically approached and materialistically managed, is never very popular. The receiver often resents it and the giver rapidly develops second thoughts about his openhandedness. Foreign aid is not a vote-getter, and the political bravery (or is it foolhardiness?) of this administration in backing the program may not be repeated in the future. Presidential prestige is not infinitely expendable; we would not be surprised if future adminitsrations allocated their prestige to more tangible goals. But foreign aid, as one political pundit remarked, is like the wheels on your car; you only know they should be there when they aren't.

In crises like the ones we face now, the only real solution is a rededication to progress—and such a rededication—to judge from the state of affairs as of Christmas 1963—is a long way off.

From The Editor's Desk

Meaningful New Year's Resolutions

Every New Year's Eve one hears the following comments and attitudes toward the traditional custom of every man's making of a resolution for the new year upcoming: "This year I'm going to resolve to do something significant, I'm going to . . .;" and "This year I'm just going to resolve to do something simple, like . . . (usually something inconsequential);" or, "This year I'm not going to resolve to do anything special, because . . . (last year's resolution couldn't be kept, or they can't think of anything to resolve)."

The interesting thing about a person's New Year's resolution is that it in many cases, barring the comedians who make a joke about the whole thing either to cover up a genuine resolution or because there is a lack of thought or effort to grow, mature, or improve upon something, it is a significant indication of someone's character, mental or emotional make-up.

For example: the person who declares he will do (change) something significantly has high ideals and at least is giving some thought to improving what exists at present; while the person who tepidly says he is going to do a little little something is lukewarm in either aims or resoluteness of drive; and the person who gives no thought to making the new year better in some way through some determination is usually someone who hesitates and fears to chart a plan for the future, and adjusts his living merely to the present, without providing for a better tomorrow.

Speaking of "tomorrow," and looking back over the events of 1963 as an experience from which new determinations for the year 1964 can be proposed, we can all make some significant resolutions.

First, as Americans, we can resolve that to be an American and to have the privileges and protection accorded by our citizenship involves more than just "talking American." It involves the living practice, day in and day out—where the true test of faithfulness and loyalty is argued and won or lost—of standing resolutely on the principles upon which this great Republic has grown and developed.

Second, as citizens of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, we can resolve to get behind those forces which are seeking to improve and better the State Government, instead of sitting back—as, unfortunately most of us do—and griping about what is wrong and not doing what is within our power to make things right.

Third, as citizens of Winchester, we can next year correct the despicable voting record we had in the last Town Election—with only 34% of the electorate voting. Here the grass roots of democracy lie, and it is here—as in every city and town—that democracy in America will live or die.

These are significant resolutions for the new year, and if every man were to abide by them, there would be fewer complaints about our government(s), and the people could then turn more of their attention upon governing themselves better, which, in retrospect on the civil rights issues, extremism which led to the assassination of our President, and other matters, could bear some thoughtful attention.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Lost in the frantic rush toward adjournment last week was an assessment of the very real accomplishments of the First Session of the 88th Congress. Despite a slow start and the deep shock of the tragic assassination of President Kennedy, Congress initiated a number of new programs of vital importance to the Nation.

EDUCATION

Education was high on the list of legislative priorities this year. Last spring, both Houses approved a program of assistance for education in the health professions. An expanded vocational assistance program soon followed and just before adjournment, President Johnson signed the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963 into law. The Act provides for grants to colleges and universities for the construction of classrooms, libraries, and laboratories and for the construction of cooperative graduate centers. Junior and community colleges were given special attention in the measure. At the moment the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is preparing to put the program into operation shortly after the first of the year. Early in January the Department will conduct a series of meetings all over the country to acquaint higher education officials with the procedures for benefiting from the program which will be administered to a large extent at the state level.

Manpower retraining also received a significant boost in this session. Young people and unskilled unemployed may look forward to a New Year of promise with expanded and improved training programs scheduled to begin promptly.

One of the most important legislative breakthroughs came on a comprehensive program to improve our treatment and prevention of mental illness. One of the last acts of the House last week was to vote to provide funds for the construction of community mental health centers and for expanded programs to determine the causes of mental retardation. The community centers represent an important departure from traditional approaches to the treatment of the mentally ill.

Despite these accomplishments, the 88th Congress has not finished its work and will return in January with a docket full of important legislative matters. Although the House passed a tax reduction and reform measure in late September, the Senate has not yet acted. Senate Finance Chairman Harry Byrd has indicated that the tax reduction, when enacted, will be retroactive to January 1, 1964.

Civil rights is still a difficult legislative problem. Chairman Smith of the House Rules Committee has promised to hold hearings on a resolution to bring a comprehensive civil rights bill to the Floor immediately after Congress reconvenes. Estimates vary on the length of the hearings, but present indications are that the full House will have an opportunity to consider this important legislation before the end of January.

John J. Dolan Retires From Police Force

Completing 32 years and seven months as a police officer in the service of the Town of Winchester, Lieutenant John J. Dolan of 341 Washington Street retires next week, effective January 1.

Appointed to the force in May of 1931, Lieutenant Dolan is known among his fellow officers as a dedicated law enforcement man. He was one of several officers officially commended in June of this year for the fine police work involved in apprehending a suspect in a local burglary. He was appointed a sergeant in 1949.

Lt. Dolan was born in Winchester February 10, 1908. He was educated in the Winchester schools and attended Franklin Union in Boston after graduating from WHS.

Prior to joining the force he was associated with Nightingale and Childs Co., Boston, manufacturers of insulation. He lives here with his wife, Madeline.

Christmas in Alps For Peter Kirk

Peter Kirk of 14 New Meadows Road has left by plane for a holiday ski trip in the Kitzbuehel Mountains deep in Austria. Mr. Kirk will spend Christmas and New Year's in a resort in the mountains, and hopes to work in a visit with relatives in Denmark whom he has never met.

Mr. Kirk is associated with the Sears Roebuck Company. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kirk.

His holiday tour was planned by Mr. Kirsten of the local travel agency.

THE NEGRO PROTEST

James Baldwin, Malcolm X, Martin Luther King talk with Kenneth B. Clark

Biting, piercing words. So might be described in the breifest possible manner what the three above Negroes had to say to Kenneth Clark and the American people in a series of TV talks earlier this year.

Baldwin had just come from his talk with Robert Kennedy when his interview was given. "I'm terrified at the moral apathy, the death of the heart, which is happening in my country . . . this means that they have become in themselves moral monsters."

Baldwin believes that Malcolm X and the Black Muslim movement is the only movement in the country that can be called grass roots. Baldwin states that the Black Muslim movement is much more sinister than the appeal of Martin Luther King because it is much more effective. The problem, to him, is to eliminate the conditions which breed the Muslim movement.

In commenting about Martin Luther King, he notes that there are some things which King cannot do. "Martin's only one man . . . There are . . . lots of black people . . . who 'don't go to church no more,' and don't listen to Martin, and who anyway are themselves produced by a civilization which has always glorified violence unless the Negro has the gun so that Martin is undercut by the performance of the country."

Clark, in interviewing Mister Malcolm X, a leader of the Black Muslim movement, brings out the bitter experiences of Malcolm X's background. The home of his father, a minister and black nationalist, was burned twice, in Omaha and in Michigan. His father was later killed by white people.

It was in prison that he learned of Elijah Muhammad, and it is to him that he attributes all his knowledge and learning. Malcolm X states that "after a so-called Negro in prison trys to reform and become a better man, the prison authorities are more against that man than they were against him when he was completely criminally inclined, so this is again hypocrisy."

The appeal of the Black Muslim movement is the religious message it sends into the Negro community, which rehabilitates the thinking of the people and makes them conquer the habits and vices and evils to which they have succumbed.

Malcolm X—"Mr. Muhammad teaches us to love each other, and when I say each other—love our own kind." But Malcolm X, in criticizing Martin Luther King, says, "Any Negro who teaches other Negroes to turn the other cheek is disarming that Negro," and, "Everything in nature can defend itself, and is right in defending itself except the American Negro."

Complete separation, not only physical separation, but moral separation is the goal of the Muslims.

Martin Luther King in his interview states that he has been arrested 14 times and been in 8 different jails.

King—"Non-violent direct action is a method of acting to rectify a social situation that is unjust . . . I think that non-violent resistance is the most potent weapon available to oppressed people in their struggle for freedom and human dignity . . . It is necessary also to follow the love ethic which becomes a force of personality integration."

In commenting on Malcolm X, King remarks that "there is a deal great of difference between non-resistance to evil and non-violent resistance." King feels that there is confusion on this point. "We do a great deal in terms of teaching both the theoretical aspects of non-violence as well as the practical application." There are workshops for learning the techniques for adults and children.

That the Administration in Washington needs to understand more about the depths and dimensions of the problem is another of King's beliefs. The nation can't afford a slow movement in the Negro's struggle for equal rights.

Report To Massachusetts

By Sen. Leverett Saltonstall

Saltonstall Asks Small Business Tax Amendments

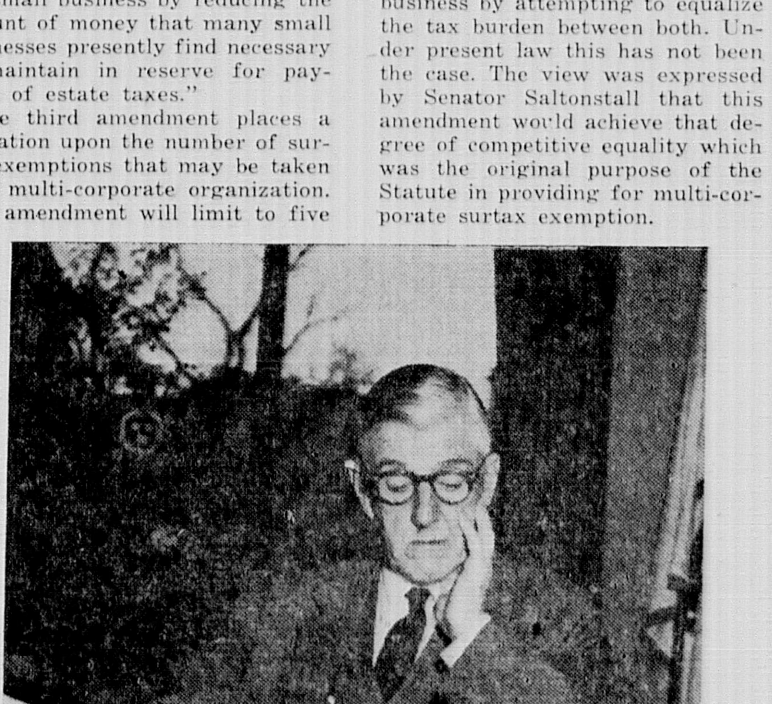
Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R. Mass.) has co-sponsored three amendments to the Tax Revenue Bill currently being considered by the Senate Finance Committee. These amendments are intended to provide needed tax relief for the small businssman.

The senior Bay State Republican stated: "These amendments are essential to the welfare of the small businessman if he is to compete successfully in the Nation's economy. I believe these amendments to be equitable and necessary for the welfare, prosperity and growth of small business."

The first of these amendments to the tax bill provides for an increase in the present surtax exemption from $25,000 to $50,000. Senator Saltonstall stated: "This amendment is essential in order to provide small business with the necessary capital for expansion. Frequently, small business encounters difficulty in obtaining needed capital and investment credits. This amendment is intended to provide for increased liquidity of capital."

The second amendment would liberalize Section 6161 of the Internal Revenue Code which provides for a 10 year period within which payment of estate taxes on a family business can be made. Saltonstall expressed the view that: "This amendment should ensure increased availability of capital to the small business by reducing the amount of money that many small businesses presently find necessary to maintain in reserve for payment of estate taxes."

The third amendment places a limitation upon the number of surtax exemptions that may be taken by a multi-corporate organization. This amendment will limit to five the number of surtax exemptions that may be taken by multi-corporate organization. The rationale behind this amendment is to restore the original purpose for which the multi-corporate exemption was created in the present tax structure which was to achieve a greater degree of competitive equality between small business and large business by attempting to equalize the tax burden between both. Under present law this has not been the case. The view was expressed by Senator Saltonstall that this amendment would achieve that degree of competitive equality which was the original purpose of the Statute in providing for multi-corporate surtax exemption.



"THIS YEAR'S BUDGET has not yet completely passed the Congress," says Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) as he studies the 1190- page volume. The ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee discusses the effect of the delay on the $98 billion budget in his current report to his Massachusetts constituents.

Urban Renewal —

Can The State Afford It?

by Wendell H. Woodman

New England Newspaper Service

(First in a Series)

Six years ago, the State Legislature put on the statute books a new spending formula. The bills begin to come due this year (for many decades to come), and indications are that Massachusetts has christened a spending spiral to compete with pensions and public welfare.

To the very modest tune of $19.219.81 the state now is realizing payments to cities and towns of one-sixth the cost of urban renewal projects.

Only two programs in Massachusetts have been closed by the Federal government's Housing and Home Finance Agency. The state under its own law has agreed to pick up a sizable share of the bill — only $19,219.81 to be sure — but with the same amount payable for those two projects every year for the next 19 years.

Before this year ends, about 10 more urban renewal projects will be completed. Another 13 will be finished in 1964. And six more programs will be completed in each of the following years through 1967.

In short, the Commonwealth is now pledged to pick up one-sixth the tab of urban renewal projects estimated to cost nearly $300 million.

The approximate cost of the two urban renewal projects now being paid for is $1.5 million.

By the end of this year another $11 million will be added.

In 1964, projects totaling $15 million will be completed.

Another $24 million in projects will be closed out in 1965.

Some $22.5 million more will be added from the Federal coffers in 1966, and in 1967 the Federal investment for one year will hit a peak of $29.5 million.

Projects in the works, but not yet given a completion date, have $85,850,633 set aside in Federal reservations.

Cities and towns are liable for paying one-third of each project, a sum not included in the Federal estimates, and Massachusetts has agreed to pick up one-half the local burden on each program.

The state's payments to cities and towns will be spread over a 20-year period at five per cent reimbursement each year.

Like so many cost-spiral programs the Commonwealth has undertaken, there is no likelihood that spending will level off — there is only the certainty that the state's burden will increase substantially year after year.

Two developments have taken shape since the state law was enacted a few years ago, both of which offer a serious challenge to the state's financial ability to meet its urban renewal obligations.

First, the law was put on the books without benefit of experience or foresight. In 1956 and 1957, it appeared that urban renewal programming in Massachusetts was thinning out. Only a few projects had been approved since 1950, none in 1956 and 1957.

But by the end of the decade, Washington had approved 21 projects in Massachusetts since 1950.

The real boom in urban renewal here was marked in 1960. The Federal government approved 20 projects in the state and stamped reservations on some $70 million to finance them.

In 1961, Congress liberalized the 12-year old Housing Act—the pilot program under which all this money is being spent — and it drafted the Housing Act of 1961.

The new law opens the urban renewal field to everything from public buildings and transportation to new trees and sewerage systems.

In that same year, seven more projects were approved in Massachusetts, followed by another 10 in 1962.

While it is far too early to predict how many millions will be involved in Massachusetts under the 1961 Act, the cold fact of spending under the state formula guarantees economically that the state will be obligated to spend more millions every year as the cumulative payments head toward heaven and beyond.

No interest has been taken in how the state is to meet its urban renewal payments in the future; that the formula be reviewed has never been suggested.

A payment of little more than $19,000 is attractive — until one realizes that the total state liability now is about $50,000,000.

With many small towns being awarded planning and survey grants by HHFA, there is no doubt that urban renewal now encompasses metropolitan renewal, regional renewal and rural renewal In well-to-do and small communities throughout the state dozens of redevelopment authorities are springing into existence.

And every new sprout lends credence to the possibility that a billion dollars will be invested in urban renewal in this state by 1970.

Changes In Driver Licensing Effective Jan. 1

Two broad programs for highway safety in Massachusetts, both in the area of driver licensing, will begin on January 1, 1964.

On that date, the Learner's Permit legislation takes effect, and recently Governor Endicott Peabody announced that at the same time Massachusetts will join the National Driver Register Service.

National Driver Register Service

The service, an agency of the Bureau of Public Roads in the United States Department of Commerce, and established within the past two years, maintains a record of all driver license suspensions issued because of a fatal accident or because of a suspension for driving under the influence of alcohol. Each state furnishes the service with a list of such suspensions issued, allowing the service to keep its files current to within a few days of the suspension.

By joining the service, a state is able to determine if an applicant for a license has had any previous license suspensions elsewhere. If there has been a previous suspension, the service is able to notify the state within two or three days.

In Massachusetts, some 200,000 driving license applicants will now be checked yearly for possible previous suspensions in other states.

With the General Electric Computer available at the Registry of Motor Vehicles in Boston, Massachusetts will be able to participate in the National Driver Register Service without any substantial cost to the state.

Learner's Permit

Twenty-seven Registry branch offices, plus the main office in Boston, began Friday, December 20, scheduling appointments for Learner's Permit examinations which will start on January 2, 1964. Applicants for the Learner's Permit may contact the nearest Registry office for appointments.

With the inauguration of the Learner's Permit program, the written examination for the driving license goes statewide.

The written examination was originally begun as a pilot project at the Beverly branch office in August of this year. Results of this type of license test were so successful that Registrar of Motor Vehicles James R. Lawton decided to adopt the written examination to coincide with the beginning of the Learner's Permit.

The legal requirements for the Learner's Permit, passage of an eye test and a test on the rules of the road, did not specify whether or not this latter test was to be written or oral.

To meet the heavy rush of applicants for the Learner's Permit expected in early January, Registrar Lawton has assigned all available personnel to assist in handling the program. The Registry expects to be able to test four times the number of applicants usually examined daily.

The Registry will have Armories available throughout the state in case space at branch offices is not sufficient to handle the volume of applicants anticipated. The Armories on Concord Road in Cambridge and on Victory Road in Dorchester will be used for Greater Boston applicants.

Reason for the rush of applicants will be the number of people now enrolled in driving education courses, either in public schools or in commercial driving schools, plus persons studying for the driving test privately. Without a Learner's Permit, no unlicensed person can operate a motor vehicle in Massachusetts after January 1, even though a licensed person be sitting in the front seat beside the driver.

The operator must have a Learner's Permit and be accompanied by a licensed driver who is at least 21 with a minimum of one year's driving experience.

For the Learner's Permit examination, the cost will be $2.00. Once holding the Learner's Permit, an applicant can take the road test as many as three times within a six-month period. At this point, an unsuccessful applicant would have to secure the Learner's Permit anew before being eligible to again take the road test.

The holder of a Learner's Permit may take and pass the road test as soon as he is able. There is no period of holding a Learner's Permit before the road test can be passed.

As previously, the Registry will require all license applicants who are between the ages of 16 and 18 to furnish evidence of birth date and parental consent, and those under 18 will be able to drive between 1 and 5 in the morning only if accompanied by a parent or guardian.

The written phase of the Learner's Permit will be retained for out-of-state licensed drivers who apply for a Massachusetts driving license.

In his report on the Learner's Permit program to Governor Peabody, Registrar Lawton cited a graphic example of the holes in the current licensing legislation—a 16-year-old youth who is blind could, up to January 1, legally operate a motor vehicle accompanied only by another 16-year-old who had just secured his driving license.

Said Registrar Lawton:

"I think that with the Learner's Permit we will be able to bring to young people and adults a better awareness of the proper attitude that should accompany the operation of a motor vehicle.

"A statement from Governor Peabody and myself will be read to each applicant for the Learner's Permit. This statement will emphasize the legal and moral responsibility attached to the driving privilege. I am confident the proper understanding will develop in the almost 200,000 persons who each year apply for a Massachusetts driving license."

"The Beauty of A Candle" at I. C. Ladies' Sodality

The meeting on December 17 of the Immaculate Conception Ladies' Sodality began with the reception of new members into the Sodality and ended with the annual Christmas party.

The hymn, "Come Holy Ghost" opened the program, followed by the blessing of the Sodality medals.

Mistress of candidates, Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, and Mrs. Frances Bockhoff, vice prefect, then presented for membership the following: Margaret Cullen, Virginia Costello, Kathleen Err, Mary Fiorenza, Anna Gallello, Bridie Moran, Louise Polita, and Mary Tenney.

The candidates recited the act of consecration, were presented their medals and received into the Sodality by the Reverend James F. Kenny, spiritual director, who subsequently celebrated the Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The Christmas party followed the ceremonies in the school hall and Mrs. Dardis was guest speaker for the evening. She gave an interesting and sometimes amusing speech on "The Beauty of a Candle" by Anna B. Payne.

A wonderful evening was enjoyed by all. Coffee, sandwiches and cup cakes were served.

"Books–Old And Collectable" At Study Group

On Tuesday, December 17, the Antiques Study Group met in the Music Room to hear Mr. Holbrook Dodge speak on the subject: "Books—Old and Collectable."

Mr. Dodge spoke of the fact that one does not discover a rare book very often today because the millionaire collectors have bought them up and given them to the college libraries, or they have built libraries of their own.

Among the best known collectors are the Wideners, Henry Huntington, and J. P. Morgan. Dr. Abraham Rosenbach, a famous dealer in rare books, helped to stock the great libraries of this country. It was he that bought a Gutenberg Bible for $106,000, and a Bay Psalm Book for $151,000.

Mr. Dodge pointed out that it is not enough for a book to be old to make it valuable. First it must be in good condition. Second, it should be a first edition. Third, it should be rare, and fourth, the subject matter should be of definite interest. For example, eye witness stories of the opening of the West, accounts of the American Indians, records of the Gold Rush and similar material make valuable books.

Many people are disappointed because a very old book from Grandma's attic proves to be of no value. You hear that the Library of Congress paid one half million dollars for a Gutenberg Bible, but that Bible was the first printed book and a beautiful one. The Bay Psalm Book was the first book printed in America. There are four known perfect copies, and Yale got one for $151,000. Those two books are truly rare. The ordinary person does not own them.

Yet, it is good to remember that some early works of such well-known authors as Hawthorne, Melville, and Edgar Allan Poe can bring a good sum. It is still wise to be on the lookout for a rare book.

The subject of rare books is an extensive one and Mr. Dodge had material enough for another meeting sometime in the future.

Lincoln School January Meeting

All mothers and fathers should mark their 1964 calendars with a date at Lincoln School on Tuesday, January 14 at 8 p.m. At this time Mr. Earl Johnson, math teacher at McCall Junior High School will speak on the "new" math program. This meeting continues the Lincoln School Mother's Association's emphasis on educational needs and programs in our schools. Plans to follow this theme will be a parents meeting in April presenting the school building needs in Winchester.

A Testimonial Dinner for Lt. Edward O'Connell

A large attendance is anticipated at a testimonial dinner honoring retired Police Lieut. Edward W. O'Connell at the Hillview Country Club in North Reading on Thursday evening, January 16th, 1964.

Eddie recently retired after over 41 years of service on the Winchester Police Department, and is widely known and liked. Many Winchesterites, as well as friends from out-of-town, have already subscribed.

Tickets may still be obtained from the following:

Firefighter Charles Moran; Supt. of Parks, H. S. Mullen; Board of Health Agent, Michael Saraco; and Police Lieut. Edward Bowler. Persons desiring to contribute as sponsors may do so by contacting Edward MacDonald of Bonnell Motors, or Attorney Leo Garvey.

John Spaulding Is Elected to Directorship

John P. Spaulding, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Spaulding of 379 Main Street, and a vice president of Scholastic Magazines in New York, has just been named to directorship of the company.

Mr. Spaulding, who was graduated from Harvard College as a member of the class of 1946, spent four years in the Foreign Service of the State Department and was associated with the Reader's Digest before joining Scholastic in 1954. He was named vice president in charge of product sales in 1961.

He is a resident of Pleasantville, New York, where he lives with his wife Ann (Nute).

spected Fire Chief; the Town was engulfed in sorrow, as was the rest of the nation and the world, with the assassination of President Kennedy; and then last week, the many residents who knew John Stevens, respected and admired school teacher, administrator, and guidance director, were saddened by his passing away.

1963. This was the year that was . . . in Winchester a year of change: Captain Frank Amico was appointed the new Fire Chief; Lois Smith left as the Public Library's librarian and was replaced by Robert E. Wagenknecht; the Town Accountant post was abolished, and replaced by act of the Legislature and Town Meeting with the post of Town Comptroller, and filled by the former Town Accountant, James Costello; Michael Saraco was appointed the Board of Health's full-time health agent; William Warnock became the new principal of Wyman School with the retirement of Miss Mabel Lowry; and William Conlon was named as superintendent of the Water and Sewer Department.

1963. This was the year that was . . . in Winchester a year of problems: with the U. S. Supreme Court's abolishing of prayers and Bible readings in public schools as a violation of the Constitution's provision that "no state shall establish a religion," and which left a void in the school system which has only partially been supplanted . . . the High School now has an "Appreciation Committee" which reads messages of philosophical and literal or moral note over the radio station.

temporary Town loan interest ($1,915); interest on funded, or long term debt ($1,371); sanitation ($1,000); Town Common improvements ($1,000); school rentals ($700); Auxiliary Fire Department station headquarters ($450); Fire Department ($300); forestry ($300); health ($151); school traffic ($134) Building Department ($30). Total: $52,547.

Of the $17,453 remaining in the $70,000 appropriation for reserve purposes, the following amounts have been earmarked by the Finance Committee upon request: School Department ($2,776) for math program and extra-curricular work stipends; school athletics ($1,652); water and sewer ($1,000) sanitation ($1,000); veterans benefits ($1,000); payroll changes due to the calendar year accounting system ($750); forestry for removal of dying Maples ($200); and Selectmen's rentals of properties at 14 Reservoir, 465 Main and 10 Linden Streets ($155) total $8,533.

The Finance Committee has two more meetings scheduled for this year, tonight, December 26, and Monday, December 30, after which it closes its Reserve Fund account excepting for a real emergency, and concentrates on preparing the budgets and articles for the next annual Town Meeting.

Legally, the Town Meeting can provide a Reserve Fund of up to 5 per cent of the preceding year's tax levy. Thus, $191,968 could have been set aside for 1963 contingencies based upon the 1962 tax levy. The Finance Committee as a matter of practice, however, usually tries to keep the Reserve Fund increases at a minimum, maintaining plateau levels until it feels it is forced to raise the ceiling.

New Year's Eve Party At Legion Home

The American Legion, Post 97, is holding a New Year's Eve party at the Legion Home on Vine Street. It will be a gala affair, with dancing from 9 to 2 to the music of a fine orchestra, a splendid buffet supper, party favors, hats, and noisemakers furnished.

The committee has been hard at work to make this affair successful. The number of tickets made available is limited so that it will be a cosy affair without being too crowded. Those who have attended recent A. L. social functions know that the party will be well run and that an excellent time will be had. The committee went overboard to obtain a really splendid orchestra to give the dance lovers a break.

S. O. I. News

We know you had a very merry and joyous Christmas and take this space now to wish you a very happy, prosperous and blessed New Year.

On last Sunday afternoon more than 300 gifts were presented to the tots who acquainted themselves with Santa Claus at the S. O. I. Hall. While awaiting the arrival of Santa, the congregation was entertained by a group of 20 accordionists from the Rosith Lee Lowell Studios. A community sing was led by teacher, Miss Lee, and while singing the Christmas carols, good old Santa arrived as "Here Comes Santa Claus" was being heard. His "Ho-Ho-Ho" really changed the atmosphere of the youngsters with many being impatient to meet and talk with him as others were a bit reluctant to approach him. After making the rounds of the hall, Santa took his place and presented gifts of candy to the little ones.

Following the distribution of the aforementioned, Chairman Art Dunbar and his committee passed out candy, soda and ice cream to all present and continued with the singing of more Christmas carols.

Later on in the afternoon, Santa Claus was accompanied by Chairman Dunbar and members of his committee on visits to practically every ward at the Winchester Hospital. The sight of Santa gave most pleasant feelings to the young and old who were hospitalized when Santa presented them with merry wishes and candy.

Santa and his followers then proceeded with visits to the convents of St. Mary's and Immaculate Conception Churches where he gave the nuns refreshments.

Santa's part was played by Douglas Brown and he was assisted by chairman of the Christmas Party, Art Dunbar, and his diligent helpers of Bob and Mel Fiore, Carl Bertolucci, Boss Dattilo, Gus Baldacci, Nick Ronzio, John and Joe Paonessa and Pat Bruno.

The next big event is the New Year's Eve party to be held at the club hall with dancing from 9:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m. If you haven't your ticket yet you might be lucky to obtain one if you call Frank at PA 9-3633 now! All tickets have been sold but there have been a few returned because of last-minute unforseen circumstances so you might still have a chance whether you are a member or not. So from now on, if possible, first come first served as there will be no tickets sold at the door.

Have you marked January 20, 1964, on the calendar yet for the Bloodmobile which is to be at the S. O. I. Hall on Swanton Street from 1:00 to 7:00 p.m.? Members and non-members are eligible to give this life-saving fluid so won't you help us help others?

The teen-age dances held at the S. O. I. Hall every Friday night have been very successful and attendance has been on the increase. The affairs are well supervised and chaperoned so if you have yet to partake in this event why not make the next one your first one. We are sure you'll enjoy yourself and will want to come back again.

The officers and members of the lodge have dedicated themselves to the Winchester Civic League "Picker-Upper" campaign and despite the fact that the ground is now covered with a white blanket of snow is no reason to relax on the purpose of the campaign. Alcohol Motorist's Worst Enemy, Warns AAA

Alcohol is the motorist's worst enemy, the American Automobile Association warned today in advance of the holiday season.

"Liquor has a double danger because it seriously impairs your driving skill and at the same time falsely increases your self-confidence," said Robert S. Kretschmar, executive secretary of AAA's Massachusetts Division. "The more a person drinks, the better driver he THINKS he is, and the worse driver he REALLY is.

"During the next two weeks nearly two-thirds of all traffic accidents will involve liquor," the AAA official said. "Drinking is often fatal to pedestrians as well as motorists. Nearly one-fourth of all pedestrians killed in traffic have been drinking.

"Remember, drinking to any extent reduces your ability as a driver. Even though you think you can handle your drinks, your judgement is impaired after just one.

"Here's what alcohol does to your driving ability:

Weakens judgement
Slows reaction time
Dulls perception
Creates false confidence
Destroys coordination
Decreases alertness

"Why risk an accident? If you have been drinking, no matter how much or how little, don't drive!"

Mothers of Twins To Meet Monday

The next meeting of the Founding Chapter of the Massachusetts Mothers of Twins Association will be held on Monday, December 30, at 8 p.m. in the Junior Hall of the Robbins Library, Arlington Center.

A Winter Ground Breaking

Building Additions Are Planned For Children's School

On land which during the early history of the town was plowed and planted as the old Russell Farm, ground was broken last Friday for an addition to the Children's Own School at 86 Main Street.

Present for the building committee was Sherman B. Russell, chairman, a descendant of the early family which has owned the land. With him on the committee are Fred A. Tucker, Calvin P. Allyn and Dorothy S. Gove, director of the school, ex-officio.

The culmination of many months of planning, the addition will be designed by Richard H. Painter of Beacon Architectural Association, Boston, and under the contract to Robert P. Wild and Company of 1 Herrick Street. It will include an assembly room on the first floor which can double for luncheon space, and will have a movable partition, a new landscaped entrance, new stairs, and two new classrooms and new corridors on the second floor, among other renovations.

In its 20th year, the shcool now teaches 50 students from three years of age to the third grade, with eight teachers and three part-time teachers. According to Miss Gove, the school plans to remain a small private school conducted on the Montessori educational principles and accommodating some ungraded groups; but the expansion and renovations will bring more flexibility and a modern look to its housing.

Woburn C.Y.O. Hosts Sat. Dance For Many Towns

This is a formal invitation to all Winchester teen-agers to attend the Annual Woburn Christmas Dance, hosted by St. James C. Y.O. in Arlington. It will be held at the Arlington Town Hall on this Saturday, December 28 from 8 p.m. to 12.

Winchester Duplicate Bridge Club

Master-point night produced an eleven-table Mitchell in Section A with familiar partnerships winning. The above-average results are as follows:

North-South
Ann Dean and Ed Sullivan	130½
Betty Slade and Bob Haskell	130
Donna Redpath and Alta Stewart	124
Molly Fitzgerald and Dick Herlihy	117
Martha Walker and Lee Mitchell	114
East-West
Jock Olmstead and Clarence Woodward	132
Grace Grove and Nancy Atkinson	128
Barbara Sawyer and Bull Duryea	123
Gerry Barrett and Ted Atkinson	120
Dennis and Priscilla Heindel	119
Marge Hakanson and Fredna Perkins	115½
Ruby White and Don Dalrymple	110½

In Section B, an eight-and-one-half-table Mitchell with a roving North-South pair, Steve Hazeltine and Allan Friot, posted a 65½ game to come in first North-South, while the lethal combination of Lolly Smith and Sam Burwen led both sections in winning East-West. The above average pairs follow:

North-South
Steve Haseltine and Allan Friot	.653
Guy Mingolelli and Jim Byrne	.625
Miggs Root and Ralph Atkinson	.597
George Coffin and Al Oszy	.568
East-West
Lolly Smith and Sam Burwen	86
Great Hawley and Darrell Root	70½
Paul and Peggy Sanderson	69½
Barbara Shea and Margaret Jackson	66
Barbara Greaves and Doug Martell	63

Darrell Root is our roving reporter for the hand of the week.

A Festive Occasion

In keeping with the holiday season Board 17 in Section B presented North-South with a plentiful array of points. Two unusual results developed from this hand, one in the bidding and one in the play. In the bidding all seven pairs arrived at a small slam (three of them doubled), five in no trump and one in each of the major suits. The North-South hands were.:

North
♥—A K Q 9 3 2
♦—A K J
♣—A K
South
♠—K Q J 9 6 5
♦—10 9 7
♣—Q 8 3 2

Since North was the dealer, the opening bid probably was two hearts with a two-spade response from South, followed by three hearts, three spades, four no trump, five clubs and a final bid of six in either a suit or no trump. It would seem that with a combined total count of thirty-two high-card points and two six-card suits a small slam could be made. Actually thire is one bid where if declarer plans correctly six can be made. Looking at the North-South hands only, can you determine which six bid can be made and how?

After study of the hand the possibility of bringing home the six-no-trump contract does not look too good, because it would require the J 10 x of hearts to be in one hand or the ace of spades to be a singleton or for some kind person to play it on the first round of spades.

To make six hearts would again require the J 10 x of hearts to be in one hand. The six-spade bid therefore is the only bid which can be made. Inasmuch as North has two spades and receives no positive heart response from South after they are bid twice, it seems to the author that North should be resigned to being dummy and exposing his blockbuster. (My wife says in actual play I'd bid the no trump myself; hindsight is a wonderful thing.)

Here are all four hands. Sitting South, how do you plan to make six spades?

North
♥—A K Q 9 3 2
♦—A K J
♣—A K

West
♠—2
♥—10 6 4
♦—8 5 4 3 2
♣—9 7 6 4

East
♠—A 10 7 3
♥—J 8 7 5
♦—Q 6
♣—J 10 5

South
♠—K Q J 9 6 5
♦—10 9 7
♣—Q 8 3 2

Against six spades West must open. The lead of a spade would automatically give declarer his bid. Any other lead is taken in dummy. A 5 - 0 or 4 - 1 spade distribution is obviously the only problem so the lead of the four of spades from the board produces the three from East, the Jack from South and the two from West. This eliminates the 5 - 0 problem. If West holds all the outstanding trumps, there is nothing declarer can do.

The next play is to lead the Queen of spades to determine the exact location of the remaining A 10 7. If two trumps fall, the hand can be laid down, conceding only the Ace of spades. The actual fall of the cards leaves East with the 10, 7 when East takes the ace and declarer with K 9 6 5.

East must lead to the board and declarer must now reduce his trump holding to K 9 so as not to be end played and must plan to lead from the board at the eleventh trick so that East cannot take another trump, hoping in the meantime that East does not win by ruffing. As the cards lie, East must follow with four hearts, two of which are trumped by South and on two of which South has thrown a small club and a small diamond. East also follows suit on two clubs, two diamonds, and since he played two spades, the following ending develops:

North
♠—Q 9
♦—J

West
♣—9

East
♠—10 7
♣—J

South
♠—K 9
♣—Q

The lead is from the board, and if the lead is trumped by East, it is overtrumped by South, who then draws East's remaining trump and makes his bid with the good club. If East discards the club, then South throws his club, and the trump coup is completed. If East had not taken the Ace of spades on the third round, a similar ending limits East to his Ace of trumps.

The unusual result in the play of this board is that each and every declarer went down one trick. The players in no trump or hearts could not make six, and the one declarer in six spades did not find the winning method of play, not surprisingly, for it is much simpler to figure out a line of play with four hands in view than in actual play. The best score of course North-South depended on escaping a double by East - West.

All of which leads to an invitation for all of our readers to join us this Thursday, December 26th (instead of Wednesday) for our regular weekly session at the Knights of Columbus Hall, or the next Wednesday, January 1, 1964, for our New Year's party. Play starts by 7:15 for the first section and by 7:30 for the second section. If you don't have a partner, we can generally provide one, but do come early.

NEBHE Says NE Colleges Inadaquately Planning For Future Enrollments

Nearly one out of every seven potential students may not find room to attend college in New England ten years from now, the New England Board of Higher Education's Winchester office has announced.

None of the six New England states is planning adequately to meet the need for higher education in the next decade, NEBHE finds in its third study of college enrollment needs. As a result, over 27,000 students may be unable to attend college in New England by 1967 and some 66,000 may be unable to enroll by 1972.

"The region's colleges and universities have increased their plans dramatically in recent years," states Dr. Martin Lichterman, executive secretary of NEBHE, "and their plans deserve the support of alumni, government, foundation and the general public. But the colleges must expand their plans even more to meet the needs of New England's youth and New England's economy."

NEBHE reports that by five years from now, New England colleges hope with adequate financial support to expand their enrollment by nearly 30%. NEBHE estimates, however, that they should plan to expand by nearly 40%. Their plans for ten years from now indicate a 52% expansion, but NEBHE says they may need to expand 75%.

"A recent national study indicated that New England is planning a smaller percentage of expansion than any other section of the country," according to Dr. Lichterman. "While most other regions are planning to meet their needs, New England's plans are still too small."

The problem of college enrollments will become critical within the next several years, according to a NEBHE report, published last May. The number of college-age youngsters will increase rapidly over the next three years as the children born in the baby boom of 1946 and 1947 begin graduating from high school and applying for college. Because of these increased numbers, the most urgent immediate need according to Dr. Lichterman will be for undergraduate places for freshmen and sophomores. To make sure that the same proportion of youngsters attend college in the future as attend now, New England must expand college opportunities by 20% within five years and 36% within ten.

NEBHE holds that New England must double this expansion for three reasons.

First, a larger proportion of youngsters than at present should continue their education beyond high school either at technical institutes, junior colleges, four-year colleges, or universities.

Second, more youngsters will need to continue their higher education for a longer time, and increasing proportions will go on to earn graduate degrees.

And third, New England serves as a center of higher education for the country, and it cannot expect New England students to fill all of the planned places in New England colleges. "Many private institutions hold a commitment not only to New England but also to the country and the world at large," comments Dr. Lichterman, "and their enrollment of New England students may continue to decline proportionately in the next decade."

Because of these reasons, NEBHE estimates that total enrollments in New England should climb from 283,000 students in 1962 to 392,000 by 1967, and 496,000 by 1972.

NEBHE finds that the region's public colleges and universities are planning greater expansion than its private colleges, and that the public community colleges (two-year institutions) are planning the largest expansion of all: doubled enrollments within five years and tripled enrollments within ten.

If New England's colleges obtain support for their expansion plans, NEBHE reports that private institutions will continue to enroll the majority of students, although the proportion will decline from 70% of the total at present to 63% in 1972. "This proportion of private college enrollments will still remain twice as high as in the rest of the nation," according to Dr. Lichterman, "where private enrollments will decline from 36% to about 30% of the total while public enrollments increase from 64% to nearly 70%.

"The one encouraging fact about our study," states Dr. Lichterman, "is that New England is making more adequate plans for full-time students than for part-time students, and this part-time need can be met more easily than the full-time need."

Dr. Lichterman indicates that the colleges will require major support to meet their plans: they may need capital outlays averaging up to $7,000 for every additional student, and they may need to employ up to 4,000 more professors within five years and 7,000 within ten years. But these plans are inadequate to meet the need, according to NEBHE estimates.

The Board states that New England should enroll an additional 109,000 students within five years, but the region's colleges plan, with adequate support, to enroll 81,000 more, or about three-fourths of these additional students.

And within ten years NEBHE estimates that the region should enroll some 213,000 more students than at present. But its colleges hope to enroll 146,000 more—or less than 70% of these additional students.

"This is the third enrollment study that NEBHE has made in six years," states Dr. Lichterman. "We congratulate the region's colleges for planning more adequately than they previously have done, but our conclusion remains the same: New England's plans are still not big enough."

Prices — 1963

● IN THE FIELD of funeral service prices may be fixed—but not by funeral directors. How are they fixed? By the cost of labor, the cost of manufactured products, by those who make the assessments on local real estate. And, also, by the public which each year seeks better and better service in every phase of American life. In other words, funeral service prices are fixed by the same factors which determine prices in all fields of endeavor.

McCreery—Snelling

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Constance Patricia Snelling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Howard Snelling of 8 Ravenscroft Road, became the bride of Maxwell Rodgers McCreery, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell McCreery of 4 Curtis Street on the afternoon of December 21 at St. Mary's Church.

MRS. MAXWELL R. McCREERY

The Reverend Martin Dolphin officiated at the ceremony against a background of white gladioli, chrysanthemums and holly, and a reception followed at the Winchester Country Club.

The bride was gowned in a sheath of white re-embroidered Alencon lace over ivory peau de soie fashioned with a chapel train highlighted with sequins and pearls, and with a soft fullness at the back. Her veil of French illusion was caught to a crown of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of Eucharist lilies, stephanotis and ivy.

Mrs. Robert McNamara of Winchester was matron of honor at the wedding, gowned in a full-length sheath of azalea-pink velvet accented at the waist by soft unpressed pleats and featuring a portrait neckline. Her matching pillbox hat was trimmed with illusion and she carried a bouquet of pink camellias and ivy.

The bride's three sisters, Mrs. John H. Lynch, Miss Marilyn Snelling and Miss Gail Snelling, all of Winchester, were bridesmaids, as was Miss Elizabeth McCreery, sister of the bridegroom. They were gowned similar to the matron of honor but in pink cloud and petal-pink velvet. Their flowers were complementary pink shades of carnations, with ivy.

Mr. Joseph Tebo of Springfield was best man to Mr. McCreery, and ushering were John H. Lynch of Winchester, A. Gerald Alaimo of Providence, Rhode Island, Philip G. Ives of New York City, Roderick S. Thompson of Baltimore, Maryland, and George H. Snelling, brother of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Snelling was in an emerald-green ensemble of peau de soie accented with crystal beading. She carried a green satin purse with a white orchid. Mrs. McCreery was in an Empire sheath of Dior-blue poie d'ange and Chantilly lace. Her flowers were pink camellias.

The bride left for her wedding trip in an Empire sheath of taupe wool boucle with a jacket of natural ranch mink and matching cloche. Her corsage was a white orchid.

She is a graduate of Connecticut College in the class of 1959 and did graduate study at Columbia University.

Mr. McCreery, who is with the Humble Oil and Refining Company, is a graduate of the Hotchkiss School and of Brown University, class of 1958. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha, the Rotary Club of Northampton, and the Winchester Country Club. He served for three years as a lieutenant in the United States Air Force.

The couple will make their home in Northampton.

DISCUSS PROBLEMS OF AGING—Taking part in a recent seminar on problems of aging, in Boston, sponsored by Association of Massachusetts Homes for Aging, were Miss H. Gwen Jones, director of Elizabeth Carleton House, Roxbury; and Frederick L. Fish of Winchester, director of Davenport Home, Malden.

Engagement Announced

Mr. Herbert W. Janzer and Mrs. M. Elizabeth Hughes Janzer of Newtown, Connecticut, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mariam Elizabeth, to the Reverend Mr. Robert Buckingham Loveland Singer, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. L. Singer, Sr., of Marblehead, formerly of Winchester.

MISS MARIAM E. JANZER

Miss Janzer, a graduate of the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia, teaches home economics at the Southbury Training School. Mr. Singer served in the United States Army, is a graduate of Harvard University and Yale Divinity School, and is associate minister of the Newtown Congregational Church.

Mrs. Blackham Is 1964 Heart Fund Sunday Chairman

The appointment of Mrs. James W. Blackham, Jr., of 33 Canterbury Road, as Heart Sunday chairman for the 1964 Heart Fund in Winchester, was announced today by the general chairman, Maxwell McCreery.

MRS. JAMES W. BLACKHAM, JR.

The new chairman holds membership in many community activities. She is a member of the League of Women Voters, the Mystic Mothers' Association, and the Friends of Winchester Hospital. A past-president of the Women's Republican Club of Winchester, she is a board member of Junior Circles of the Florence Crittenton League and of the Massachusetts Federation of Republican Women.

The widely-known community leader will direct the climactic fund-raising effort of the Massachusetts Heart Association's Winchester chapter during Heart Sunday, to be held February 23.

The house-to-house collection, in which an army of Heart Neighbors will march, is designed to cover every household in the community, so that residents will have the opportunity to share in the fight against heart disease, the state's Number One Killer.

"We hope and plan to mobilize more Heart Neighbors than ever before, in a saturation drive for this very vital cause," the Heart Sunday chairman declared.

"Many persons," the chairman continued, "are alive and well today because of medical advances already made possible through Heart Funds. They are among our staunchest supporters.

"But it is necessary for the rank and file of our people—realizing that cardiovascular disease, accounting for more than half of our deaths, must inevitably reach into many of our households—take personal responsibility for helping continue and expand Heart Fund programs of research, education and community service."

Young drivers in 1962 had the worst record of any age group in the United States. Men and women under age 25 represent only about 15 per cent of the nation's licensed drivers, yet they were involved in nearly 29 per cent of all fatal accidents and in more that 27 per cent of all non-fatal accidents.

Home And Garden Club's Yuletide Mart A Success

Credit must be given to the entire membership of the Winchester Home and Garden Club for the success of the Yuletide Mart.

It was a worthy effort because the sale's proceeds added to the funds available for club projects such as year-round decorating at the veterans' hospital in Bedford.

This work has been recognized by a certificate of merit awarded to the club by the Veteran's Administration. Local civic endeavors include holiday decorating at the Winchester Hospital, Library and Home for the Aged.

While the Mart represented the contribution of time and effort spent by the whole club there are committees which deserve special mention.

The inviting sign at the entrance to Hadley Hall and the unique rack which displayed the wreaths were the work of Mrs. Granville Gilpatrick. The trio of Mrs. Gilpatrick, Mrs. George McFadden and Mrs. Burton Gove was in charge of the most unusual "Boutique."

It will be remembered that Mrs. Gove handled expertly the job of luncheon ticket chairman. The luncheon tables, the buffet and the round table at the door were beautifully decorated by Mrs. Philip Boone, ably assisted by Mrs. W. Campbell Ross, Mrs. Richard Frazier and Mrs. Dudley Kimball. The group of workers for the luncheon was sizable including both cooks and waitresses. The list is headed by Mrs. Edmund Wright, Mrs. Lorenzo Della Femina and Mrs. Edward Devlin. Sixteen assistants were: Mrs. Peter Nannene, Mrs. Edward Kawa, Mrs. Russell Pearl, Mrs. Harrie Nutter, Mrs. Arthur Anderson, Mrs. Harwood Boynton, Mrs. Herbert Morris, Mrs. Sanford Moses, Mrs. Edward McDevitt, Mrs. Harold Lewis, Mrs. Harry Locke, Mrs. J. Harper Blaisdell, Mrs. Benedict Ventura, Mrs. A. B. Gowing, Mrs. Frank Deteso and Mrs. E. Carl Hoglund. Small wonder the luncheon was delicious, well-served and well-attended.

For the charming Christmas corsages Mrs. John Heffernan, Mrs. George Lemay, Mrs. Carlton Dane and Mrs. Richard Frazier are to be commended. The baked Christmas delicacies were the special charge of Mrs. Aldo Minotti, Mrs. Clifton Shea, Mrs. Peter Nazaretian, Mrs. John McDonald and Mrs. Joseph Burgatti.

The elegant holiday decorations were in great demand at the table of Mrs. Hazen Ayer, Mrs. Gerald Hills, Mrs. Linford Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Bobert Baylies, Mrs. Kern Folkers, Mrs. Valery Havard and Mrs. Theodore Atkinson.

The wreaths, most meaningful symbols of Christmastime, were trimmed by Mrs. Deran Hintlian and Mrs. Joseph Vaccaro with exquisite decorations to be enjoyed this season and saved for more Christmases to come.

Containers of interesting shapes and sizes were filled with greens and sold at the table of Mrs. Frederick Cole, Mrs. Edward Mansfield, Mrs. Alan Howard, Mrs. Horace Ford and Mrs. Frank Robinson.

Choice materials for creative customers were provided at the ingredients table in the care of Mrs. Carlton Dane, Mrs. James Jones, Mrs. John Chipman, Mrs. Richard Keppler and Mrs. Edward McDevitt.

Mrs. Clifford Sundberg and Mrs. Philip Boone aided and abetted Mrs. James Jones and Mrs. Harold Lewis in the preparation of publicity for the Yuletide Mart.

All Aliens Must Report To U.S. Gov't in Jan.

In recognition of the importance to comply with the law, Governor Peabody requested all citizens, employees and officers of the Commonwealth to assist and encourage every alien to report at the nearest Post Office or Immigration and Naturalization Service Office during the month of January 1964 and complete Form I-53.

Northeast Regional Commissioner, J. Leo Bagley, United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, stated that approximately 134,000 non-citizens within the Commonwealth on January 1, 1964, regardless of age, admitted as non-immigrants including visitors, students and crewmen, or immigrants admitted for permanent residence, are required to complete and deliver ALIEN ADDRESS REPORT Form I-53 on or before 5:00 p.m. Friday, January 31, 1964 at any Post Office or Immigration Service Office.

Commissioner Bagley, located at the Burlington Vermont Regional Office also stated that 5,000 individuals acquired United States citizenship in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts during the past year.

He invited all immigrant resident aliens, eligible for naturalization, to apply for citizenship during the coming year. Information regarding citizenship and Immigration regulations may be obtained at the following location:

Sachems Trim Reading, 6-1; Murphy Tallies Twice

The senior line of George Murphy, Barry Johnson and Ed Cutting accounted for five goals last Saturday afternoon at the North Shore Sports Center, Lynn, where the Sachems won their second consecutive game by defeating Reading 6-1.

In other Middlesex League games undefeated Wakefield rolled easily over first-year entry Concord 8-0, Melrose blanked Belmont 5-0, and Stoneham similarly zeroed Lexington 3-0. Thus, after three weeks of play, Wakefield and Winchester remain the league's only unbeaten teams. However, the two leaders clash this Thursday night at 8:20 p.m., and unless the contest ends in a deadlock, one of them will bow out of this elite circle.

Bob Murray started the Sachem scoring attack at 3:42 of the first period when he took a pass from Bevan O'Callaghan and slapped the puck by netminder John Ryan's left side. Just thirteen seconds later, George Murphy skated in alone from the right on a pass from Barry Johnson and put the Sachems ahead 2-0.

Then, with 3:15 left in the period, and after Winchester had been completely dominating the play, Reading's Bill Anzaldi made a steal at center ice and skated in alone on Jerry Hills. In quick succession Hills stopped both Anzaldi's initial shot and a rebound effort. A minute later, however, Murphy got his second goal of the afternoon and extended the Sachem lead to 3-0.

Ron Scherban widened the gap even further at 0:44 of the second period when he drove a slap shot by Ryan with assists from Murphy and Ed Cutting.

With a little more than three minutes left, Hills once again made two spectacular saves on clear shots by Reading's Bill Rixon and Don Boudreau. Johnson's unassisted goal at 9:25 further frustrated Reading's efforts.

With a 5-0 lead, Coach Frank Finigan inserted sophomore goalie Paul Tierney at 3:05 of the final period. Exactly a minute later Paul Sweeney tallied for Reading on an angle shot that Tierney had little chance with. But Ed Cutting compensated for it with a minute and fifty-one seconds remaining in the game, picking up his first goal of the season on an assist from Johnson, and capping the affair at 6-1.

Tanners Upset Sachems In Overtime, 54-50

Woburn, sparked by forward Tom Lally who notched 23 points, pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the young basketball season Monday night at Winchester, where they upset the highly favored Sachems in the last few seconds of a three-minute overtime period, 54-50.

REBOUND ACTION BETWEEN HIGH SCORERS shows Woburn's Tom Lally (30) and Sachem Bob Branley (12) going high for possession. Lally led all scorers, and sparked the Tanner upset, with 23 points. Branley was high man for Winchester with 14. Vic Papadinis (44) waits for opportunity.

The Tanners, refusing to concede anything right from the outset, hampered and pressed all over the court. While Lally scored, center Joe Borselli pulled down rebound after rebound, and this backboard control eventually proved to be the decisive margin.

Sachem guard Bob Branley was the night's second highest scorer with 14 points, hitting most of them in the second half and keeping Winchester in contention. However, Pete Fahey with 12, and Vic Papadinis with 11, usually the biggest guns for the Sachems, were about as cold and silent as the snowfall outside.

Another factor in the stunning defeat occurred when Borselli fouled out of the game early in the overtmie period, and Jim Ficociello replaced him. With twenty seconds remaining, and with the score deadlocked at 50-50, Ficociello hit a fifteen- footer to put the Tanners ahead. It was his first basket of the year.

Further frustration came in the form of pint-sized, but scrappy, Ken Canada. The little guard was everywhere, hindering the Sachems and rallying his own team. He also accounted for seven important points, two of them coming in the overtime after the Sachems had gone ahead, 50-48.

From the second period on it was a nip and tuck affair, the lead changing hands several times. Then, with three minutes left, Tanner guard Charlie Sullivan put his team ahead 47-46. Seconds later, Papadinis made it 48-47, Winchester.

With a minute and thirty seconds left, Borselli tied it with a foul shot. An interception gave Woburn the ball with 58 seconds showing. After Tom Ford tied up Ed Langley for a jump ball Woburn again took possession but a traveling violation was called. The Sachems took over with six seconds remaining, but failed to score.

In the overtime, Tom Ford gave the Sachems an initial advantage by sinking two foul shots. They proved to be all Winchester could muster in that three-minute period. After Canada knotted it at 50-50 with 1:30 left, things got hectic. The ball changed hands several times. With 49 seconds left, the Sachems took possession. All they had to do was run the clock out and set up one final shot, but a court-length pass went out of bounds, and then Ficociello put the game out of reach. With hree seconds left, Lally was fouled and proceeded to sink two foul shots to ice the game even further.

Hal Goodnough: Apostle to the Bronzed Warriors

Hal Goodnough speaks with the rapidity of a machine gun. He hardly gives you time to breathe. But everything he says is saturated with inspiration. He relies upon a wealth of information that traces itself back half a century, and has roots in just about every corner and crevice of our American sports heritage. His ultimate aim is simple: keep the same democratic ideals that have made this country what it is today in the field of competitive athletics; so that the gridirons, the diamonds, the courts and the rinks of America will not just be places where points are scored and people cheer, but, in reality, places where the highest ideals of this nation are enlarged upon and personified.

HAL GOODNOUGH

"Look to the athletic field," Hal says, "and there you will find the true essence of democracy. Boys play together because they want to play the game and because they want to win. It couldn't matter less that the shortstop and the third baseman come from different sides of the tracks, or that the second baseman's skin is brown and the first baseman's white, or that the catcher is the son of a rabbi and the pitcher a future divinity student."

Last Wednesday night Hal spoke to the fall sports varsity letter winners of Winchester High. He spoke for more than a half hour, and not once referred to notes. Students, coaches, faculty and guests alike sat spellbound listening to him. It was almost too much to absorb. Easily appreciated was the tribute one Boston sportswriter bestowed upon him earlier that week as one of the fifteen best after dinner speakers in the country.

In the midst of compiling a book for anecdotes and reminiscenses, to be entitled "Desire, Determination and Devotion," Hal is traveling around the New England area attempting to instill these very prerogatives in the boys and men he talks to. After you've heard him, you know a great deal more about the uncommon values and aspects of the Three D's.

He stresses rugged individuality, but only in so far as it is beneficial to team effort. "This country was formed," he says, "and is still based upon the spirit of the individual. But individualism is wanton unless it builds an incorruptible foundation."

In the greatest sense, Hal Goodnough is truly an apostle to the bronzed warriors of modern sport.

LOU GODDU

The Awards dinner also saw Coach Henry Knowlton pay special tribute to Trainer Lou Goddu. Lou, a bit of an individual himself, has worked with, consoled and counseled boys at Winchester High for two decades. He doesn't like to be thanked for it, so he generally doesn't make an apppearance at formal affairs like awards dinners. Sometimes you can take a man like Lou for granted, undoubtedly many do, but it may please him to know that he and his dedicated ways are very much appreciated.

Safe Boating Classes For Boys' Clubs

One of the outstanding youth organizations in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the Boys' Clubs of Boston, will cooperate with the Massachusetts Division of Motorboats to present a program of safe boating education this winter.

All of the Boys' Club members, numbering thousands, have been invited to attend the free classes which will meet for two hours on one night a week for six weeks, State Director Wilton Vaugh announced following a conference with executive director William J. Lynch of the Boys' Clubs of Boston.

Details of the sessions are being prepared by the State educational officers in cooperation with Boys' Clubs Units that are located at Charlestown, 15 Green Street; South Boston, F and West Sixth Streets and Roxbury, 80 Dudley Street. Parents and relatives of the boys as well as the general public, are welcome to attend the sessions.

The State Division of Motorboats will supply the expert instructors in seamanship and small boat handling, together with all of the necessary supplies, including books, paper, pencils, charts and colored motion pictures with sound, at no cost to the students.

The Boys' Clubs of Boston will provide the classrooms, motion picture sound projectors, screens, heat, light, power, and similar facilities, all without charge.

Tentatively the classes will start at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, February 18 at the Roxbury clubhouse; Wednesday, February 19, at the Charlestown clubhouse, and Thursday, February 20 at the South Boston unit.

The courses will consist of elementary knowledge about boating including the federal and state laws, rules of the road, aids to navigation and the proper use of required equipment. Diplomas will be awarded finally.

YOUR Pharmacist SPEAKS

By: Fred McCormack

Are you an insomniac? If you are regularly cold-shouldered when wooing Morpheus, here are a few hints which may make sleep come more easily:

Try a long walk before bedtime and, time and weather permitting, engage in mild sports or other activities which will cultivate a pleasant but physical tiredness. Warm baths sometimes turns the trick; if not, try a cool tub or shower. Simple ear plugs may help if you are unduly sensitive to noise, but if you are light sensitive an eyemask is worth a try.

The important thing, however, is not to fight insomnia. Accept it: philosophically, if you must, but don't let it prey on you. Don't just lie there—do something about it. Get up. Read. Watch the late-late shows. Perform a few simple tasks.

If it's any consolation, you'll find plenty of wide-awake service at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY in the filling of prescriptions. This is a sound suggestion—don't sleep on it—rely on McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main Street. Phone PA 9-2700.

THIS WEEK'S HOUSEHOLD HINT: Men who use air pressure shaving creams will find that when the can is "empty" they can still squeeze a few extra shaves by immersing the can in hot water.

BOWLING

Merchants

Bowladrome went into 1st place with an 8 point win over Suburban as Peterson Chair dropped 6 points to Winchester Esso. Harold Johnson with a 368 and Franny Mawn with 363 put the game on ice for Bowladrome. Bowladrome is determined to win the first half and if last week's match was any example they are going to be tough.

Robbie Robinson, the big gun for Cradock, swept 8 points from Alan Motors. Buddy Hackett's 154 single with a triple strike was in vain as Woburn Carpet took 5 points from San-O Cleaners; Trefrey over Olsen by 8 points.

S.O.I. Women

The start of the second half indicated great promise for the so-called cellar team, the Springs, with a jump to fourth place. Luckies are sitting on top with Newports just pinfalls behind them.

If Rose DeTeso keeps going as strong as she has been then I say watch out Luckies. Rose bowled a 291 high triple. Keep going higher Rose.

Cusi has been clogged these last three weeks. Somehow this jinx will not leave her. Hope that after the holidays she will get back into stride again.

See you all back at Strike Lanes after the New Year. Good luck to each and every team and a Happy New Year to you all.

Well, it looks as if the L & M's finally lost more than two points. Good bowling, Camels. See the Winstons took a hard eight points off the Old Golds. The Pall Malls are getting stronger every Sunday; too bad the half is coming to an end. What's the matter, Rudy, no 300's on your team this week. It really looks like a blood match between the Kents and Marlboros. Happy holidays to all.

S.O.I. Men

Due to the Holiday Season, the S.O.I. bowling league will return to action on Tuesday, January 7 and will continue every Tuesday at the Bowladrome until championship roll-off time in March.

With two meetings of the second half of the schedule gone by, Alabama leads the pack after blanking Penn 8-0 the last time out. In this match Capt. Dick Tofuri of the winners was the lone 300 bowler with strings of 100-101-122.

Navy shut out the first half "champs" 8-0 to climb from fifth to second while the defeated dropped from seventh to tenth. Capt. Richie Riga of Navy really bombed with strings of 97-158-122 while the highest string for the losers was made by Dan Gattineri, 78-93-107.

Winning 6-2 over St. Mary's kept Georgetown in third place while St. Mary's went from first to seventh slot. The winners were led by Joe Marrone 99-111-117; Capt. Tony Chefalo 110-113-97 and Jake Ciarcia 104-87-123. St. Mary's captain John Mangano bested his unit with 97-124-103.

Capt. Tony Saraco and Andy Buzzotta had a big hand in B. C.'s win of 8-0 over California. Their respective scores were 90-107-111 and 99-91-115 and enough to climb two notches to fourth place. The loss moved California to last position in the standing.

Fift place Yale was led by hard-hitting Capt. Richie Bucci 90-125-134 and Muddy Saragosa 108-103-93 to take eleventh place Holy Cross. Leading bowler for the losers was Capt. Muskie Tofuri 105-105-108.

Harvard's 6-2 win over twelfth place Bates was responsible for the former's climb to sixth from eighth. Capt. Joe Capone performed best for the winners with 90-108-110 with Dom Gallello coming next with 104-97-97. Capt. Bob Fiore led Bates with 111-100-109 and following one pin behind was Arka Amico who had 102-114-103.

In the final match of the evening Army took Maryland 6-2. Helping Army go from tenth to eighth after the win were Correction Fiore who hit for 98-100-125 and Capt. Choppers Gangi 110-104-106. Jim Faietta of the losers was really hot with tallies of 107-140-87 but his teammates were of little assistance.

With Christmas Day of 1963 come and gone, we hope it was a merry one and now we wish all a very happy and prosperous New Year!

Sportsmen's Show To Feature Rifle Teams

Twenty-one rifle teams from 12 sports clubs will compete to determine five finalists to fire in 2nd annual New England Junior Rifle Championships at 1964 New England Sportsmen's Show in Boston's Commonwealth Armory, January 18-25.

The Bay State finalists will compete with teams from other five New England states. Total of 30 teams will fire in the finals at the show. The competition will be staged on the opening day of the 8-day show.

Each of the six New England states is conducting eliminations to select the five top teams to represent the state in the tournament. Trophies will be presented to top teams and marksmen.

Coordinators of state eliminations are Maine: Eldon Hahn, 554 Brook Street, Westbrook; New Hampshire: Orval L. Coleman, P. O. Box 155, Contoocook; Vermont: Gary J. Beattie, 7 North Main Street, Northfield; Massachusetts: William R. Whiting, 47 Stonebrook Road, Sudbury; Rhode Island: Fred Kapsinow, 18 Whitin Avenue, Warwick; and Connecticut: Lt. Joe Carten, 56 Newtown Avenue, Stratford. E. William Kerns, 273 Lincoln Road, Sudbury, is New England's chairman.

Massachusetts clubs participating in the elimination include Sharon Fish and Game Club, Jr. Division, Sharon; Neighborhood Rifle and Pistol Club, Jr. Div., Springfield; Lawrence Rod and Gun Club, Jr. Rifle Team, Lawrence; Arlington Demolay Junior Gun Club, Arlington; Marlboro Fish and Game Association, Jr. Rifle Div., Marlboro; Agawam Junior Rifle Club, Agawam; Mohawk Junior Rifle Club, Longmeadow; Allston-Brighton YMCA Junior Rifle Club, Brighton; New Bedford High School Junior Rifle Club, New Bedford; Framingham Sportsmen's Association, Junior Rifle Club, Framingham; Mystic Valley Junior Rifle Club, Malden; and Sudbury Junior Rifle Club, Sudbury.

Local Youngster Appears In "Jack And Jill" Mag.

Harold Leach Jr., of 6 Salisbury Street, has written a "letter to the editors" which is featured in the January issue of Jack and Jill magazine, the 25-year-old children's monthly published by the Curtis Publishing Company. This letter was chosen from among many hundreds mailed to Jack and Jill editors from all parts of the United States and the entire world.

Harold, who wrote about his aquarium of guppies, will receive a framed "Certificate of Merit" from Jack and Jill magazine, signed by the publisher. Each month similar "Certificates of Merit" are awarded to other youngsters whose contributions appear in the special Jack and Jill feature, the North, East, West, South page.

Football Coaches' Official All-America Movie Now Available

The 1963 All-America football team selected by the American Football Coaches Association is brought together in a thrilling motion picture now available as a public service to local community organizations, Allstate Insurance Companies announced recently.

Dramatic game movies, offered throughout the country exclusively by Allstate, document the All-America choices of more than 500 college coaches who participated in the team balloting.

Bailey M. Barrett, New England regional manager for All-State, said group showings of the 28-minute sound movie can be arranged without charge by contacting local Allstate Insurance offices.

This year's first team All-Americans, as announced by UPI and featured in the coaches' official film, are:

Position	Name	Height	Weight	School
End	Jim Kelly	6-2	210	Notre Dame
End	Vern Burke	6-4½	195	Oregon State
Tackle	Carl Eller	6-5½	244	Minnesota
Tackle	Scott Appleton	6-3	235	Texas
Guard	Bob Brown	6-5	260	Nebraska
Guard	Rick Redman	5-11	210	Washington
Center	Dick Butkus	6-3	234	Illinois
Quarterback	Roger Staubach	6-2	192	Navy
Halfback	Gale Sayers	6-0	196	Kansas
Halfback	Jay Wilkinson	6-1	196	Duke
Fullback	Tom Crutcher	6-3	211	Texas Christian

The 1963 All-America football team is the 74th in the great tradition originated by Coach Walter Camp of Yale in 1889 and popularized for more than half a century in Collier's magazine.

The Coaches Association All-America board includes Coaches Paul Dietzel of Army, Richard Colman of Princeton, Tom Nugent of Maryland, Paul Bryant of Alabama, Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State, Murray Warmath of Minnesota, Jess Neely of Rice and Jim Owens of Washington.

"The American Football Coaches Association is grateful to Allstate for helping us tell the 1963 All-America story from coast to coast," said W. W. (Woody) Hayes, president of the Coaches Association and head football coach at Ohio State University.

Every region of the nation is represtented in the thrilling, 16mm movie.

On the American Football Coaches Association second team All-America are:

Position	Name	School
End	John Simmons	Tulsa
End	Mel Profit	U. C. L. A.

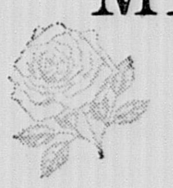
Halfback	Willie Brown	Southern California
Fullback	Cosmo Iacavazzi	Princeton

MISS DEB



. . . answers questions about Junior Miss etiquette, grooming and interests.

Q. How do you handle a phone call gracefully if a boy calls when you're entertaining another date? What if you like the guy on the phone better than the one in the living room?

A. No matter who you like best, it's a matter of basic dating manners not to chat on the phone when you have a guest. When the phone rings, be brief. Tell him you have a guest and can talk only a minute. And remember—the same principle holds if that guest is a girl friend.

Q. My parents have agreed that I can use makeup on special occasions. What color foundation is best to start out with? A friend of mine uses a deep tan and it looks great on her. Are dark tones the most flattering?

A. What looks good on your friend may be wrong for you. The safest and surest way to select a flattering foundation is to choose a color closest to your own natural skin tone. There are three basic skin tones: rose, beige and ivory. Take a good, hard look at yourself in daylight and decide where you fit in the color scale. Rose-toned skins are warm complexions, brushed with a tint of pink. Beige-toned skins include complexions with light tan, olive and golden tints. Ivory-toned skins are a creamy white gardenia. Another word about foundation and makeup in general. Practice makes perfect — so experiment in private before you make your first public appearance.

Q. When you're invited to dinner at a friend's home, is it necessary to bring a gift? My parents invited a friend of mine to dinner and she brought a box of candy. I've been to her home several times, but never brought a gift. Was I impolite?

A. If the invitation is just a casual . . . "stay for dinner," a gift would be out of place. But if the dinner is a special occasion, and the invitation is given well in advance, a small hostess gift is both appropriate and thoughtful. The gift should never be elaborate (it's the thought that counts), and gifts of food are always in good taste. Next time you're invited to a special dinner, why not make up a batch of fudge, or your favorite cookies? Demonstrate your artistic talents by packing the cookies in a colorful box that is a gift in itself. For example: cover a shoe box with pink Marvalon adhesive covering, line it with white adhesive and trim the lid with white daisy cutouts. This type of hostess gift rates you tops as a guest.

Mardi Gras Ball, Buffet at Boston Foreign Institute

Mrs. Koren Kolligian of 71 Wedgemere Avenue is a committee member for the International Mardi Gras Ball, which benefits the International Institute, a Boston Red Feather service for newcomers to this country. The ball is to be held on Friday, January 17th.

Located in the charming old brownstone at 190 Beacon Street, the Institute, a non-political, nonsectarian social work agency founded in 1924, helps the new immigrant find his rightful place in the United States. This year ball guests will dance to the music of Jacques Renard's Orchestra in the Grand Ballroom of the Statler-Hilton Hotel in either black tie or authentic national dress.

An unusual International Buffet will delight many gourmets throughout the evening, as they admire the colorful costumes, for which prizes are awarded, and hear strains of familiar and unfamiliar melodies during the stage show entitled "Carnival Around the World."

IRS News

With the filing period for 1963 Federal income tax returns fast approaching, announcement has been made from the office of Alvin M. Kelley, district director of the Internal Revenue Service for the Boston District, that the 1963 Federal income tax forms were available at all offices of the service on Monday, December 16th.

"All outside offices throughout the state are fully stocked with a supply of the 1963 forms for the convenience of the taxpayers," stated Mr. Kelley. "However, I would like to make it clear that tax practitioners and other bulk users of tax forms must submit their orders directly to the District Headquarters Office, 174 Ipswich Street, Boston 15, Mass. Shipping instructions should accompany all such orders. Taxpayers indicating that they will pick up orders will be notified when the order is ready. Orders in excess of four pounds must be called for, unless the taxpayer specifically authorizes shipment to be made collect."

Practitioners and others requesting bulk shipments will receive them within a reasonable time after placing their orders.

Golfomat– A New Indoor Golf Game

Golfers and sports fans now can play real 18-hole golf indoors—any time, in any weather—thanks to the new mechanical marvel—Golfomat. This newest sports innovation is the creation of Products Investors Corp., Ltd. It has been field tested for months performing with absolute reliability and accuracy. Those experienced golfers and pros—as well as amateurs—who were invited to play the game during this test period, gave it their most enthusiastic endorsement.

Golfomat simulates golf course reality in an indoor climate. It permits a player or twosome or foursome to play a complete golf course, shot by shot, hole by hole, using a full set of regular clubs and golf ball (not a practice ball). When the ball is hit with any club, the yardage is shown immediately on a projection screen. Direction is down the middle, slightly to the left or right, or wide in either direction. Golfers who have played this realistic indoor game call it a player's dream because of its compact setup for competition, practice, or lessons. The heart of this new golf game is an electronic computer, aptly named "Golfomat," and a film. The computer electronically registers the angle at which the ball approaches the net and its velocity in milli and micro-seconds while the film-strip depicts each hole at 10-yard intervals. During this process of development the relativity of time and travel becomes an important factor. Thus, if a person registers a 170-yard drive on a 370-yard hole, the next picture he sees will be the hole from 200 yards away. Once a participant reaches the green, he either putts from a "birdie circle" or from long range. Any ball stopping within 15 feet of the flag is considered birdie distance. The next step is to sink the putt on a hidden contour "green" located in front of the screen. Once all players hole out putts, they push a button which flashes the next hole and hazards. Basically, that is Golfomat.

However, some "local rules" have been added. For instance, any ball hit in the water or in a trap (which shows on the film) is played from those positions with a one-stroke penalty. It takes only 60 minutes for an 18-hole game. The reception to every Golfomat installation has been tremendous. Growth potential appears unlimited. The "game" is simple, has appeal and is as close as possible to the real thing. It is ideally suited for installation in bowling centers, amusement parks, resorts, hotels, motels, colleges, universities, travel terminals, hospitals, etc. A number of Golfomat centers are now being built nationally each under private management. Strike Lanes in Winchester has already installed the first Golfomat unit in this area which is ready for play.

A Begonia For Every Occasion

Last week, in discussing Cacti I mentioned that they were found only in the Americas; the situation is the exact opposite so far as Begonias are concerned. Whether it be Africa, Asia, Europe or the Americas, there are some species of Begonia native to the area.

The Genus Begonia has hundreds of species which contain myriads of varieties and sub-varieties. To make reference to the different distinct types easier, the Fibrous, Tuberous, Rex and Rhizomatous groups have been established.

The Fibrous group contains the common bedding and house-plant varieties. All have fleshy, shiny-surface leaves; some varieties, when exposed to sunlight, turn a deep red color. The Fibrous Begonias are best propagated by stem cuttings as opposed to seeds, since the seeds are dust-like and extremely hard to handle.

Tuberous Begonias are known to all as the beautiful garden plants found in shaded spots during the summer. They are grown from true tubers, (underground succulent stems), and are well worth any extra care they may require.

The Rhizomatous group have a creeping root from which the leaves and flowers arise. Most plants in this group can stand a moderate amount of sun.

Rex Begonias are the ones with large, hairy leaves which have prominent veins. There are many color patterns in the leaves, and since most Rexs are hybrids, propagating by seed produces still different colors. Unlike most other Begonias, they require a cool, moist atmosphere and moderate sun.

Although cultural requirements vary for the different species, most will do well in the same type of soil. A light porous mixture of sand, loam and peat, which is slightly acid would be ideal.

Begonias are exteremely shallow-rooted. For this reason, the soil around the plants must always be moist. It has been found that light frequent application of a fertilizer is more growth stimulating than heavy applications weeks apart.

I mentioned earlier that Begonia seed is dust-like. Because of this the seed should be sown carefully without being covered with soil. Bottom heat is necessary, just as is a piece of glass over the tray to hold moisture. Just as soon as the cotyledons appear, the seedlings must be transplanted into other trays. When the true leaves have developed and the plants are well established, they must be potted and gradually hardened-off.

Under dry-air conditions, Red-spider mites may become a problem. There are many good commercial sprays on the market which will control these pests.

There are many different sizes and shapes of Begonias from which to choose. There is a trailing Begonia, commonly called Stardust, one with variegated leaves called Imperialis, and one with red leaves called the Begonia Jewelight. Whatever your need, there is sure to be a variety of Begonia to fill it.

Parkhurst School Brownie Scout Investitures

The Parkhurst School Brownie Scouts of Troops 522 and 523 held a very impressive investiture ceremony at the Parkhurst School this month.

The color guard opened the program with the salute to the flag. After making her Brownie Promise, each second grader to be invested came forward and looked into the magic mirror pond in search of a real Brownie. Mrs. Carol Dutting, the neighborhood chairman, then presented the girls with their pins.

The program closed with the entire group singing "The Brownie Smile Song" and Christmas carols. Refreshments were served to the guests by the third-grade Brownies. Mrs. Frank Manganaro and Mrs. Lawrence Pasquale, troop leaders, together with their assistants, Mrs. Sam Gountanis and Mrs. Charles Larkin, would like to thank the mothers of the Brownies for their help in assisting with the refreshments.

Elks' Cards for the Handicapped Campaign Kickoff Starts First of Year

Don't throw away those old decks of playing cards! Donate them to the Elks' Cards for the Handicapped Campaign that gets under way the first of the year.

Exalted Ruler John F. Murphy announced recently that the Winchester Lodge of Elks, No. 1445, will join with Elks lodges throughout the nation in collecting used but good decks of playing cards for hospitalized veterans and others.

This is the second card collection drive staged by the National Service Commission of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The first, two years ago, produced nearly 500,000 decks of used cards. Most of them went to veterans' hospitals, where card playing is a popular pastime and decks are always in short supply. Some were Brailled for the blind and others went to rehabilitation centers where cards are used to help cerebral palsied children regain manual dexterity.

Judge James T. Hallinan of New York, chairman of the Elks National Service Commission, informed Exalted Ruler Murphy that the need for more cards is again acute. In addition, two new requests for cards have been made to the Commission.

Judge Hallinan said that recreation centers for elderly citizens have a great need for used playing cards, and some collected from the current campaign will go to meet this request. A second request for cards came from the U. S. Information Agency, for use in Peace Corps recreation centers set up in underdeveloped countries. Playing cards, according to the Peace Corps, helps break language barriers and promotes good will.

Exalted Ruler Murphy said that distinctive pick-up stations will be established at convenient locations where the used decks may be deposited. Several of the merchants in Winchester have pledged their support and the facilities of their establishments for the collection. Those who wish to do so may bring or mail their cards to the lodge on Elmwood Avenue.

Murphy emphasized that only complete, unbroken decks could be used, and he pointed out that they should be wrapped or otherwise protected if not in their original boxes.

"We need all the cards we can get," he said. "First call on cards that we collect will be for the Bedford Veterans Hospital and other institutions in the vicinity of Winchester. Surplus cards above our local needs will go into a national pool for distribution as needed.

"I urge every family in the community to clean out used decks of playing cards and turn them in for this drive. It's an easy, practical and inexpensive way to do a great deal of good for a great many people."

Local Patrons To Back Al Capp's January Lecture

Al Capp, the celebrated Boston cartoonist, creator of L'il Abner, the Shmoos, Sadie Hawkins Day, etc., will give his only Boston talk of the year on Friday evening, January 24th, when the Experiment in International Living presents "An Experiment with Al Capp" at 8:30 p.m. at Kresge Auditorium at M.I.T.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Hood, Jr., of 6 Everett Avenue are sponsoring this Experiment evening, and Mrs. Charles S. Luitwieler of 89 Cambridge Street, is the Winchester representative on the community committee already working for its success.

Since L'il Abner, originating in Capp's studio at the foot of Beacon Hill, is published in more than 1,000 newspapers all over the world (even in Turkey, for example) it is appropriate that he should appear for the benefit of a cause that also functions on a world-wide scale. The Experiment in International Living arranges homestays in foreign countries for young Americans, and makes American hospitality available to students from overseas. It is also currently training and/or administering for the government 13 Peace Corps Groups.

K. of C. to Hold New Year's Party

The Winchester Council No. 210, Knights of Columbus, is sponsoring a big New Year's Eve party at the council hall on Mt. Vernon Street on Tuesday, December 31, to welcome 1964. It invites all members and their friends to attend.

Music by Ken Thorpe's Orchestra will be from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. A buffet supper, featuring roast beef, ham and all the trimmings will be served. Capacity will be limited to 200 to insure plenty of room for dancing and fun-making. Favors, horns, etc., will be supplied.

The committee, headed by Al Lawton, has gone all out to insure a good time for all, to get a party together and we'll see you New Year's Eve. Tickets may be procured from Al Lawton or any of the officers, or you may pick them up at the council chambers.

HAPPY NEW YEAR
Thanks for your friendship in the old year! We wish all our customers and friends happiness and peace in 1964.

Children's Medical Center Reports On Winchester Care

More than 65 children from Winchester were among the 50,000 infants and youngsters who received medical care at the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston during the 12 months which ended last September 30, the pediatric medical center has announced.

Dr. Leonard W. Cronkhite, Jr., general director at Children's, said a record number of patients were treated during the year.

Of the 50,000 youngsters cared for at Children's, almost 11,000 were hospitalized for surgery or medical attention. The remainder were treated in one or more of the hospital's 50 out-patient clinics.

The greatest number of patients were in the two to 12-year age span, with the second greatest number in the newborn to two-year-old category. The hospital accepts patients up to 21 years of of age.
